Useful Hints.

To Cure any kind of Ward.—Paint occasionally with butter of antimony.

To Destroy Ants.—Where ants are very troublesome place a bone of meat. They will all collect on it and must then be destroyed by scalding.

Lemon and Orange Tincture.—Never throw away lemon or orange peel. Cut the yellow outside off carefully, and put it into a tightly corked bottle, with enough alcohol to cover it. Let it stand until the alcohol is a bright yellow, then pour it off, bottle it tight, and use it for flavoring when you make rice puddings. Add lemon and alcohol as often as you have it, and you will always have a nice flavoring.

A Cure for Diptheria.—The celebrated Dr. Field, during the ravages of diptheria in England a few years since, used the following remedy: A teaspoonful of flowers of brimstone in a wineglass of water, stirred with the finger rather than a spoon, as sulphur does not readily amalgamate with water; when well mixed use as a gargle and swallow. In extreme cases, where the fungus was too nearly closed to allow gargling, he blew the sulphur through a quill into the throat, and after the fungus had shrunk, then gargled. If the patient cannot gargle, sprinkle the flowers of brimstone on a live coal and let him inhale the fumes. Brimstone kills every species of fungus in man, beast and plant. Dr. Field never lost a patient from diptheria during all his immense practice.

Type Setting in Japan.

It must be no joke to be employed in a Japanese printing office. In our own and most other countries of the world, except China and Japan, the language is written by means of an alphabet of separate letters. Among the Celestials and their next door neighbors, on the other hand, each word has a distinct character. The compositor's difficulties in either instance are obvious almost at a glance. In setting up this note, he has the letters conveniently arranged before him in what is known as the "case." But in Japan, according to an American contemporary a full font of type comprises 50,000 characters, of which 3,000 are in constant use, and for 2,000 more there are frequent calls. Instead of being compactly arrayed before him, the type is disposed about the composing room on racks, and the unfortunate compositor has to wander up and down the room, setting his "copy" and stretching his legs, though he would probably be quite willing to dispense with the greater part of his enforced exercise. It is for the reason that it is impossible to apply the system of single character words to telegraphy, that that inestimable boon to civilization is apparently unavailable to the inhabitants of Japan and China.

Join at Once.

A young sub-lieutenant on sick leave put up at a hotel in Poonah, and while recovering his health lost his heart, proposed to the fair thief, was accepted, and the wedding day was agreed upon. His colonel, however, happend to disapprove of sub-lieutenants marrying, and telegraphed a peremptory "Join at once." The disgusted subaltern handed the unwelcome missive to his lady. She read it, and then with a blush of maiden simplicity, remarked: "I am glad your colonel approves of the match; but what a hurry he is in! I don't think I can be ready so soon, but I'll do my best; because, of course, love, the colonel must be obeyed." "You don't seem to understand he telegraphs, darling," said the dull fellow, "it quite upsets our plans; he says 'Join at once.'" The lady looked up with an arch smile and replied: "It is you, dear, who don't understand it. The colonel says plainly 'join at once.' Of course, he means get married immediately. What else can he possibly mean?" "What else indeed?" exclaimed the enlightened lover, accepting the new reading without demur. So forty-eight hours afterward the colonel received the message: "Your orders are obeyed. We were joined at once."

Two men jostle each other on the street, exchange words, and take to pummeling each other lustily. "Gentlemen, gentlemen," cried a third, rushing between them, "Why do you pound each other thus? Have you no wives at home?"

Eight Persons Burned to Death.

A terrible conflagration occurred the past week at East Liverpool, Ohio, in which eight persons perished. The fire originated in a new building erected last summer. The building was a three story, with basement used as a warehouse for the storage of hay and feed. The second story was occupied by William Sloan's and George Kauffman's families. The third story was used as a warehouse. The flames spread rapidly, originating in the basement, and is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary. The following named persons perished in the flames: Mrs. Wm. Sloan, aged thirty-two years, Lucita Sloan, aged thirteen years, Cyrdel Sloan, aged twelve years, Lizzie Sloan, aged eleven years, Alex Sloan, aged nine years, Pearl Sloan, aged five years, another daughter, aged eighteen months, Wilbur Shields, a brother-in-law of the unfortunate woman. The bodies have all been recovered from the ruins, but are charred beyond recognition. Those of the grown persons being guessed at by their size. All the bodies were found together in the corner of the cellar, directly under the room in which the family slept.

Out of six the occupants of the building only one escaped. William Sloan, husband of Mrs. Sloan, who escaped, started to make his escape, but finding his escape cut off, jumped from second story window, sustaining injuries. Sloan makes the following statement: "I was awakened by the sound of some one striking the house, and thought I smelt lamp oil burning. I hurried to the door that leads to the store and could see that the house was [illegible] in flames. I knew that the fire had got a good headway, and so thought of nothing but saving my wife and children. I wakened them and gathered them around me, making sure that no one was missing, and then told them to follow me through Kauffman's rooms to the stairway. The smoke drove us back, and I rushed to the window, where I heard people shouting for me to jump. I told my wife to jump first, but she refused, and my brother, who was standing with one child in his arms, said he would try and help them out if I would jump out and assist them from below. I jumped, but when I looked back they were hidden by the smoke. Then I went round to the front of the store, but could not get in, and ran on around to the back staircase. I crushed up it and got as far as the out-kitchen, when Kauffman's man grasped me from behind and dragged me out. Some persons put this coat on me, and I knew nothing more until I found myself in this room. I came here," said Mr. Sloan, with tears in his eyes, in answer to further questions, "from Harrison County, in the fall, and opened a drug store. There were better schools here, and I wanted my children to have the best education I could give them, but it is all over now," and he shook his head sorrowfully. "I will go back to Harrison County with their bodies."

Death of Senator Carpenter.

Senator Matt. H. Carpenter, of Wisconsin, died at his residence in Washington City, at 3.30 a. m., February 24. His health had been failing for about two years past. Several times he had been down, with no expectation of recovery. His naturally strong constitution enabled him to rally from these several attacks, but he has been almost a wreck for the past six months. Though his death was caused directly by Bright's disease of the kidneys, there was a general dissolution of the vital energies. A dispatch relating his death, says: "Yesterday afternoon he had improved considerably, and it was expected he might again be able to go abroad. During the night, however, he grew worse, and it was known he could not live. Last Friday he was out in his carriage, and called upon the President and several Departments. He went to bed the next day and never rose again." The funeral services took place at the Senator's late residence. Senator Carpenter was by no means an old man, having been born in Vermont in 1824. Had his health not have failed him he would have been in his intellectual prime, and as conspicuous in the Senate as at any time during his first term in that body, when he almost at once took rank with the foremost leaders on the Republican side. Mr. Carpenter spent two years at West Point (1843-44—studied law in the office of Rufus Choate, and on being admitted to the bar, removed to Milwaukee, Wisconsin, which became his permanent home. He was for several years a District Attorney for the State, and while giving close attention to his profession, did not altogether neglect politics. He was elected to the Senate in 1869, serving during that term in the committees on the Judiciary, Patents, and Revision of the Laws, and also as President pro tem. of the Senate. In the present Senate he held places in the committees on Foreign Relations and the Judiciary—in the latter acting with Edmunds and Conkling as the Republican representatives. His health, however, has been such as to prevent him taking an active part in the labors of either committee. Had he served his term (out) he would have expired in 1885.

A Walking Pestilence.

A correspondent writing from Shiloh, New Jersey, says: "This entire section of the State is excited over the appearance of a man broken out with smallpox. His name is Lewis Shepard, and he has visited nearly all the towns between Camden and Vineland. It is said he was in the hands of a physician in Camden who forbid him leaving his room where he was confined. It is supposed that the disease made him delirious, for about a week ago he left the house unperceived, and took the train for Bridgeton. He walked around the streets of that city awhile, and then suddenly disappeared. He has been noticed by a number of persons, but none of them seem to have suspected that he had the smallpox. Where he went at once from Bridgeton is not known, but he was seen in several places by farmers in the county. He arrived in this village several days ago, and remained for five twenty-four hours. He walked all around, going into several stores and the postoffice. He remained in the postoffice in the evening while the mail was being distributed, and stood in the midst of quite a crowd of citizens who are accustomed to gather there at that time. His wild look and the offensive blotches on his face led some one to suggest in fun that he might be broken out with the dread disease. A little farther scrutiny led observers to believe he really was a victim of the smallpox, and a general alarm was given. Everybody avoided him as far as possible, and the next day he left. He visited farm houses between here and Vineland, asking questions incoherently, and repelling every one by his loathsome appearance. On his arrival in Vineland he created a panic. The news of his travels had already reached this city, and together with the report of the numerous cases at Egg Harbor had frightened the residents to an alarming extent. A general alarm was given on his arrival, and it is said many people shut themselves up. He is a terror to every community he visits, and is undoubtedly spreading the disease. All sorts of expedients to stop him and put him in quarantine are suggested, but men are yet to be found who are willing to go near him. Word has been sent to Delaware of his probable approach."

REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.

The Republican State Convention for the nomination of candidates for the Supreme Court and two Regents was held at Lansing on the 23d ult.—The convention was largely attended, the business was quickly dispatched and a good ticket placed in nomination.

Judge Marston was re-nominated for Justice of the Supreme Court.

James F. Joy, of Detroit, and Austin Blair, of Jackson, were nominated for Regents of the University. The following resolutions were passed, after which the convention adjourned:

Resolved, That we congratulate the people of the republic and the state upon the signal victory of the Republican party in the campaign of 1880, and we pledge to the administration of Gen. Garfield the hearty support of the Republicans of Michigan in carrying out the principles and policy of the party which elected him.

Resolved, That we commend to the voters of this state the candidates nominated by this convention as in every way worthy of the suffrage of the people, and we invoke for them the earnest and harmonious support of the party and the people as the means of continuing our eminent judiciary and brilliant university.

Resolved, That the people in all republican forms of government have delegated to the legislature the power to make the laws, to the executive the power of enforcing the laws, to the judiciary the right of interpreting the laws, but they have reserved to themselves exclusively the right and power of making, altering or amending their constitution, the fundamental law.

Resolved, That, when the people, by petition, manifest a desire to alter or amend the constitution, their wishes should receive that consideration to which they are entitled as coming from the source of all political power.

ROAMING ROBERT.

What the Hawkeye man says about Tecumseh.

The railway station at Tecumseh is placed midway between that city and Clinton. The original intention was to use the station for both towns, but the people of Clinton were proud and insisted on having a depot of their own. So when you get off the cars at Tecumseh you are not at Tecumseh, but out in the country somewhere in the next county. But the town is very pretty, contains upwards of three thousand inhabitants, has good water power, and a rich country to support the business of the town. There are some very large mills here, two of which export every barrel of flour they make, the larger of these two having a capacity of eight hundred barrels of flour per day, all of which is sent to Ireland. The natives of Tecumseh are busy, prosperous people, but they lack the intellectual tastes and developement of their more literary and better educated neighbors of Clinton, and the æsthetic longings of Tecumseh are easily satisfied with the circus and the minstrel show.

The best and liveliest feature of Tecumseh is the HERALD. It is a model weekly journal, and the Stacy's have one of the best arranged and best appointed newspaper and printing offices in the state of Michigan. There is enough enterprise and go-ahead and general ability in the HERALD office to stock up half a dozen dailies.

We have seen it stated that the town of Somers, Connecticut, takes upon itself the responsibility of all burials within its limits, without regard to the circumstances of the person to be buried. Rich and poor, high and low, are treated alike in the matter, and for $4, sexton, hearse, and grave are supplied to all alike; so that for twenty years or more every burial in the town has been performed by the town at that cost to those able to pay.

In a debate on the budget in the German reichstag, Herr Richter declared that Bismarck was drawing everything more and more under his personal direction.—The chancellor replied that no country could look forward to the future with such calm security as Germany.

While alighting from his carriage, in London, Mr. Gladstone fell, cutting his head severely by striking on the step of the vehicle. Traffic in Downing street was stopped, that the premier might not be disturbed. The latest advices report him able to attend to government business.

General Colley's forces have suffered another crushing defeat at the hands of the Boers. The engagement took place at Spitzkop, a high position near Laingsnek, which the British had occupied, and the fighting was desperate. The Boers charged up hill four times, and were about to abandon their effort to dislodge the British when the latter were forced to retire because their ammunition had not been taken to the extreme summit. There were heavy losses on both sides, but only 100 British escaped. General Colley is reported killed

The greatest eel-pond in America is on the farm of James N. Wells, in the town of Riverhead, Mass. It covers five acres, and is now so full of eels that they can be raked out with a garden rake. Two years ago Mr. Wells put 2,000 dozen of eels into the pond, intending to have them undisturbed for five years. These have increased to millions. They are fed regularly every third day on "horse feet," a peculiar shell-fish. The eels know when they are to be fed, and the stroke of Mr. Well's whip against his wagon calls thousands of them up to dinner, although anyone else may pound away all day without any effect. One of these shell-fish, fastened to a strong cord and thrown into the water, may be drawn out in a few minutes with hundreds of eels clinging to it.

THE KITCHEN.—Few things tend so much to please and comfort, make all laboring for the family contented and comfortable, as a bright, pleasant, well-furnished kitchen. In no other room in the house are sunlight and fresh, pure air so indispensable as in the room where some of the most important work must be done. A long, narrow, dark kitchen is an abomination. Ranges or cook stoves should not be placed opposite a door or window. A good ventilation is important over a range or cook stove, by which the steam and disagreeable odors from cooking can be carried off without pervading the house. Three large windows are always desirable, and for a very large kitchen four would be better.

A real mule was one of the attractions in the play of "The Forty Thieves," as produced in Virginia city, Nev. The result is described by the Chronicle as follows: "No sooner had Ali come out of the cave with his bags of wealth, and attempted to put them on the back of the beast, than he began his part of the performance. He let fly with his heels, kicked the shavings (the supposed riches) out of the bags, kicked down the cavern; kicked down the whole forest; kicked down the wings; kicked the end of the bass-viol, leaning against the stage, to pieces; smashed the footlights and finally doubled up Ali by planting both feet in the pit of his stomach. A rope was fastened around him and he was dragged off by the united strength of the company.

He had hoisted in several before he hoped into the restaurant and asked for some bran'ny.

"Brandy?" said the proprietor; "you don't want any more brandy. Go out and take a walk around the Champs Elysees. You've been soaking like a sponge."

"Tha'sh a ri'," said the customer; "you can fire me out if you want to, but you've got no business to insult me."

"I didn't insult you."

"You did. Said I soaked like a sponge. A sponge only drinks water—mean, miserable, mere water. Said I drank like a sponge." (Bursts into tears and goes out into the silent friendly night.)

"Give me neither poverty nor riches," said Agar: and this will ever be the prayer of the wise. Our incomes should be like our shoes, if too small they will gall and pinch us, but if too large, they will cause us to stumble and to trip. Wealth after all is a relative thing, since he that has little and wants less, is richer than he that has much and wants more. True contentment depends not upon what we have; a tub was large enough for Diogenes, but a world was too small for Alexander.

"Fifty years hence," said an old infidel, "people will wonder that there should ever have been a discussion about a place of future punishment." "Yes," responded a clergyman, "people who are now fifty years old will then no doubt wonder that there should have been any need of discussing it."

ESTATE OF TILTON MINOR.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the city of Adrian on Thursday, the 3d day of March, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one.

Present Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Charles M. Tilton, Minor.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of John L. Dailey, alleging among other things that he and said minor reside without this State, to wit: at the city of Denver, in the county of Arapahoe in the State of Colorado; that said minor is entitled to property in said county of Lenawee, and on producing to this court in the county in which such property or the principal part thereof is situated a full and complete transcript from the records of the county court of the county of Arapahoe in the State of Colorado, duly exemplified and authenticated, showing that he has been appointed guardian of said ward, and that he has given a bond and security in said State of Colorado in double the value of the property of said ward, and showing that he still remains such guardian, and further, alleging that said property is now in the possession and under the control of Edwin B. Wood, and that a removal of the property of said ward will not conflict with the terms and limitation attending the right by which said ward owns the same nor be nor become prejudicial to his interest therein, and praying that this court issue to petitioner letters or a certificate of guardianship of the estate of said ward, authorizing said petitioner to demand, sue for and recover any such property and remove the same to the place of residence of himself and said ward, and directing any guardian, executor or administrator residing in the State of Michigan having possession of any of said property to deliver the same to said petitioner.

Thereupon it is ordered, That Monday, the 28th day of March, A.D. 1881, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the next-of-kin of said ward, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing. AROUND THE COUNTY.

BROOKLYN.

Brooklyn has renewed its interest in temperance and this time it has began in the pulpit, a place that is not wholly acceptable. The clergy manifest a disposition not to wear a muzzle and will no doubt see more of the world if they continue to raise cain by asking, "Am I my brother's keeper?" and answering the query with a left-handed yes. Rev. Lemen, of Hillsdale, lectured in All-Saints church, on Sunday evening, and Mr. Pryce and his Presbyterian congregation omitted their own service and came to hear him. It was a discourse not only against dram drinking but the prolific causes of the habit. As he did not impute blame to any one, not even a barroom clerk, it was extremely unsatisfactory to me. I always feel aggrieved when I am obliged to decide just where my pet weakness is fractured.

The counter excitement is the new railroad, and no doubt if its success depended only on the amount of money to be raised here it would be assured.

General good wishes are this time supported by open pocket books, and so unanimous is public sentiment over the new grade that our only variety is the different attitudes people assume on the sidewalk while talking about it.

I saw two gentlemen of unusually staid habits turn a corner and while one threw up his arms and let his long overcoat round-out like a little girl's dress when she whirls a cheese; the other crossed his feet, made himself like a letter X, unwound into an &c., and both went on just the same as if nothing had marred their meditation over the morning sermon. I am not telling this to boast of their superior activity, but to show how Deacons can act on Sunday without infringing propriety because of the weather.

Measles, mumps, and all such luxuries peculiar to our climate are plenty, and there is a reasonable prospect of our being sufficiently afflicted through the Lenten season without borrowing trouble.

PEARLIE.

RIDGEWAY.

This village and Britton station will soon be about as effectually separated as was Lazarus and the rich man.

Robert Frazer, of Ann Arbor, is expected to deliver a temperance address in this village in the near future.

Notices of the coming election are posted and we suppose the slate makers are at work.

The horse tamer has come and gone, but during his short stay he created lots of fun for the boys. After the usual street show and harangue, a class was organized and a colt belonging to Chas. Pocklington brought to be handled by the Professor. In about five minutes the air seemed to be filled with flying hoofs and the shower increased until everybody was compelled to seek refuge, and the colt became boss of the ranche, giving now and then a kick just to keep the crowd quiet. As soon as the colt could be got out of the way the "class," the Prof.(?) paid the forfeit of five dollars, and the class had their money returned. That horse tamer will probably give this village a wide berth hereafter.

Mrs. Warren Jones nee Velina Hall was made the recipient of a beautiful silver ice pitcher and card receiver, from the infant class of the M. E. S.S. on Tuesday evening. The presentation was made by little Susie Field, in a three minute address which furnished no small part of the evening's entertainment. Supper was served, songs sung, &c. The company assembled in the S. S. room, and when everything was ready Mrs. J. was sent for, and the first intimation she had of what was going on was the presentation.

ADDISON.

A long list of mump stricken villagers this week.

Monday's sunshine came near closing out the sleighing in town; parties from the country say it is better some miles out, however.

Numerous farmers of this section have yet to finish husking corn.

Mr. H. Boley, a former resident of this place was shaking hands with friends in town one day last week.

Mr. Frank Millis, an old Addison boy, is now principal of the High School at Dryden, Mich., with three associate teachers under him.

Rev. Wm. Charles, of Tecumseh, and others, are conducting nightly religious revival meetings at the M. E. church.

TEMPERANCE REFORM AS WE SEE IT.

EDITOR HERALD:

Will you be kind enough to grant us space in your paper for the expression of our views on this temperance question.

Members of the Reform Club and of the temperance societies here have one and all had their say, and we presume most of them have said it over so often that it has become an old story to them. And if we can now say something that will "stir them all up a bit," doubtless good will come of it, even though we may not get a great name by appearing here in print. Indeed, we hardly expect it, since we have chosen to say a few unpopular things on a very popular subject.

Intending to make a deep stir, we start out with the words, "Physician heal thyself." And that our readers may not be in doubt as to what we are coming at, we make the assertion that under the above head may be classed a large majority of the ardent temperance workers in our town and in every other town in our land.

In our opinion there is no class of men working for a reform in anything whatsoever to whom the words "Physician heal thyself" so aptly and so correctly apply as to our gentlemen temperance friends.

With temperance people generally the fight is against the liquor traffic alone. They draw for us many a pitiful picture of suffering and want as the direct results of traffic in spirituous liquors. These pictures are faithfully drawn we admit, but your artists mistake a little the source from which they obtain their material, which we shall, in the meantime endeavor to show you.

Again temperance workers are in the habit of appealing to a certain class of good sober business men, who neither say nor do anything particular against the liquor traffic. They tell them they are the stumbling blocks, and that if they (these business men) would only join the temperance movement and cease their taking a glass of beer occasionally, why reform would make a full clean sweep. And that hard times, hunger and want would join hands with intempeaance and together march from our midst, while sweet peace and glorious prosperity would smile upon every household.

We here lay our hand on your shoulder and say: "That if the liquor traffic were the only expensive degrading nuisance in our country, then we could quite agree with you. But it is not, and we will now proceed to consider other stumbling blocks which for some reason or other are very insignificant matters even to ardent temperance workers.

During temperance meetings and from noted speakers in the field, we have listened to language like the following: "A man is unworthy the name of a man if he drinks, though ever so little," and the declaration was loudly applauded by—we will see. But right here we wish it distinctly understood that we are not trying to excuse even the very moderate drinker. Far from it. We simply wish to examine these righteous men who judge and denounce their fellow men in so strong terms. And for this purpose we give you a picture or two from life. Some time ago we attended a temperance lecture in the opera house, on Sabbath afternoon. Prior to the commencement of the exercises of the occasion, our eyes wandering over the audience fell on several individuals whom we could not help looking at a second time. One of these particularly who occupied a seat just in front of us. The same one being a prominent member of the Reform Club. This gentleman was dressed very neatly so far as cloth and fit were concerned. His suit was certainly comparatively new, but my reader his clothes were more or less stained from one end to the other with—not with whiskey but with tobacco. The foul and filthy saliva that had undoubtedly trickled down the stem of a nasty, filthy (sweet brier) pipe, while he perhaps lying back "taking his ease," and thinking only of "crumbs of comfort," or of his poor deluded neighbor who was perhaps at that moment sipping a glass of wine or beer.

We frequently see temperance men sucking at these nasty, poisonous pipes, and a large majority of them must have almost constant pulls at the weed in some shape or other, and we have seen some of these in the shameful ease-taking attitudes above referred to, in their places of business too.

At most any hour of the day, or any day in the week we may see some of them on our streets, head thrown back, cigar or pipe in the mouth, and all around them a filthy pool of their own make. And should a man coming out of a saloon pass by one of these, why he's sure to put on an air of superiority and puff away the harder.

But we hear them say, "Tobacco does not rob our pockets, lay waste our happy homes and lead our sons, husbands and fathers down into the gutter." "No, it don't.

Again we say, hold on a moment, we've something else yet to say. We know we've aimed a blow at that which is very dear to you; but if we can show you that your idol is a filthy beast, going hand in hand with the liquor trafic, and that this filthy beast has for years been winding his poisonous slimy coils around your boys of tender age, why then we shall expect you to stand up in your manhood and say, "Brethren our platform is too narrow—our pledge covers only one-half the ground—we wade knee deep in our own filth and cry reform, to our neighbor who is in the same current as ourselves, only a little deeper in."

Temperance workers cite us to the fact that our boys and our young men are more generally addicted to the habit of drinking than they were years ago. They commence earlier in life, we admit that such is the case. But let us make a companion statement please.

Our boys commence earlier and are more generally addicted to the habit of using tobacco than they were years ago.

Have not the above statements an important connection, my readers? Dare any of you shut your eyes to the fact that tampering with the strong poisonous weed tobacco on the part of our boys is not the cause of their wanting a stimulating drink as soon as they can get it? We have in our mind now some half a dozen young men whom we well knew five or six years ago. They were then boys of from 13 to 15 years of age: We think of them now because we used to see them so often, lounging under some shade tree and passing around the "pipe of peace." And we have heard from the lips of some of them how deathly sick they were the first few times they tried to be a man. (?) Yes, we think of them now because without a single exception they drink as well as smoke and chew, and the majority of them we have seen drink more than once. Here we wish you to pause and think for a moment. Weigh well our words when we tell you that the habit you are trying to cure the drunkard of to-day, is the very same habit these boys were forming 5 years ago when we first saw them passing the pipe. The very same habit your boys of 8 and 10 years of age are forming now when we see them chewing and smoking tobacco on our streets. Yes, it's worthy of note my friends that our boys become slaves to tobacco ere they care anything for drink. And very few of them ever drink, who do not learn the use of tobacco.

Much is said about the stench and sickening odors of the saloon. It's true they are disgusting in the extreme when there has been an active trade at the bar for some hours in succession. But what of the smoking room, the smoking car after an active trade of some hours in succession? Which is the nastiest, filthiest, most disgusting place of the two, the smoking or the drinking room.

There is much said about the expensive habit of drinking. It is very expensive. And now we think about it 25 or 50 cts. per day for cigars and chewing tobacco is certainly a very small item. And yet, many poor men who have families to support make on an average, little more than that the year around. Perhaps we should not speak of such small matters here, and yet it appears to us that when we turn economists it is hardly to our credit to pass unnoticed even so small an item as the very expensive habit of using tobacco.

Now we do not claim that the habit of using tobacco is as bad as the habit of drinking. We think them inseparable. However we do claim that if the habit of drinking is a disgrace, a curse to our race, and should be swept from our beautiful land, that the poisonous, filthy, expensive habit of using tobacco should be shackled also, and hand in hand with its companion march into eternal exile. And we do say that the man who stands with pipe or cigar in his mouth, tapping at the saloon door and entreating or demanding reform, has not the true principal of reform in himself.

It's no excuse to say that, we can first deal with one at a time, and by and by friend we will attend to tobacco. No, for if a man in the integrity of his heart says, I will be a man, I will no longer be a slave to any foul filthy or destructive habit, why then he means to be a whole man, or master of himself. Otherwise he reserves part of his slavery, clings to his chains made dear to him from long use, like Byron's prisoner of Chilon.

This is plain talk, but the subject demands plain talk. We have the unpopular side of the question; but we are right and do not despair, neither do we fear and tremble.

We have long looked for some one to come to the front and offer a pledge of reform that will cover the whole ground. We believe in thorough work. It would be poor policy indeed to execute the murderer, and let his accomplice go free. If you did you'd soon have another subject for the hangman.

But for your encouragement we will say before laying aside our pen. We do not think you strain at the gnat, and swallow the camel, but we do think you strain at the camel and then, shutting your eyes, you swallow something very near it in size. We will not name the animal, but we think we can classify it for you: "Herbivorous," because it chews the cud.

Blissfield Advance: A horse of Alva Parker's accidentally fell into the well in the barn Wednesday morning, and John Mitchell, always ready to lend a helping hand, was engaged with all his might and main in pulling the animal out, when a large dog, belonging to J. O'Row, just as he was giving an extra pull, took him by the seat of his trousers with such a savage onslaught that John gave a spring which landed him a rod out of the reach of the ferocious beast. John went home to change his trousers for a pair that hadn't the seat torn out, and now swears he'll never help pull another horse out of a well or any other place.

TO A LITTLE DAUGHTER.

Could thy life, a pleasure boat,
Ever by thy green banks float,
Gliding gently on the stream,
I would ne'er of danger dream.

But, my child, the silent tide
Bears thee to the ocean wide;
And when there, oh, who can tell
How the waves may rage and swell?

With no anxious parent near,
Who the tossing bark will steer?
Driving fast before the gale,
Who will watch and furl the sail?

Here's the pilot, here's the friend
God has given thy voyage to tend.
Trust it, child, with all thy heart.
Never, never from it part.

This, an angel at the helm,
Bids the waves will not o'erwhelm.
This, an angel at thy side,
Hears the howling surge may ride.

Then I will not ask to know
How the tide of years shall flow,
Smooth, I'll pray, and yet if rough,
So God be with thee, 'tis enough.

PRESIDENT GARFIELD INAUGURATED.

The Full Text of the Inaugural Address —The Policy of the New Administration Clearly Outlined.

FELLOW CITIZENS—We stand today upon an eminence which overlooks a hundred years of national life, a century full only crowded with perils, but crowded with the triumphs of liberty and love. Before continuing our onward march, let us pause on this height, for a moment, to strengthen our faith and renew our hope by a glance at the pathway along which our people have traveled. It is now three days more than a hundred years since the adoption of the first written constitution of the U. S., the articles of confederation and perpetual union. The new republic was then beset with danger on every hand. It had not conquered a place in the family of nations. The decisive battle of the war for independence, whose centennial anniversary will soon be gratefully celebrated at Yorktown, had not yet been fought. The colonists were struggling, not only against the armies of Great Britain, but against the settled opinions of mankind, for the world did not believe that the supreme authority of government could be safely entrusted to the guardianship of the people themselves. We cannot over-estimate the fervent love of liberty, the intelligent courage, and the saving common sense with which our fathers made the great experiment of self-government. When they found after a short time, that the confederacy of states was too weak to meet the necessities of a vigorous and expanding republic, they boldly set it aside, and in its stead established a National Union, founded directly upon the will of the people, endowed with future powers of self preservation, and with ample authority for the accomplishment of its great objects. Under this constitution, the boundaries of freedom have been enlarged, the foundation of order and peace have been strengthened, and the growth in all the better elements of national life has vindicated the wisdom of the founders, and given new hope to their descendants. Under this constitution, our people, long ago, made themselves safe against danger from without, and secured for their mariners and flag an equality of rights on all the seas. Under this constitution twenty-five states have been added to the union, with constitutions and laws framed and enforced by their own citizens, to secure the manifold blessings of local and self-government. The jurisdiction of this constitution now covers an area fifty times greater than that of the original thirteen states, and the population is twenty times greater than that of 1780. The supreme trial of the constitution came at last under the tremendous pressure of a civil war. We ourselves have witnessed the union emerge from the blood and fire of that conflict purified and made stronger for all the beneficent purposes of good government.—And now, at the close of this first century of growth, with the inspirations of its history in their hearts, our people have lately reviewed the condition of the Nation, passed judgment upon the conduct and opinions of the political parties, and have registered their will concerning the future administration of the government. To interpret and to execute that will in accordance with the constitution, is the paramount duty of the executive. Even from this brief review, it is manifest that the Nation is resolutely facing to the front, resolved to employ its best energies in developing the great possibilities of the future, sacredly preserving whatever has been gained to liberty and good government during the century. Our people are determined to leave behind them all those bitter controversies concerning things which have been irrevocably settled, and further discussions of which can only stir up strife and delay on our onward march. The supremacy of the nation, and its laws should be no longer the subject of debate. That discussion, which for half a century threatened the existence of the union, was closed at last in the high courts of war, by a decree from which there is no appeal, that the constitution and laws made in pursuance thereof, shall continue to be the supreme law of the land, binding alike upon the states and the people. This decree does not disturb the autonomy of the states, nor interfere with any of their necessary rules of local self-government; but it does fix and establish the permanent supremacy of the union. The will of the Nation, speaking with the voice of battle, and through the amended constitution, has fulfilled the great promise of 1776, by proclaiming liberty throughout the land to all the inhabitants thereof. The elevation of the negro race from slavery to the full rights of citizenship, is the most important political change we have known, since the adoption of the constitution of 1787. No thoughtful man can fail to appreciate its beneficial effect upon our institutions and people. It has freed us from the perpetual danger of war and dissolution. It has added immensely to moral and industrial force of our people. It has liberated the master, as well as the slave, from a relation which wronged and enfeebled both. It has surrendered to their own guardianship the manhood of more than five million people, and has inspired each one of them with a career of freedom and usefulness. It has given a new inspiration to the power of self-help in both races, by making labor more honorable to one and more necessary to the other. The influence of this force will grow greater, and bear richer fruit with the coming years. No doubt the great change has caused a serious disturbance to our southern community. This is to be deplored, though it was unavoidable; but those who resisted the change should remember that under our institutions there was no middle ground for the negro race between slavery and equal citizenship; there can be no permanent disfranchised peasantry in the United States; freedom can never yield its fullness of blessings as long as the law or its administration places the smallest obstacle in the pathway of any virtuous citizen. The emancipated race has already made remarkable progress, with the unquestioning development of the union, with a patience and gentleness not born of fear. They have followed the light as God gave them to see the light. They are rapidly laying the material foundation of self-support, widening the circle of intelligence, and beginning to enjoy the blessings that gather under the homes of the industrious poor. They deserve the generous encouragement of all good men. So far as my authority can lawfully extend, they shall enjoy the full and equal protection of the constitution and laws. The free enjoyment of equal suffrage, is still in question, and a frank statement of the issue may aid its solution: It is alleged that in many communities, negro citizens are practically denied freedom of the ballot. Insofar as the truth of this allegation is admitted, it is answered that in many places honest local government is impossible, if the mass of uneducated negroes are allowed to vote. These are grave allegations. So far as the latter is true, it is only a palliation that can be offered for opposing the freedom of the ballot. Bad local government is certainly a great evil, which ought to be prevented, but to violate the freedom and sanctity of the suffrage, is more than an evil. It is a crime, which if persisted in will destroy the government itself. Suicide is not a remedy. If in other lands it be high treason to compass the death of a king, it should be counted no less a crime here to strangle our sovereign power, and stifle its voice. It has been said that unsettled questions have no pity for the repose of nations. It should be said, with the utmost emphasis, that this question of suffrage will never give repose or safety to the states, or to the Nation, until each, within its own jurisdiction, makes and keeps the ballot free and pure, by the strong sanctions of law. But the danger which arises from ignorance in the voters cannot be denied. It covers a field far wider than that of negro suffrage and the present condition of that race. It is a danger that lurks and hides in the sources and fountains of power in every state. We have no standard by which to measure the disaster that may be brought upon us by ignorance and vice in the citizens, when joined to corruption and fraud in the suffrage. The voters of the union, who make and unmake constitutions, and upon whose wills hang the destiny of our governments, can transmit their supreme authority to no successor, save the coming generation of voters who are the sole heirs of sovereign power. If that generation comes to its inheritance blinded by ignorance, and corrupted by vice, the fall of the republic will be certain and remedyless. The census has already sounded the alarm in the appalling figures which mark how dangerously high the tide of illiteracy has arisen among our voters and their children. To the south the question is of supreme importance. But the responsibility for the existence of slavery did not rest upon the south alone. The nation itself is responsible for the extension of the suffrage, and is under special obligations to aid in removing the illiteracy which it has added to the voting population. For the north and south alike there is but one remedy. All the constitutional power of the nation and of the states, and all the volunteer forces of the people, should be summoned to meet this danger, by the saving influence of universal education. It is the high privilege and sacred duty of those now living to educate their successors and fit them by intelligence and virtue to the inheritance which awaits them. In this beneficent work sections and races should be forgotten, and partisanship should be unknown. Let our people find a new meaning in the divine oracle which declares that "a little child shall lead them," for our little children will soon control the destinies of this republic. My countrymen, we do not now differ in our judgment concerning the controversies of past generations, and fifty years hence our children will not be divided in their opinions concerning our controversies. They will surely bless their fathers, and their fathers' God, that this union was preserved, that slavery was overthrown, and that both races were made equal before the law. We may advance or we may retard, but we can not prevent the final reconciliation. Is it not possible for us now to make a truce with time, by anticipating and accepting its inevitable verdict. Enterprises of the highest importance to our moral and material wellbeing invite us, and offer ample scope for the employment of our best powers. Let all our people, leaving behind them the battle fields of dead issues, move forward, and in the strength of liberty and a restored union, win grander victories of peace. The prosperity which now prevails, is without a parallel in our history. Fruitful seasons have done much to secure it, but they have not done all. The preservation of the public credit, and the resumption of specie payments, so successfully allied by the administration of my predecessors, has enabled our people to secure the blessings the seasons brought. By the experience of commercial nations in all ages, it has been found that gold and silver afford the only safe foundation for a monetary system. Confusion has recently been created by variations in the relative value of the two metals, but I confidently believe that arrangements can be made between the leading commercial nations, which will secure the general use of both metals. Congress should provide that the compulsory coinage of silver now required by law, may not disturb our monetary system by driving either metal out of circulation. If possible such adjustment should be made that the purchasing power of every coined dollar will be equal to its debt-paying power in all the markets of the world. The chief duty of the national government in connection with the currency of the country, is to coin and declare its value. Grave doubts have been entertained whether Congress is authorized by the constitution to make any form of paper money a legal tender. The present issue of United States notes has been obtained by the necessities of war, but such paper should depend for its value and currency upon its convenience in use, and its prompt redemption in coin at the will of the holder, and not upon its compulsory circulation. These notes are not money, but promises to pay money. If the holders demand it, the promises should be kept. The refunding of the national debt, at a lower rate of interest should be accomplished without compelling the withdrawal of national bank notes, and thus disturb the business of the country. I venture to refer to the position I have occupied on the financial question during my long service in congress, and to say that time and experience have strengthened the opinions I have so often expressed on those subjects. The finances of the government shall suffer no detriment which it may be possible for my administration to prevent. The interests of agriculture deserve more attention from the government than they have yet received. The farms of the United States afford homes and employment for more than one-half of our people, and furnish much the larger part of all our exports. As the government lights our coasts, for the protection of mariners, and the benefit of our commerce, so it should give to the tillers of the soil the lights of practical sense and experience. Our manufacturers are rapidly making us industrially independent, and are opening to capital and labor new and profitable fields of employment. This steady and healthy growth should still be maintained. Our facilities for transportation should be promoted by the continued improvement of our harbors, and the great interior waterways, and by the increase of our tonnage on the ocean. The development of the world's commerce has led to an urgent demand for shortening the great sea voyage around Cape Horn, by constructing ship canals or railways across the isthmus which unites the two continents. Various plans to this end have been suggested, and will need consideration, but none of them are sufficiently matured to warrant the U. S. in extending pecuniary aid. The subject is one which will immediately engage the attention of the government, with a view to thorough protection to American interests. We will urge no narrow policy, nor seek peculiar or exclusive privileges in any commercial route, but in the language of my predecessors, I believe it to be the right and duty of the U. S. "to assert and maintain such supervision and authority over any inter-oceanic canal across the isthmus that connects North and South America, as will protect our national interests." The constitution guarantees absolute religious freedom, and congress is prohibited from making any law respecting the establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof. The territories of the United States are subject to the direct legislative authority of congress, and hence the general government is responsible for any violation of the constitution in any of them. It is therefore a reproach to the government that in the most populous of the territories a constitutional guarantee is not enjoyed by the people, and the authority of congress is set at naught. The Mormon church not only offends the moral sense of mankind, by sanctioning polygamy, but prevents the administration of justice through the ordinary instrumentalities of the law. In my judgment it is the duty of congress, while respecting to the uttermost the conscientious convictions and religious scruples of every citizen, to prohibit within its jurisdiction all criminal practices, especially of that class which destroy the family relations, and endanger social order. Nor can any ecclesiastical organization be safely permitted to usurp in the smallest degree the functions and powers of the national government. The civil service can never be placed on a satisfactory basis until it is regulated by law, for the good of the service itself, for the protection of those who are entrusted with the appointing power against the waste of time, and the obstruction to public business caused by the inordinate pressure for place, and for the protection of incumbents against intrigue and wrong. I shall, at a proper time, ask congress to fix the tenure of minor offices of the several executive departments, and prescribe grounds upon which removals shall be made during the terms for which the incumbents have been appointed. Finally, acting always within the authority and limitations of the constitution, invading neither the rights of the states nor the reserved rights of the people. It will be the purpose of my administration to maintain authority and in all places within its jurisdiction to enforce obedience to all the laws of the union, in the interest of the people, to demand a rigid economy in all the expenditures of the government, and to require the honest and faithful service of all executive officers, remembering that the offices were created not for the benefit of the incumbents or their supporters, but for the service of the government. And now, fellow citizens, I am about to assume the great trust which you have committed to my hands. I appeal to you for that earnest and thoughtful support which makes this government in fact, as it is in law, a government of the people. I shall greatly rely upon the wisdom and patriotism of congress, and of those who may share with me the responsibilities and duties of the administration; and above all, upon our efforts to promote the welfare of this great people and their government, I reverently invoke the support and blessings of Almighty God.

Is there not some reason for this sharp saying of a very able German writer: "In continuous thinking, progressing without pause or digression, the ancients, taken as a whole, were stronger than we are; their orators prove this; the weakly constitution of our modern oratory—which we seek in vain to clothe in beautiful drapery—arises principally from our faint-hearted[illegible] s in constant and severe thinking."

Man's Age.

Few men die of old age. Almost all die of disappointment, passion, mental or bodily toil, or accident. Passion kills men sometimes, even suddenly. The common expression, choked with passion, has little exaggeration in it; for even though not suddenly fatal, strong passions shorten life.

Strong-bodied men often die young; weak men live longer than the strong; for the strong use their strength and the weak have none to use. The latter take care of themselves, the former do not. As it is with the body, so it is with the mind and temper.

The strong are apt to break, or like the candle, to run out; the weak burn out. The inferior animals, which live in general, regular and temperate lives, have generally their prescribed number of years. The horse lives twenty-five years; the ox fifteen or twenty; the lion about twenty; the dog ten or twelve; the rabbit eight; the Guinea pig six or seven years.

These numbers all bear a similar proportion to the time the animal takes to grow its full size. But man, of the animals, is one that seldom comes up to this average. He ought to live a hundred years, according to this physiological law, as five times twenty are one hundred; but instead of that he scarcely reaches, on the average, four times his growing period; the cat six times, and the rabbit eight times this standard of measurement. The reason is obvious—man is not only the most irregular and the most intemperate, but the most laborious and hard working of all animals; and there is reason to believe, though we cannot tell what an animal secretly feels, that more than any other animal, man cherishes wrath to keep warm, and consumes himself with the fire of his own secret reflections.

TO THE AFFLICTED.

Since the introduction of Kellogg's Columbian Oil it has made more permanent cures and given better satisfaction on Kidney complaints and Rheumatism than any known remedy. Its continued series of wonderful cures in all climates has made it known as a safe and reliable agent to employ against all aches and pains, which are the forerunners of more serious disorders. It acts speedily and surely, always relieving suffering and often saving life. The protection it affords by its timely use on Rheumatism, kidney affection, and all aches and pains, wounds, cramping pains, cholera morbus, diarrhœa, coughs, colds, catarrh, and disorders among children, makes it an invaluable remedy to be kept always on hand in every home. No person can afford to be without it, and those who have once used it never will. It is absolutely certain in its remedial effects and will always cure when cures are possible. Call at C. A. Wright & Co's. and get a memorandum book giving more full details of the curative properties of this wonderful medicine.

Misspent Evenings.

The boy who spends an hour each evening lounging idly on street corners wastes in a year three hundred and sixty-five precious hours which, if applied to study, would familiarize him with the rudiments of almost any science. If in addition to wasting an hour each evening he spends ten cents for cigars, which is usually the case, the amount thus worse than wasted would pay for ten of the leading periodicals of the country. Boys, think of these things. Think how much money your are wasting, for what? The gratification afforded by the lounge on the corner or the cigar is not only temporary but positively hurtful. You cannot indulge in them without seriously injuring yourself. You acquire idle and wasteful habits, which will cling to you with each succeeding year. You may in after life shake them off, but the probabilities are that the habit thus formed in early life will remain with you to your dying day. Be warned then, in time, and resolve that as the hour spent in idleness is gone forever, you will improve each passing one and thereby fit yourself for usefulness and happiness.

Man's Noblest Work.

This is an age of great works and wonderful inventions. Steam, electricity, water, air, all are made to serve man, but unquestionably the greatest inventions are those which preserve man's health and prolong his life, and among the greatest of these is Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Its effects are truly wonderful and hundreds are happy today, who looked forward to an early grave. For Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, loss of voice, Hay Fever, Hoarseness, Croup, or any affection whatever of the Throat, Chest or Lungs, Dr. King's New Discovery will positively cure. We can cheerfully recommend it to all, and can unhesitatingly say it is the only sure cure for Throat and Lung affections. Trial bottles ten cents; regular size $1. For sale by C. A. Wright & Co., Tecumseh.

Only Asked for Information.

Will Austin attempted to teach Patrick Murphy, how to play poker. Murphy learned rapidly, and the stakes, from a small beginning of beans, developed into bullion. When the pot had risen to sixteen dollars, Murphy got inquisitive.

"S'posen a man has two kings?"

"Good hand."

"S'posen he has two more, is that double."

Austin exuded considerable perspiration, and remarked:

"Thunder! I throw up my hand. You are a fool to have told me. You might have won all I had."

Murphy raked in the pot, laid down his hand and started home. Austin picked up the relinquished cards, ran them through, and exclaimed:

"Two sixes, by all that's holy!"

The best remedy for strains and galls on horses is Henry & Johnson's Arnica and Oil Liniment. Good for man and beast.

OUR CHIP BASKET

The boys take the girls out, and the girls take them in. Such is life.

What this country has never seen, and never will, is a hen that can lay a wager.

A careful observer of human actions remarks that a man never uses his thumbnail for a screw-driver but once.

Two small but benevolent infants in the park: "Oh, dear, my bettle's dot five legs." "Break anozzer one off, Johnny, so's he won't be lame."

Little six year old was obliged to take a dose of medicine that left an unpleasant taste in her mouth. When asked how he liked it, he said, "It's good enough, all but the end of it."

A male wretch who unfortunately still lives, says that when ladies meet on the street and kiss, they never lift their veils, as the touch thereof produces the same peculiar sensation that a moustache would.

The present plan adopted by churches of making contributions by envelopes enables a man to drop two old-fashioned cart-wheel copper cents into the basket with as much style and flourish as if they were trade-dollars at par.

A prominent attorney residing in Syracuse, while fishing a day or two since, pointed out to his companion a sign board, remarking, "The fellow that put that up is a liar." "Why?" asked his companion. "Because the sign reads, 'No fishing in this brook,' and I caught the best trout in my basket directly under that board."

"My friend," said a seedy person to an acquaintance at the ferry, "I wish you would loan me two quarters to cross the ferry; I haint got a dollar in the world." "Well, I would like to know what difference it would make to a man who has not a dollar in the world which side of the river he is on?"

There is a story that a man went into a Newburyport liquor store and called for two quarts of rum, professing that it was for the purpose of soaking some roots. After the delivery of the liquor the dealer inquired, "What roots?" "The roots of my tongue," said the man; but it was too late.

Blue ointment and kerosene, mixed in equal proportions and applied to bedsteads, is an unfailing bed-bug remedy, and a coat of whitewash is ditto for the walls of a log-house.

Some of Hall's Maxims.

Housing up will kill any invalid.

Those who know least are most positive.

The sleep of the overworked, like that of those who do not work at all, is unsatisfying and unrefreshing, and both alike wake up in weariness, sadness and languor, with an inevitable result—both dying prematurely.

Many persons live long in spite of some pernicious habits, but without them they would live longer. Incorrect reasonings in this regard have often ruined health and shortened life, and will, in multitudes of instances, do it again.

Pleasant Thoughts.

Sorrows are like thunder clouds; in the distance they look black, over our heads, hardly gray.

The Infinite has sowed his name in the heavens in burning stars, but in the earth He has sown His name in tender flowers.

No man is ever good for anything until he has found two things—first, something to love, and second, something to reverence.

Gentleness which belongs to virtue is to be carefully distinguished from the mean spirit of cowards and the fawning assent of sycophants.

Genius loves toil, impediment and poverty; for from these it gains its strength, throws off the shadows, and lifts its proud head to immortality.

Mental pleasures never cloy; unlike those of the body, they are increased by repetition, approved by reflection, and strengthened by enjoyment.

Overburden not thy memory to make so faithful a servant thy slave. Have as much reason as a camel, to rise when thou hast thy full load.

The worthiest people are the most injured by slander, as we usually find that to be the best fruit which the birds have been pecking at.

A full-blown rose besprinkled with the purest dew is not so beautiful as a child blushing beneath its parent's displeasure, and shedding tears of sorrow for its faults.

Never has one person forgotten his pure, right-educating mother. On the blue mountains of our dim childhood, toward which we ever turn and look, stand the mothers who marked out to us from thence our life.

Household Hints.

To Glaze Linen.—Linen may be glazed by adding a teaspoonful of salt and one of finely scraped soap to a pint of starch.

Washing Preparation.—Put one pound of saltpetre into a gallon of water, and keep it in a corked jug; two tablespoonfuls for a pint of soap. Soak, wash and boil as usual. This bleaches the clothes beautifully without injuring the fabric.

To Remove Paint.—If you intend papering a painted wall, you must first get off the paint, otherwise the paper will not stick. To do this, mix, in a bucket with warm water a sufficient quantity of pearlash, or potash so as to make a strong solution. Dip a brush into this, and with it scour off all the paint, finishing with cold water and a flannel.

To Clean Silk.—Quarter of a pound of soft soap, one ounce of honey, one pint of gin. Put on with a flannel or nail brush, and afterward brush with cold water, then dip in cold water five or six times, and hang out to drain, then iron (wet on the wrong side) with a hot iron.

To Increase the Growth of Hair.—Take of mutton suet one pound, best white wax four ounces, essence of bergamot and lemon, of each three drachms; oil of lavender and thyme, of each one drachm. Mix the suet and wax over a gentle fire and then add the perfumes.

To Make Paper Resist Water.—If unsized (i. e., printing) paper, plunge it once or twice into a clear solution of mastic in oil of turpentine, and dry it afterwards by a gentle heat; it will then resist moisture, and, without being transparent, has all the properties of writing-paper; and may be used for that purpose. When warehoused it is free from mould, mildew, and is not touched by mice or insects.

Miscellaneous Recipes.

To Make Coffee.—Make a little flannel bag large enough to hold all the coffee you wish, and leave room enough for the coffee to swell; put in the coffee, tie with a string, and boil a little longer than in making it the usual way.

Ginger Cookies.—One cup of sugar, one of butter, one of molasses, one tablespoonful of ginger, one of cinnamon, and two teaspoonfuls of salaratus, dissolved in three tablespoonfuls of hot water. Bake quickly.

Potatoes Fried Whole.—When nearly boiled enough, put small potatoes into a stew-pan with butter, or beef drippings; shake them about to prevent burning, till they are brown and crisp; drain them from the fat. It will be an improvement if they are floured and dipped in the yolk of an egg, and then rolled in finely-sifted bread crumbs. This is the ordinary French method.

Fried Ham and Eggs.—The slices of ham should first be boiled a trifle. Put a bit of lard into the frying-pan. After the slices have been dipped in flour, place them in the hot fat. Sprinkle pepper. When both sides are finely browned, dish with sufficient gravy. Slip the eggs into the fat, avoiding to break the yolks. Cook slowly, and separate each egg with a knife. When done place them in a chain around the meat.

Sponge Cake.—A quarter of a pound of lump sugar, three-quarters of a pound of flour well dressed, the rind of a lemon grated, seven eggs, leaving two of the whites out; do not beat up the eggs; boil the sugar in a quarter of a pint of water, and pour it boiling hot on the eggs, whisking them very quickly while the sugar is poured very gently on them; continue to whisk it for twenty minutes; then the flour but do not whisk it after; put into moulds well buttered, and bake in a quick oven. Be careful to have the oven ready, or the cake will be heavy.

Harness Soap.—Take resin soap, two pounds; sperm oil three-fourth pounds. Digest the soap with a quantity of boiling water, just sufficient to soften it thoroughly, when it may be triturated with worm oil and a sufficient quantity of fine bone-black until a uniform paste is obtained. Ordinary unmixed soap turns brown many of the black pigments in use. The addition of oil is a great improvement.

To Make Paper Fire-proof.—A strong solution of alum will render paper fire-proof. Brown wrapping-paper, saturated with a solution of half-a-pound of tungstate of soda, in a gallon of water, is rendered uninflammable.

To Give Consistency to Bad Paper.—Make a strong size, in proportion of one ounce of isinglass, or gelatine, to a quart of water, and boil for a short time. Afterwards, add a quarter of a pound of alum. When dissolved, filter through a sieve. The paper must be passed through the size at a heat wherein the hand may be held, then hung on lines to dry gradually, not exposed to the sun in summer, or a room too warm in winter. Afterwards press it.

To Make Vinegar.—Good vinegar can be made of sugar, water and yeast, but cider vinegar is better. For the former, boil coarse sugar with water in the proportion of a pound for each gallon, and skim the mixture; when lukewarm add yeast; a pint for every three gallons of water. It is best to spread the yeast on toasted bread. Let it work for 24 hours, then turn into a cask or jug and expose to the heat of the summer sun, or place it near the fire. Fasten a piece of netting over the bung-hole to keep out flies and insects. At the end of three weeks or a month it will be very good vinegar if the heat has been great enough; if not, it will require longer. It will of course improve with age.

An Englishman was riding on a Continental railway, when a sudden halt and loud report informed the passengers that some accident had happened. Every one else rushed out, of course, to see what was the matter, but he sat tranquilly, as if not at all interested in anything beyond his own thoughts. Presently a person came up and informed him that the engine had burst its boiler. "Awe!" then came another, saying that there were fifteen persons killed. The Englishman still sat unmoved, and grunted out another "awe!" But, finally, a third messenger ran up in great haste, and said, "My dear sir, your valet has been blown into a hundred pieces!" "Awe!" was the response, "just bring me the piece that contains the key to my portmanteau!"

The Use and Abuse of Coffee.

The following excellent practical advice is from the Manufacturer and Builder: "How strong should coffee be taken is an inquiry of much practical importance. How much should be taken to a meal is scarcely of less moment. Coffee, like any other beverage, may wholly ruin the health; the very use of it tends to this, as certainly as does the use of wine, cider, beer, or any other artificial, stimulating drink. There is only one safe plan of using coffee, and that is never, under any circumstances, except of an extraordinary character, exceed in quantity, frequency or strength—take only one cup at the regular meal, and of a given unvarying strength. In this way it may be used every day for a lifetime, not only without injury, but with greater advantage than an equal amount of cold water, and for the simple reason that nothing cold should be drank at a regular meal, except by persons in vigorous health. We have personally known of a case of a lady who was for a long time in poor health, to the mystification of several physicians whom she consulted, when at last we discovered that she made a most extravagant use of strong coffee many times a day—in fact she had a pot of coffee always at hand. Following the advice to abstain from coffee resulted in an immediate end of all her troubles. In regard to the strength, it is maintained by some that one pound of the bean should make sixty cups of the very best coffee. If a man takes coffee for breakfast only one pound should last him two months or six pounds a year. One pound of coffee should be made to last a family of ten persons, young and old, one week. Put about two ounces of ground coffee in a quart of water, or rather divide the pound into seven portions, one for each day in the week, and make a quart of coffee out of it.

Greatest Remedy Known.

Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumptive is certainly the greatest medical remedy ever placed within the reach of suffering humanity.—Thousands of once hopeless sufferers now loudly proclaim their praise for this Discovery to which they owe their lives. Not only does it positively cure Consumption, but Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Hay Fever, Hoarseness and all affections of the Throat, Chest and Lungs yield at once to its wonderful curative powers as if by magic. We do not ask you to buy a large bottle until you know what you are getting. We therefore earnestly request you to call on your druggists, M. Wright & Son, and get a trial bottle free of cost which will convince the most skeptical of its wonderful merits, and show you what a regular one dollar size bottle will do. For sale by M. Wright & Son, Tecumseh.

Corn Vinegar.

Steep a pint of good firm corn in two and a half gallons of cold water for two or three hours, and then put it on the fire and boil until the corn shows signs of bursting. Take it off before the grains do burst, and strain off the liquid, adding half a pound of sugar to each gallon. Place the cask, or the jug containing it, in the sun, and in three weeks or a month the liquid will be converted into good vinegar. The writer tried this recipe, using molasses instead of sugar in one case, but the sugar makes far the best vinegar. It is both good and cheap. Large quantities can be made by using proportionate quantities of corn, water and sugar.

Theory of Absorption.

The theory of cure by Absorption is certainly growing in favor. The Lion Malaria and Liver Pad and Body and Foot Plasters absorbs the poison from the system, and will positively cure the worst case of Malarial, Intermittent and Remittent Fever. The whole remedy for one dollar. For sale by Druggists.

THE TIDE.—The return of the tide twice every day is owing to the attractive influence which the body of the moon exerts upon the earth, and especially upon its great moveable fluid, the ocean. What a mysterious page of nature does this fact seem, when we thus behold ourselves linked, as it were, by an invisible chain to a distant world.

This world is a dream within a dream; and as we grow older each step is an awakening. The youth awakes, as he thinks, from childhood; the full grown man despises the pursuits of the youth as visionary; and the old man looks on manhood as a feverish dream. Death the last sleep? No! it is the last and final awakening.

March winds! The sudden changes and high winds which prevail in March makes a bottle of Down's Elixir always necessary to have at hand. It is a sure cure for sudden colds and all lung diseases.

An exchange has an article on the "Curiosities of Courtship." One of the curiosities which the author forgot to mention is when the girl's father shakes you by the hand, and says he is glad to see you. It is curious because it rarely happens.

American Ball-Blue has quickly found its way into our laundries. It is absolutely pure, harmless, and imparts the most beautiful blue to the washing.

TO ADVERTISERS.
GEO. P. ROWELL & CO'S
SELECT LIST OF LOCAL NEWSPAPERS.
An advertiser who spends upwards of $5,000 a year, and who invested less than $550 of it in this List, writes: "Your Select Local List paid me better last year THAN ALL THE OTHER ADVERTISING I DID."
IT IS NOT A CO-OPERATIVE LIST
IT IS NOT A CHEAP LIST.
IT IS AN HONEST LIST.
The catalogue states exactly what the papers are: When the name of a paper is printed in FULL FACE TYPE it is in every instance the BEST.—When printed in CAPITALS it is the ONLY paper in the place. The list gives the population of every town and the circulation of every paper.
The rates charged for advertising are barely one-fifth the publishers' schedule. The price for single lines range from $2 to $50. The price for one inch one month in the entire list is $625. The regular rates of the papers for the same space and time are $2,980.14. The list includes 952 newspapers of which 187 are issued DAILY and 765 WEEKLY. They are located in 788 different cities and towns, of which 26 are State Capitals, 363 places of over 5,000 population, and 468 County Seats. For copy of List and other information, address GEO. P. ROWELL & CO., 10 Spruce St., New York.

Ayer's
Ague Cure
Is a purely vegetable bitter and powerful tonic, and is warranted a speedy and certain cure for Fever and Ague, Chills and Fever, Intermittent or Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, and all malarial disorders. In miasmatic districts, the rapid pulse, coated tongue, chills, lassitude, loss of appetite, pain in the back and loins, and coldness of the spine and extremities, are only premonitions of severer symptoms, which terminate in the ague paroxysm, succeeded by high fever and profuse perspiration.
It is a startling fact, that quinine, arsenic and other poisonous minerals, form the basis of most of the "Fever and Ague Preparations," "Specifics," "Syrups," and "Tonics," in the market. The preparations made from these mineral poisons, although they are palatable, and may break the chill, do not cure, but leave the malarial and their own drug poison in the system, producing quinism, dizziness, ringing in the ears, headache, vertigo, and other disorders more formidable than the disease they were intended to cure. AYER'S AGUE CURE thoroughly eradicates these noxious poisons from the system, and always cures the severest cases. It contains no quinine, mineral, or any thing that could injure the most delicate patient; and its crowning excellence, above its certainty to cure, is that it leaves the system as free from disease as before the attack.
For Liver Complaints, AYER'S AGUE CURE, by direct action on the liver and biliary apparatus, drives out the poisons which produce these complaints, and stimulates the system to a vigorous, healthy condition.
We warrant it when taken according to directions.

DR. TRASK'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.
It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.
The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.
WHAT IT CURES.
All SORES, CUTS, BRUISES, SPRAINS, BURNS, SORE THROAT, LAMENESS, RHEUMATISM, PILES, INFLAMMATION of LUNGS and BOWELS, BRONCHITIS, CROUP, SALT RHEUM, CHILBLAINS, AFFECTIONS of the SPINE, ERYSIPELAS, NERVOUS IRRITATION, and all disorders attendant with INFLAMMATION.
It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame: every bone, muscle, vein, nerve, and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.
Over 40 Years
This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should feel perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.
Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

And now Samuel J. Tilden ought to sue the Ohio man who has been collecting his official salary for him during the past four years.

Samuel J. Randall retires from the speaker's chair with a record to be proud of. During his administration the lobby was practically abolished and jobbers plied their vocation in vain.

Gen. Hancock went to Washington last Friday to see "the other boy go up ahead." The gallant general was almost as much of a lion as the President elect himself, and was the recipient of a flattering ovation.

The promptness with which the Democratic Senate confirmed Garfield's cabinet appointments, notwithstanding Conkling's efforts for delay, shows that the Democrats do not intend to make any factious opposition to the new administration.

The last two official acts of Mr. Hayes were characteristic of the man and his administration. One was his veto of the Funding Bill, which if it become a law would have saved the country several millions of dollars of interest annually. The other was his approval of the River and Harbor bill which robbed the Treasury of several millions more.

There is a disposition manifested on all hands to accord President Garfield's administration a fair and impartial trial. No one disputes the President's intellectual ability.—Whether he will possess the moral strength to shape his administration on principle, regardless of the lobby interests and ambition of the party bosses, is the great question which time alone can solve.

The aged mother of President Garfield accompanied the family to Washington last week. The porter of the sleeping coach having forgotten to put out the lamps, Mrs. Garfield said to the President, "James, put out those lamps. Its no use wasting the oil when it is doing no good." Mrs. Garfield, the elder, would make a pretty good mistress of the White House.

The Democrats displayed more good sense than they always do at their convention last Tuesday. Augustus C. Baldwin is a lawyer of high rank, who has filled the office of Circuit Judge acceptably. Geo. V. N. Lothrop, of Detroit, and Henry Fralick, of Grand Rapids, are splendid candidates for Regents. With two such excellent tickets as the Democratic and Republican conventions have given, the people will secure good faithful officers whichever ticket may be chosen.

President Garfield took a hand at Cabinet making himself last Saturday. The following are the names chosen:

Secretary of State—J. G. Blaine, of Maine.

Secretary of Treasury—Wm. Windom, of Minnesota.

Secretary of War—Robt. Lincoln, of Illinois.

Secretary of Navy—Wm. H. Hunt, of Louisiana.

Postmaster General—Thos. L. James, of New York.

Attorney General—Wayne McVeagh of Pennsylvania.

Secretary of Interior—S. J. Kirkwood, of Iowa.

Taken altogether it is a strong and creditable cabinet. The appointment of Secretary of the Treasury will be the most criticized of any. With this exception the appointees are undoubtedly well fitted for their respective positions.

The Republican party of Michigan have placed themselves in rather an unenviable position by the action of the Legislature on the prohibitory amendment. Is it not rather a dangerous position to take that the Legislature, which is itself but a creature of the Constitution, has a right to dictate to the people what that constitution shall be. If the honorable members of the Senate and House can take such arbitrary action on the liquor question, they can do so upon any change or amendment to the constitution whatever. Legislative usurpation of this character might pass unnoticed in France. In America, however, the people are strongly attached to the constitutional system of government. The opponents of the Republican party could not ask for a better weapon to use against them in the future than the record they are now making on the prohibitory amendment.

WHAT THE NEWSPAPERS SAY.

That's a Fact.

N. Y. Herald.—Chicago is fearing a milk famine, railroads in the country being blockaded by snow. The milkmen will not let the people suffer, however as long as there is a pound of chalk and a gallon of water in the city.

A Friendly View.

N. Y. Tribune, (Rep.)—No one can read the Inaugural Address without feeling that a man of brains and patriotism, who knows what he wants to do and is going to do it, has taken the helm of the Ship of State. There is no trimming sentence in it. Every important National question now before the public mind is met squarely and forcibly.

No More than He Deserved.

N. Y. Tribune, (Rep.)—The Democratic newspapers are jubilant over the flattering reception General Hancock met with at Washington. It was no more than he deserved, if for no other reason than his good sense in consenting to be present at the Inauguration. If it shall so increase his popularity with his party as to secure his renomination in 1884, every Republican in the land will rejoice.

Tit for Tat.

Detroit Free Press, (Dem.)—Colonel "Bob" Ingersoll, in his conflict with Delaware, having declared that a "people who insist that twenty-two quarts make a bushel should be as quiet as possible on the subject of blasphemy," a correspondent of a Cincinnati paper replies that the Delaware peach crop is sold by the basket, and not by the bushel. With what measure Colonel "Bob" metes it shall be measured to him again.

A Pertinent Inquiry.

Detroit Evening News, (Ind.)—The weak-kneed president bows to the bulldozing bankers, and the Catamaran pats him on the back and says bully boy. It couldn't do otherwise. Four of its brand new directors are also national bank directors. In all questions between the bond holders on the one side and the taxpayers on the other, the position of the bankers' Catamaran is assured in advance. Republican taxpayers of Michigan, how do you like your new organ?

Much to Approve—Little to Condemn.

Boston Post, (Dem.)—The general tone and spirit of the address are patriotic and little can be found in it but what will commend itself to the favor of the men of all parties. The subjects treated of in the main were appropriate to the occasion, and in point of style this inaugural will compare favorably with the best specimens of preceding inaugural addresses. . . . On the whole President Garfield started out with a manifesto containing much to approve, little to condemn, and both the opponents, as well as the friends of the dominant party will read it with pleasure.

The Question of Pretty Girls.

New York Herald, (Ind.)—The Baltimore American discovers that Baltimore girls are the prettiest because of the climate and of the food they eat. Ohio girls, it says, eat pork and sauerkrout, Massachusetts girls eat codfish balls, Virginia girls eat bacon and greens, the Gulf States girls eat gumbo, New Hampshire girls eat pie and doughnuts, and Kentucky girls eat blue grass beef, and yet all these are prettier than the girls of Europe. But the Baltimore girls eat oysters, terrapin, canvasback duck, bay mackerel and soft shell crabs, all productive of beauty. Not only has the Baltimore girl become beautiful, but the canned oysters of Baltimore have begun to make beautiful the girls of the Mississippi Valley. Gallant Baltimore, you forgot to say that New York girls live on sugar plums.

Six Years of Economy.

N. Y. Herald, (Ind.)—A party which has been in a hopeless minority cannot be very familiar with public business; and the democrats took hold often by the wrong handle of things. But under the vigorous and firm leadership of Mr. Randall, first in the Appropriation Committee and next as Speaker of the House, the traditional propensity of the party toward rigid economy was boldly and persistently carried out, though the paring down of expenses was sometimes done with an unskillful hand. When it is remembered that economy is in the general opinion of mankind the least gracious of virtues, and that to be saving of the people's money is almost always unpopular, the courage and pertinacity with which the House under Mr. Randall's leadership, cut down expenditures and kicked jobs and jobbers out of the Capitol deserves greater praise than it has got. It was said by a shrewd republican when this needed reform was begun:—"I am glad they have control of the House. We republicans have got into a habit of wasting public money, and we have got so many friends to oblige that to economize as Randall is doing would be an ungracious and even an impossible undertaking for us."

THE regular weekly drill of Co. C. will take place in the armory this evening.

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

FEBRUARY 28.—The reading of Saturday's journal by unanimous consent was dispensed with.

Mr. Kirkwood presented the testimony taken by the committee investigating the removal of the Ponca Indians, and it was ordered printed.

Mr. Wallace, from the Conference Committee, reported the Postoffice and Indian appropriation bills, and the report was concurred in.

In response to an inquiry about the Indian Commissioners, he said the law providing for a commission was left unrepealed, while the appropriation was left out of the bill.

Mr. Eaton called up the Japanese indemnity bill which had been made the regular order earlier in the day, and the Senate then at 4:10 p. m. adjourned.

MARCH 1.—Mr. Eaton, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, reported back sundry bills and resolutions recommending the construction of ship canals and railways across the Isthmus. He said the committee asked to be discharged from the consideration of all these subjects, thinking that the time has not arrived when Congress should express an opinion in regard to any partjoular route. The request of the committee was complied with.

The Senate insisted upon its amendments to the District appropriation bill, and a new conference was ordered.

Mr. Beck reported from the Committee on Appropriations, with amendments, the Sundry Civil appropriation bills.

At the evening session a bare quorum was present.

The Conference report on the fortification appropriation bill was concurred in.

A number of House bills, unobjected to, passed.

The Senate then adjourned.

MARCH 2.—The credentials of Mr. Maxey, re-elected, were presented and filed.

The Senate took up the Civil Appropriation bill. Mr. Beck said the Senate Committee had added $2,119,000 to the bill as it passed the House.

The deficiency bill was received in the Senate at 2:30 p. m., and was at once read and referred to the Appropriation Committee.

The Vice President announced his signature to the Funding bill and to the River and Harbor bill.

The House bill supplementary of the Funding bill was received from the House. Mr. Morrill objected to a second reading, and it was laid aside.

At 8 p. m. Mr. Kernan moved to go into executive session.

Mr. Conkling apealed to his colleague to withdraw the motion if the contested election cases were not taken up. Mr. Kernan declined, and Mr. Eaton then moved to adjourn, and it was defeated—yeas, 19; nays, 28.

Dilatory tactics pertained, and points on political questions were announced. Finally the Democrats yielded, and on motion of Mr. Wallace, at 8:35 p. m., the Senate adjourned.

MARCH 3.—In the United States Senate, a message was received from President Hayes vetoing the Funding bill, on the ground that the fifth section contains provisions destructive to the national banking system. The Japanese fund bill was passed, directing the repayment of $1,463,224.

MARCH 4.—At 6 o'clock a. m., after repeated and ineffectual efforts by the majority for an executive session, a sufficient number of Republican Senators decided not to answer upon the yea and nay vote to enable the point "no quorum" to be made, a recess was taken until 9:30. Owing to a failure of a quorum to appear at the hour appointed, a recess was taken until 10:30 o'clock, when a joint resolution was offered by Mr. Butler for an extra months' pay to the Senate officials and employes, which was briefly debated and passed.

At 10:50 Major General Hancock, with Colonel Mitchell of his staff, under escort of Senator Blaine, entered.

The first on the floor to greet him was Senator Conkling, and the cordial handshaking initiated by them was repeated by all the Senators present, who pressed eagerly forward for that purpose.

The distinguished visitor finally took a seat to the left of the chair.

The arrival of Lieutenant General Sheridan some moments later was the occasion of a renewal of the enthusiasm.

At 11:20 the diplomatic corps entered and occupied the seats of the Senators on the right of the chair.

Vice President-elect Arthur was then introduced to the Senate by Vice President Wheeler.

The Presidential procession, headed by President Hayes and President-elect Garfield, finally entered, under the escort of Senators Pendleton Anthony, Bayard and others of the Committee of Arrangements, and two minutes later was followed by Vice President-elect Arthur in charge of a sub-committee, all present in the chamber rising upon each occasion.

The hour of 12 m. having arrived, Vice President Wheeler retired from the chair after a few remarks, and Vice President Arthur then delivered the usual formal address.

The oath was then administered to him.

The existence of the new Senate was next made known by reading by direction of the Vice President of the official proclamation of the President's call. The organization of the new Senate was begun by swearing in of the new Senators, of whom the absentees were Senators-elect Edmunds and Mahone.

The daily hour meeting having been fixed at 12 o'clock, the Senate adjourned until to-morrow.

HOUSE.

FEBRUARY 28.—The House met in continuation of Saturday's session and proceeded to vote upon the amendments of the Sundry Civil appropriation bill. The amendments striking out the clause for making an appropriation for the purchase of the Bragg and Polk papers was agreed to. The amendment appropriating $300,000 to enable the Secretary of the Navy to establish naval coaling-stations on the Isthmus of Panama was agreed to—yeas, 114; nays, 85. The bulk of the affirmative vote came from the Republicans, and the bulk of the negative from the Democrats.

The House then adjourned, and the session of Monday commenced.

The consideration of the Sundry Civil bill was resumed. The amendment instructing the Commissioners on the part of the United States to the International Monetary Conference to agree to no adjustment which does not recognize silver as part of the money system of the governments joining in such conference, was rejected and striken from the bill.

The bill finally passed—yeas, 189; noes, 38.

Mr. Blackburn submitted the report of the Committee of Conference on the Postoffice appropriation bill. The report was agreed to.

Mr. Reagan moved to take up the Senate amendments to the River and Harbor bill, not concur in them, and to ask for a conference.

At 4:15 Mr. Tucker moved to go to the Speaker's table and take up the business there, his object being to reach the funding bill.

Mr. Price made a point of order that the motion was not in order because there was unfinished business pending, viz: The apportionment bill, on which the previous question had been seconded. He argued that until that business was disposed of the House could not go to the table except by the suspension of the rules.

The bill is regarded as the beginning of the fight against the funding bill, and for that reason the motion was resisted. In order to consume time the roll was called and on the motion to adjourn by Mr. Cooper, nearly everybody voted against it, and at 6:34 the House took a recess till 8 p. m.

MARCH 1.—Mr. McMahon reported the deficiency bill, the last of the General Appropriation bills. Ordered printed and recommitted.

The regular order was then demanded by Mr. Warner, who said he desired to go to the Speaker's table to take up the Funding bill.

The Speaker thereupon proceeded to call the committees, but no reports of importance were submitted.

Mr. Tucker moved to proceed to business on the Speaker's table for the purpose of taking up the Funding bill.

At this point the proceedings were interrupted by Mr. Reagan with the Conference report of the River and Harbor bill. The bill passed by the House, appropriated $10,179,809. The Senate increased the amount $962,000 by means of 139 amendments. In the conference the Senate receded from seven amendments, aggregating $65,000, leaving the amount appropriated by the bill $11,141,809.

The report was agreed to—yeas, 162; nays, 81.

MARCH 2.—The House met in continuation of Tuesday's session.

The consideration of the Funding bill was immediately resumed, the question being on ordering the previous question on the motion to concur in the Senate amendment No. 16.

After considerable delay, the sixteenth Senate amendment was concurred in—yeas, 146; nays, 16.

The amendment as it stands provides that awards of bonds shall be made to bona fide subscribers for two thousand or less. In other words, that it stands as it passed the Senate.

Mr. Tucker then offered certain amendments of not very practical importance to the fourth section which were rejected by a vote of 88 to 126.

A long discussion ensued on the bill. The point was made that the House could not amend an act which had not yet received the signature of either the Speaker or the President. This was overruled by the Speaker on the ground that the House had a right at any time to correct its own action.

The Democrats were taunted with passing a bill that required correction immediately, to which Mr. Carlisle replied that if a threat had not been made that the bill would be defeated by sending it back to the Senate, all amendments would have been adopted.

Mr. Carlisle's supplemental bill was then adopted with hardly a dissenting voice, and the House then adjourned.

MARCH 3.—President Hayes' veto message on the Funding bill reached the House and was read soon after 12 o'clock. After reciting the necessity which exists for the passage of such a bill for refunding purposes, the President goes on to say that while in his opinion it would be wise to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to offer to the public, bonds bearing interest at 3½ per cent. in aid of refunding, he (the President) would not interpose his constitutional objection to the bill were it not for the fifth section, which in his judgment would seriously impair the value, and tend to the destruction of the national banking system of the country, of which no better was ever established. Under that section no additional banks would ever be organized, except possibly in a few cities or localities where rates of interest were low. No new banks could be organized, and no increase of the capital of existing banks could be obtained except by the purchase and deposit of per cent. bonds. The fifth section he regards as a step in the direction of the destruction of the national banking system, and thinks that if the present system were broken down it would inevitably be followed by a recurrence to other and inferior methods of banking, and in conclusion says: "Any measure looking to such a result will be a disturbing element in our financial system. It will destroy confidence and surely check the growing prosperity of the country.

Believing that the measure for refunding the national debt is not necessarily connected with the national banking law, and that any refunding act will defeat its own object if it imperiled the national banking system or seriously impaired its usefulness, and convinced that Section 5 of the bill before me would, if it should become a law, work a great harm, I herewith return the bill to the House of Representatives for that further consideration which is provided for in the constitution.

(Signed) RUTHERFORD B. HAYES.

On motion of Mr. Tucker further action was postponed on the Funding bill.

Mr. Cox moved to suspend the rules and pass the apportionment bill on a basis of 307. This meeting with opposition on the Republican side, Mr. Cox so amended his motion as to bring up for consideration the appointment bill, and so have the votes taken on the number, 322, 319, 315, 307, and when the majority shall agree on any number, to have the bill, with the second and third sections of the original bill, put on its passage without debate or dilatory motions.

Mr. Conger raised a point of order against the proposition, and Mr. Cox modified it by striking out the words "or dilatory motions."

Mr. Conger reserving the right for himself and friends to refuse to vote, if desirable, made no further objection to the proposition, and the rules being suspended in accordance therewith the House first proceeded to vote upon the number 322. Rejected—yeas, 119; nays, 132; and the vote was then taken on 319.

This proposition was adopted, 136 to 123, and the result was loudly applauded by the Republicans.

The bill provides that after March 3, 1883, the House shall consist of 319 members, apportioned as follows:

Alabama	8	Mississippi	7
Arkansas	5	Missouri	14
California	6	Nebraska	3
Colorado	1	Nevada	1
Connecticut	4	New Hampshire	3
Delaware	1	New Jersey	7
Florida	2	New York	33
Georgia	10	North Carolina	8
Illinois	20	Ohio	21
Indiana	13	Oregon	1
Iowa	10	Pennsylvania	28
Kansas	6	Rhode Island	2
Kentucky	11	South Carolina	7
Louisiana	6	Tennessee	10
Maine	4	Texas	10
Maryland	6	Vermont	3
Massachusetts	12	Virginia	10
Michigan	11	West Virginia	4
Minnesota	5	Wisconsin	8

MARCH 4.—The House met at 10 o'clock.

Mr. Hutchins rose to a question of privilege, stating that he was stopped from entering the Capitol at the Senate wing by a man dressed in military attire. This gave rise to considerable discussion.

Mr. Sparks thought that the placing of these men was simple action on the part of the Sergeant-of-Arms, and nothing to make a row about.

Mr. Young, of Ohio, criticised the action of the committee appointed to investigate this election, for not making the report, and then the hour of 12 having arrived, the Speaker said the work of the Forty-sixth Congress was done.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—Upon calling the Senate to order at noon, Vice-President Arthur was vigorously applauded by the galleries. The Vice-President stated he had received for presentation a number of petitions for special legislation, but his own opinion, based upon the rules and precedents, was that these could not be presented at an extraordinary session of the Senate. He submitted the question as the disposition to be made of the communications.

After remarks by Messrs. Harris and Hill, it was ordered that the petitions be retained by the Vice President, to be submitted by him at the next legislative session.

Mr. Hoar made a motion extending to Winfield S. Hancock the privilege of the floor during his stay in Washington. Adopted unanimously.

Mr. Blaine, in accordance with notice given by him some weeks ago, submitted the following resolution:

Resolved, That a special committee of five Senators be appointed by the Chair to take into consideration the mode of voting for President and Vice-President of the United States, and the mode of counting and certifying the same, who shall report such propositions for a change in the laws and Constitution as may seem expedient; that said Committee have power to sit during recess of Congress, and they be directed to report on or before the second Wednesday of January, 1882.

Temporarily laid on the table to be printed. Recess.

Blaine and Windom are fixed as Secretaries of State and Treasury; Lincoln for the War Department, MacVeach for Attorney-General; Hunt, Kirkwood and James are booked also for the Navy, Interior and Postmaster-General.

THE Tecumseh correspondent of the Adrian Press frees his mind thusly :|

The recent thaw caused Evans creek to overflow to such an extent that the water in Dewey's pond raised over the road two feet. Thos. Boyd who erected the dam, between the highway and his place, over which arose the Conkling vs. Boyd suit now pending in the Supreme Court, has strengthened the same by several loads of straw. It is time the town did something to avoid the necessity of going across the neighboring farms in order to traverse the highway.

LAST week the executive committee of the agricultural society of Lenawee county decided to hold the fair five days, commencing on Monday, Sept. 26th, continuing on the 27th, 28th, 29th and 30th, and that all entries be closed on Tuesday night, Sept. 27th.

OWING to the illness of a relative residing in the east, Rev. H. Shepard has been granted a leave of absence by the trustees of the Universalist society for three weeks. The church will be open for services, however, on the morning of each Sunday, and for Sunday school.

THE revival meetings at Springville under charge of Rev. E. P. Peirce, assisted by Rev. J. S. Higgins, evangelist of Detroit, are in their height of progress. The whole community for miles are awakened. Nearly a hundred persons have arisen for prayers, and whole families are being converted.

THE Mendelsohn concert last evening was a surprise. Not the entertainment itself, for that was a rich musical treat, but the attendance was larger than we feared it would be. There was a good audience out, and Dr. Howe rejoices in a nice little margin over and above expenses to pay him for his trouble.

OUR readers are requested to examine the new Real Estate Notices which appear in this week's HERALD. Farmers who wish to retire from work and buy a home in the village will find some splendid places advertised. We also have some good farms for sale. This is the best season of the year to buy and sell real estate. People are changing and moving about in the spring of the year, and naturally desire to buy and sell.

ARRANGEMENTS have once more been completed with the Litta concert company for a concert at Adrian. She has been billed for next Monday evening, March 14th, at the Opera House. Litta's appearance in January was prevented by sickness, but this time there is no probability of failure. The night train on the Jackson branch will be held for the convenience of those attending from here. It is a good opportunity to hear the leading prima donna of America and no doubt many will take advantage of it.

Adrian Press: A disgusted member of the "dear people" bitterly complains in the Tecumseh HERALD of the horrible condition of the road, a mile west of the village where a small pond about two feet deep covers the road for some ten or fifteen rods. It is the point that Judge Cooley decided the owner of the land south could build a dam and keep the water off his land, and the dam thing remains while the commissioners spend their money appealing the suit to the Supreme court, and leave the road almost impassible, as horses break through and nearly freeze before crossing. The commissioners ought to be driven through on foot every quarter hour ten hours in a day for three days, and perhaps the water would be able to reach their intellect, quicken their brain, and lead them to spend less in law, and more in labor.

TRIP TO LANSING.

Last Monday evening we boarded the night train at Chicago street and after a good ride of an hour and a half found ourselves in Jackson. Stopping over night at the Commercial Hotel, we took the early train for Lansing where we arrived at 9 o'clock A. M. We had good company in the person of W. R. Wooden, of Tecumseh, who went along to assist in representing the Democracy of Northern Lenawee at the State Convention.

We passed the forenoon in "doing" the new capitol. We found at Representative Hall, Messrs. Waring, Corbin and Carpenter, members from this county, and we were immediately taken under their protecting care. Also met E. D. Kinne of Ann Arbor and C. L. Frazer of Petoskey, both old acquaintances and Ann Arbor classmates of ours. Andrew Howell of Adrian was on the ground, keeping personal watch of his compilation project. After visiting the interesting features of the capitol building we adjourned for dinner with Rep. Waring, of this district. He is nicely situated on Washington Avenue near the post-office, having rooms and boarding with Dr. Dennis. After dinner, we went through the motions of nominating a ticket at the convention, and then improved the rest of the time in looking up a few more friends. Called on L. G. Blood and Lon Henry, at Mr. Blood's store. They are both enjoying good health, and Lon seems to be as happy as a clam in his new home. Also called on Dr. Dingman in his dental office. He has a good practice, and the Lansing climate seems to agree with his health. He does'nt pine away a bit.

We then called on E. W. Dart, hardware merchant, M. B. Carpenter, chief clerk in the tax department of the Auditor General's office, and H. A. Lee, the leading produce and grain dealer of Lansing. We also called at the Journal and Republican offices, but were too late to find the editors at home. As the Senate and House held an evening session on that day, we took the opportunity to see the Capitol by gas and electric light. Representative Hall presents a magnificent appearance when fully lighted up. We left Lansing at nine o'clock that evening, stopped over night in Jackson, and arrived home on the early train yesterday morning. We had a very pleasant trip and put in a full day at Lansing to good advantage.

THE TEMPERANCE REVIVAL.

MESSRS. HUGHES & WARD began their temperance work in Tecumseh last week Sunday and have held meetings every night since. The Opera House has been packed full each night and considerable enthusiasm has been manifested in the work. The manner of the work of the speakers is revivalistic. They aim by their talk to craze the audience with enthusiasm for the cause, and so far they have been very successful. Although the speakers are rather rude and harsh at times in their speeches, they are doing good work, and are worthy of the support they are receiving in Tecumseh. Over one thousand have signed the pledge and become interested in temperance work through the influence of these meetings, and by this considerable good has been attained. The meetings will be continued throughout the week, and at the close nearly every man, woman and child in Tecumseh will have probably signed the pledge.

Last Tuesday evening when Mr. Hughes was in the midst of his speech a rather exciting and joyful event transpired. Forty young men of this place with countenances that bespoke earnestness and determination marched in a body into the Opera House and down the middle isle to sign the pledge. The minute they were seen the audience broke forth in successive rounds of deafening cheers. The action of the young men seemed to inspire every one with joy and vigor, it was the thing that all had wished for, and its attainment brought good cheer to every one. Congratulatory speeches were then made, and during the course of the evening many more caught the inspiration to lead better and nobler lives and the number of signers was materially increased. It was proposed that a collection be taken up for the furtherance of the work and in a very short space of time the liberal audience had deposited about $150 with the treasurer.

THE village election passed off very quietly last Monday. The regular ticket put in nomination at the caucus seemed to be so thoroughly satisfactory that no opposition ticket was placed in the field. And as there was but one ticket up to vote for, very few men took the trouble to vote at all. All the officers of last year except one assessor, are re-elected. Full returns in the Council Proceedings.

CARL BURTON, of Clinton, will be at the Emerson House, Wednesday, March 16, for the purpose of organizing a violin class in Tecumseh. He is a first-class musician in every respect, and any one who would wish good instruction on this instrument will do well to go and see him.

THE RECORDING OF MARRIAGES.

We see by a recent article in the Adrian Times that the law requiring marriages to be recorded is not observed as it should be, and we are informed by County Clerk Hunter that this neglect has assumed quite serious proportions.

During the year last past, the returns of about four hundred marriages solemnized in this county, have been made to the county clerk. These returns are required by law to be made with full details—the name of contracting parties, residence and birth-place of each, color and age of each, the names of witnesses, date of ceremony, &c. The returns when made to the county clerk, are copied by him in a record for that purpose, and which is kept for reference in his office. A full copy of the record is made each year by the clerk and forwarded to the office of secretary of state. The record of marriages in each county is invaluable, as will be readily seen.

The law recognizing this fact has made very strict provisions in regard to neglect to make such returns. All persons authorized to solemnize marriages are required by law to make a record of the same, and within [illegible] days after such marriage deliver to the county clerk of the county in which the marriage took place, a certified copy of such record. A neglect to comply with the above, a refusal to deliver on demand, to the parties joined, a certificate of marriage, or a false or fictitious entry, is punishable by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, and in default of paying the same, by imprisonment in the county jail until said fine be paid, but not to exceed the period of ninety days.

Notwithstanding these provisions of law, it is a fact, as we are informed by the clerk, that a large percentage of the marriages solemnized in this county, are not returned, and inquiries are made at the office almost every day for information in regard to marriages which have occurred within the past ten years, and which are not recorded. The parties who have solemnized marriages and failed to make proper returns are, of course, liable to prosecution. It would be well for all who are interested in this matter to see that the requirements of law in this matter are complied with.

The Overflow of the Turnpike.

EDITOR HERALD:

It is a little over fifty years since the road was laid out between sections 27 and 32, Tecumseh. It was well known that a stream of water with several feet, sometimes more than a half mile in length, had a natural channel from the north the year round over L. D. Dewey's land into a pond now owned by T. Boyd. In 1832 the U. S. military road was laid out from Monroe to Detroit and Chicago turnpike, and a good bridge was built over said stream by the United States authority. Now the said Boyd builds a dam across this water course which flows the road and several acres of land, raising the water five feet above its natural level, making the government road impassable for teams and travel on that part of the turnpike. We wish to know why this obstruction to the road and thousands of travelers is tolerated? Is there another civilized town in North America that would allow the road to be flowed one day, when less than an hour's work would let the water out and show one boaster at least that he has no right to dam the State of Michigan.

Last fall when in the same woods, and not many rods from the same place, Mr. Beach found the identical turtle, apparently unchanged in size, and moving around at his leisure and pleasure as freely as on first sight, and ere time had scored nearly half a century of years on his back. Mr. Beach took the little pioneer up, read the name and figures he had written so long ago, which were perfectly plain, carried him to his house, exhibited him to his neighbors, put the figures 1880 on his shell, took him back to the place where he was found and gave him his freedom again.

A Great Chicago Enterprise.

The Laboratory for the manufacture of Electric Bitters is one of Chicago's greatest enterprises, giving employment to a large number of hands. The extensive sale already attained for this wonderful remedy is astonishing.—Wherever once introduced and becomes known, it is almost impossible to supply the demand, because of their true merit—curing where all others fail—and at a reasonable price (fifty cents). A Fight with a Bear.

We make the following extract from a hunting story entitled "The Big Bear of Wannetola," printed in St. Nicholas for May. The incident took place in one of the back counties of Arkansas, in the year 1860, and the hunters were Harvey Richardson and the narrator. They were after a big bear, whose depredations had made him the chief object of conversation; and they started out with their dogs early one November morning.

"Just at day-break, we came to a crossing of the bayou where we felt sure the bear must pass on his way to his den. Harvey placed me, the dogs and himself. A fallen tree was in my front, and through its interlaced roots I could see in every direction. Hardly had we completed our ambush when a quick movement of one of the dogs startled me. But in a moment, noticing that his looks were directed toward the crossing, I too looked thither and heard the sound of a heavy animal sauntering slowly over the sodden ground and approaching my lair. In an instant a pair of yellow eyes glared at me, and with as wide a look of surprise as there was in mine. Recovering myself, I fired at the monster which appeared like a huge, animated black cloud as he rose up before me. The brute disappeared with the smoke of my gun, but in a moment I was startled by the report and shock of a second discharge. The other load of my gun had been accidentally exploded. Looking in the direction that the bear had taken, I saw he had run along the other side of the fallen tree and met at the farther end the two dogs, when he turned about and came toward me at his most rapid speed and in savage humor. Then there was a fearful crash and rush. The black mass came on, with eyes gleaming, and bewildering me with a reflection of their glare in the sunlight.

I was conscious that my gun was useless, and so instinctively grasped my pistol, but found it hopelessly entangled in my belt. For a second despair came upon me, but a sudden revulsion aroused every sense and prompted me to defense for life. Quickly drawing my knife, it was presented at a thrust as the dark mass sprang at me.

At this moment, one of the huge dogs leaped at him so fiercely as to divert the monster's attention from myself and make him miss his bite. He reared, and as he again came down on his forefeet and was in the act of going over the bank, I plunged my knife to the hilt into his body, in the region of his heart. He turned and made a terrible snap at my legs, but at that moment I fell backward over a bush, and so we all went into the bayou together, floundering in the water and mud.

I scrambled to the edge of the slough, and watched with intense anxiety the result of the battle. In another moment, and when the bear had nearly reached the farther side of the pool, desperately fighting with the dogs every inch of the way, I heard a whirring flight of more of the pack as they sprang over me. In the same instant a flash shot out from the brown barrel of Harvey's rifle, and the bear rolled over, though he still feebly fought the pack, and kept on fighting to the last moment of his existence. To my mortification, an examination of the huge carcass showed that my shot had not made any visible mark on the animal, and that my knife had not quite reached his heart. Harvey's shot had killed him. The weight of the savage animal was over five hundred pounds.

The Green-Eyed Monster.

Mr. Kroeger was tranquilly eating his breakfast a morning or so ago, when his boy broke the silence by asking him for fifty cents to go to the minstrels with that night. Mr. Kroeger promptly refused on the ground of hard times.

Mr. Kroeger's boy is more than a boy, and when he sets his heart on having anything he generally succeeds in getting it; so when his father refused to comply with his request, he moved over by his mother, and said:

"I guess I'll tell ma what the cook said to you last night."

Mrs. Kroeger's eyes flashed like two balls of fire.

"You're a nice man," she said sarcastically, "to come home and pet me, and kiss me, and call me your little dew-gemmed-tulip, and then go and receive the caresses of the cook. You miserable, frog-eyed runt, for two pins I'd go over there and rake the eyes out of you!"

"I, ah!" stammered the lord of the manor, when his wife broke in.

"Oh, yes, I'll ah you!" and turning suddenly to the boy, she demanded an explanation of the whole affair.

"Will you give me the fifty cents?"

"Yes," she responded, "what did she say to him?"

"Give me the fifty cents first!" said the young hopeful. "I'm opening the year on the C. O. D. principle."

He soon had the money, and relieved his mother by telling her:

"Last night the cook came up to pop, and got pretty close to him, and—"

"O, you wretch," hissed Mrs. Kroeger.

"And when she got pretty close to him she smiled very sweetly and said:

The boy moved cautiously toward the door, and his mother yelled:

"Come, out with it!"

And when the cook got pretty close to him, she whispered:

"Mr. Kroeger, the potatoes are getting pretty low, and you had better get another barrel in a day or two.'"

And then the boy got outside as fast as possible, while his mother sank into a chair. Mr. Kroeger lifted the morning paper before his face to veil the smile which made it look like a calcium.

THE AURORA.—It is now asserted that the Aurora Borealis is nothing but minute particles of iron in the atmosphere attracted to the poles, and ignited by rapid transit through the air. Prof. Nordenskjold, in his Arctic voyages, examined snows as far north as Spitzbergen, and found therein minute particles of iron, phosphorus and cobalt.

The Portland Advertiser relates the story of the mare of a physician in that place being allowed to browse on rose bushes in a yard. A few moments thereafter the animal was heard kicking on the front doorsteps and holding out her tongue, as though she wanted it examined, which was done, and a thorn was found sticking in it. The objectionable matter was removed, and the animal seemed well contented.

A Continent Lost in the Sea.

The outlines of the Atlantis, the lost continent of the Atlantic, can be traced in the Atlantic ocean by the islands which were left at its angles when the great submarine earthquake drew the vast territory down into the sea. Fernanda Noronha, St. Paul, Cape Verde, the Azores or Western Islands, Maderia and a portion of the West India Islands constitute all that is left of this once populous continent. Before proceeding to a discussion of the why and wherefore of these lost continents, we shall quote from the cosmological views of Plato embodied in the Timœus. Timœus is discoursing of the origin of the universe and man, and he is relating to Socrates and Critias what an Egyptian priest told Solon, the great lawgiver, about the ancient history of the Athenian, when that worthy was visiting Egypt. Said he:

"Many and mighty deeds of your state are here recorded in writing, and call forth our admiration; nevertheless, there is one in particular, which in magnitude and valor surpasses them all. For these writings relate what a prodigious force your city once overcame, when a mighty warlike power, rushing from the Atlantic Sea, spread itself with hostile fury all over Europe and Asia. The sea, indeed, was then navigable, and had an island fronting that mouth which, you in your tongue call the Pillars of Hercules (Straits of Gibralter); and this island was larger than Lybia and Asia put together; the sea is indeed a true sea, and the land that entirely surrounds it may truly and most correctly be called a continent. In this Atlantic island, then, was formed a powerful league of kings, who subdued the entire island, together with many others, and parts also of the continent; besides which they subjected to their rule the inland ports of Lybia, as far as Egypt, and Europe, also as far as Tyrrhenia. The whole force, then, being collected in a powerful league, undertook to enslave both your country (Greece) and ours (Egypt) and all the land beside that which lies within their mouth.

Subsequently, however, through violent earthquakes and deluges, which brought desolation in a single day and night, the whole of the warlike race was at once merged under the earth, and the Atlantic Island itself was plunged beneath the sea and entirely disappeared—whence even now that sea (in the interior of the continent) is neither navigable nor to be traced out, being blocked by the great depth of mud which the subsiding island produced."

Atlantis was not less than 5,000,000 of square miles in extent. It is most probable that it was not an island, as anciently supposed, but was a continent joined to South America. Cardinal Petrus, in the fourteenth century, believed that three or four day's sailing beyond the Straits of Gibralter would bring the navigator to India. It was his book, "Imago Mundi," which first inspired Columbus to go in search of the new world.

Atlantis was a region of delights. Its climate was generally mellow-toned, restful and seductive. It was a land "in which it seemed always afternoon." The airs flowed gently and soothingly over mountain and palm, and wafted the odors of flowers, the like of which have never been found in modern floras. Around Atlantis' southern and eastern coast flowed a warm oceanic current, which tended northward. It breathed mild vapors upon the shore, and the vegetation grew up marvelously and gorgeously. The trees waved their highest boughs of greenery as if among the stars, and their native shrubs put forth leaves in which a man could wrap himself as in a blanket, while the grass was waist deep and soft, delicious and feathery. Birds of brilliant plumage fluttered about the woods, and sang gloriously through the long, bright days. A vast variety of animals and insects contested with men the supremacy of the continent. In the center was a calm, blue sea, always whitened with the sails of ships passing hither and thither like spectral messengers, while the wooded cliffs, bannered with flowers, looked down like beautiful women upon a play.

Into this attractive region came the dark-eyed, black-haired, brown-skinned Asiatics and occupied it. They had never seen skies as sunny or earth as green and beautiful as Atlantis, and they fell to building cities and making vast gardens, after the manner of their ancestors in Assyria, but chrystalizing many new architecural ideas, as seen in the splendid remains of a cognate people in Central America and Mexico and Peru to-day. The Aztec chronology shows that seven nations governed at one time in Mexico, they having emigrated thither from Asia. It was people of the same race who poured into Atlantis centuries before the Christian era, bringing with them traces of the Asiatic civilization which had reached such grandeur several centuries previously in Assyria. There where cities on Atlantis of 500,000 inhabitants, surrounded by walls of tremendous height and thickness. The architecture was colossal in character, and the pyramidal taste was somewhat developed.

Yet this whole Atlantis continent, kings, nations, cities, temples have been sunk in a vast ruin beneath the waves of the ocean. The Pacific is girdled with volcanoes which are spasmodically active. Who can tell when the vast laboratory, deep down beneath the crust of our globe, may not wield its stupendous power to engulf half of South America? Who can say that these same invisible forces which wrecked Atlantis may not split off a part of our own continent and elevate our new realms, covered with wrecks of forgotten cities?

THE FIRST WALKIST.—An exchange says it was the Wandering Jew, who instituted pedestrianism. He is the aboriginal tramp. He has already performed the great feat of walking uncounted thousands of miles in thirty-six hundred half years and he is still walking. His laps are the lapse of ages, and he has never failed to appear on the track when the judges' bell rang.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

A man giving the name of William H Bowers, with his face covered with the eruption of small-pox in its most infectious stage, walked into police headquarters in New York, where all the captains were waiting for their checks, and elbowed his way through them to the health office, where he asked to be attended to. He was hustled out to the hospital.

Subscriptions in Boston to the securities of the Dayton and Southeastern railroad were over $40,000,000, while only $25,000,000 were called for.

About two hundred ship carpenters of Chicago have struck for $3 per day. The boiler-makers in eight foundries are also out. Two thousand union bricklayers of St. Louis have been conceded a rate of $4 per day. Over two hundred molders of the Excelsior stove-works have struck, on a question of jurisdiction, and two hundred moulders, consequently, have nothing to do.

The paymaster general of the army has filed charges of embezzlement against Colonel C. M. Terrell, chief paymaster of the department of Texas. He is alleged that he took his daughter on a business trip and charged her expenses as those of a clerk.

George Stephen, president of the Canada Pacific railway syndicate, has sailed for London to obtain $10,000,000, to prosecute the work in the northwest.

On the ground that a Chinaman is not a white man, Judge Moran, of the Criminal Court, of Chicago, has refused naturalization papers to Moy Sam.

The Rex procession in New Orleans was a grand success. The grand scenic display, the theme of which was taken from the Arabian Nights, was the principal feature. There were twenty-three cars containing tableaux. The parade of the Mysticks Krewe of Komus was one of the handsomest of the kind ever presented in the city. The theme illustrated was the myths of the Northland.

The State Capital at St. Paul, Minn., caught fire while both Houses were in session, and burned to the ground. The members escaped by means of ladders, although some of them were slightly singed. The loss on the building is about $100,000. The historical and Supreme Court libraries were destroyed. The records were saved.

Frederick W. Davies, a young Welshman of high culture, was whipped on the bare back, at Richmond, Va., under sentence of the police court, for stealing clothing.

The banks of Charleston, S. C., refuse to receive silver certificates at par, because they have to send them to the treasury department for redemption.

The stockholders of the St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad company have decided to issue consolidated mortgage bonds to the amount of $30,000,000, bearing 6 per cent. interest.

Henry Hill, the negro, who murdered the jailer at Hartwell, Ga., was caught in the woods, while roasting a potato at a fire. At last advices three hundred people were hovering around the jail, threatening to lynch the butcher.

The English correspondent who was captured by the Boers at Spitzkop or Prospect Hill, and subsequently released, had an interview with Joubert, the Boer commandant who said the Boers were prepared to negotiate for peace only on the basis of liberty. An Irish renegade was with Joubert, and appeared to be his chief adviser.

MONEY—FARMS—ABSTRACTS.

If you want to hire money at very low rates.

If you have money to loan.

If you want to buy a farm or a home.

If you want to sell your real estate.

If you want a deed or mortgage correctly made.

If you want a complete abstract of title. Call on A. L. Bliss.

Among other Farms for sale I have one of 160 acres and one of 80 acres in Palmyra both being well tiled and fenced, and first class in every respect, with four market towns within easy driving distance, in good neighborhood. Also 125 acre farm 1½ miles west of river road from Deerfield. Also 160 acre farm and 80 acre farm, and 20 acre farm in Riga, any of which are decided bargains, and good reasons given for naming low prices.

Every purchaser of Lands should insist on being furnished an abstract of title, for our experience of more than 20 years shows that not more than one title in ten is perfect of record, and every week purchases agreed upon are abandoned owing to imperfections of title. I have a good carriage or farm horse, 1300 lbs. in weight for sale at a bargain.

A few thousand dollars now on hand to loan at six per cent, and on long time if desired.

A. L. BLISS,
Examiner of Titles, Loan and Land Agent, Adrian Mich.

An Englishman was riding on a Continental railway, when a sudden halt and loud report informed the passengers that some accident had happened. Every one else rushed out, of course, to see what was the matter, but he sat tranquilly, as if not at all interested in anything beyond his own thoughts. Presently a person came up and informed him that the engine had burst its boiler. "Awe!" Then came another, saying that there were fifteen persons killed. The Englishman still sat unmoved, and grunted out another "awe!" But, finally, a third messenger ran up in great haste, and said, "My dear sir, your valet has been blown into a hundred pieces!" "Awe!" was the response, "just bring me the piece that contains the key to my portmanteau!"

THE SUN FOR 1881.

Everybody reads THE SUN. In the editions of this newspaper throughout the year to come everybody will find:

I. All the world's news, so presented that the reader will get the greatest amount of information with the least unprofitable expenditure of time and eyesight. THE SUN long ago discovered the golden mean between redundant fulness and unsatisfactory brevity.

II. Much of that sort of news which depends less upon its recognized importance than upon its interest to mankind. From morning to morning THE SUN prints a continued story of the lives of real men and women, and of their deeds, plans, loves, hates, and troubles. This story is more varied and more interesting than any romance that was ever devised.

III. Good writing in every column, and freshness, originality, accuracy, and decorum in the treatment of every subject.

IV. Honest comment. THE SUN's habit is to speak out fearlessly about men and things.

V. Equal candor in dealing with each political party, and equal readiness to commend what is praiseworthy or to rebuke what is blamable in Democrat or Republican.

VI. Absolute independence of partisan organizations, but unwavering loyalty to true Democratic principles. THE SUN believes that the Government which the Constitution gives us is a good one to keep. Its notion of duty is to resist to its utmost power the efforts of men in the Republican party to set up another form of government in place of that which exists. The year 1881 and the years immediately following will probably decide this supremely important contest. THE SUN believes that the victory will be with the people as against the Rings for monopoly, the Rings for plunder, and the Rings for imperial power.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

EAST TECUMSEH.

The Literary Society was greeted with a full house on Saturday evening March 5th. The exercises were first class, and gave good satisfaction. The dialogue entitled "The Bunglown Lyceum" was perhaps the most pleasing part of the evening's entertainment. All the parts were well sustained; the president of the lyceum need not evince surprise if he receives a call from the manager of a leading theater in some of our large cities.

The following is the program for Saturday evening, March 19:

Music—Etta Spaulding.
Select Reading—Kate Boyce.
Declamation—Artie Hall.
Recitation—Lillie Goheen.
Reading—Chas. Benedict.
Recitation—Nellie Boyce.
Declamation—Guy Raymond.
To answer Questions—Rufus Raymond.
To ask Questions—Fred Goheen, Chas. Benedict, Austin Hall, Mrs. Raymond, Mrs. DePuy.

BROOKLYN.

Mrs. Hollister, who has long been a resident of this town, and a much respected member of the Methodist church for forty-seven years, was buried yesterday. The funeral services were held in the Presbyterian church, Rev. Bradley, of Napoleon, officiating. He gave a brief but eloquent exposition of the meaning of these words, "For me to live, is Christ; to die, is gain."

The illness of both Mr. Lyon and his wife interrupts the Baptist revival meetings that have been progressing the past two weeks. I hear that Graves, the Evangelist, has offered to assist, but deacon French, Palmer & Co., are extremely shy of throwing clubs at their neighbors, and in fact the fraternity up there on the hill are as a unit in minding their own business.

We indulge a hope that the reverend circulator may discipline wicked churches elsewhere.

A wagon covered with white and patched with queer black emblems halted for repairs yesterday in front of Miller's. The whole cage would hold about ten bushels, but there were two women and four children in the south division, and an old trunk, saddle, basket and dog in the center, and three quite big boys, that did the driving, poised on the front seat. The horse was the only rational object among them, and paid no attention to the master who ran along squealing in his ears, and making all sorts of frantic gestures, with head, arms and feet; sometimes almost pulling off the harness that in parts resembled a clothes line. He had (I mean the man) a watered chocolate complexion, half-sized eyes of a cat blue tint, and an immensity of faint colored whiskers that made his mouth look like a toad in diagram. If he had been alone I should have been sure he was Darwin's missing link; but the whole family had the same peculiar eyes, hair and complexion, and wore a light gray uniform that matched their proclivities exactly.

I suppose you wonder why I waste ink talking about them. Well, I have heard ministers assert that all mankind are brothers, and the whole human race one family. I wish to say that that tribe are not any of my relation; they belong with the ninety-and-nine.

It is to be hoped that John R. Clark will have some regard for intemperate tenderness of conscience, and hasten his convalescence, though it is doubtful whether Mr. Pryce will let him do his share of work. He has of late been supplementing regular services by an occasional lecture on the world's creation, and last night preached a sermon that hinted strongly at its reconstruction. It was based on the fifteenth verse of the second chapter of Habakkuk. To those who do not think it right to abolish ancient custom without clear scriptural authority emphasized by a clap of thunder, it must have been quite refreshing. I imagine some of the serious minded thought that verse had been warped by some rascally printer. For aught I know to the contrary it may be lawful for gentlemen to wear pink ears to meeting but they are not as becoming as self color. Mr. Pryce has learned more wickedness than is nice for a minister to know; tells of it, and charges it to the account of those who sell the right to others to make unlimited mischief. Unless his neighbors believe in prohibition gospel enough to vote for it there is danger of their guessing him a disagreeable sort of fellow. He actually thinks that verse got into the book in regular fashion.

PEARLIE.

RIDGEWAY.

G. P. Waring spent last Saturday and Sunday at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. R. Wilson gave a very pleasant party on Tuesday evening.

Miss Nellie Clark is spending a few weeks in Grand Rapids.

R. H. Nelson has got his new house nearly ready for plastering.

The regular examination of teachers will take place on Saturday, 26th, at the school house in this village.

The Toledo Evening Bee is now delivered by carrier to subscribers in Ridgeway. I. D. Loree is manager of the enterprise.

Irv. Osborn indulged a number of his friends in a "candy pull" on Monday evening, and a good time was had by all present.

Dr. Loree took advantage of the last fall of snow and slid one of his houses from the village onto his prairie farm.

We understand our shoemaker Lewis Priest has closed shop and will go to Elkhart, where he expects to go to railroading.

Many of our citizens will remember one Horace Hause, who, by his good stories prevailed David Coryell to sign notes with him for a considerable amount, and then skipped out leaving David to pay the obligations, and will be glad to learn that an officer, whom David has had upon Hause's track for some time, has got the young man in custody.

FRANKLIN.

The adjourned meeting of the Wool Growers convened at Tuttle's Hall, March 12th, and resolved to hold the annual public shearing at Franklin Centre the last Friday of April, 29th, and adopted the following constitution:

ART. 2. The object of this Association is to promote a friendly competition among breeders.

ART. 6. The officers of this association shall be president, vice president, secretary and treasurer.

ART. 7. An executive committee of five shall be chosen at the annual meeting, and the secretary of the association shall be the secretary thereof.

ART. 8. This constitution may be altered or amended at any regular meeting by a two-thirds vote of the members present. By-Laws may also be adopted by a majority of the members present.

FARMERS' SOCIAL CLUB.

The Farmers' Social Club met at Uncle John Rector's on March 10. A large attendance.

The minutes of the previous meeting being read and approved, the President appointed five members to act as committee of arrangements for our meeting to be held at G. Griswold's.

The following program was presented:

Singing by the company.
Ellen Fisher gave an excellent reading of a comic piece.
Essay upon dishwashing—Eva Rector.
Song—"The Strawberry Bed," by Kittie Griswold, Minnie Rector.
Essay—E. Russell.
Singing by the school children.

The subject "The best process of renovating land" was discussed. Mr. Benedict opened the discussion by saying he did not believe there was any poor land. There was quite a lengthy discussion and many opinions expressed, but all agreed that clover, barn-yard manure, plaster, and thorough cultivation, with drainage where needed, were sure processes of renovating land.

The following is the program of the next meeting which will be held at the residence of G. Griswold, March 18th.

Music.
Question—Raising of small fruits.—Opened by F. C. Rector, followed by E. Russell. The other members are expected to ask questions.
Essay upon fruit canning—Mrs. F. Horton.
Summary of the winter's meetings by the Secretary.

CHARLIE BIDWELL always did have a big and true heart. His last act of notable kindness was the appointment of Ancil K. Whitmore, his opponent in the late election, as deputy sheriff. Mr. Whitmore being a member of the L.S. railway detective force, it will be of considerable advantage to him in his work.

Wednesday evening of last week, about 7 o'clock as Dr. James A. Lesia, a practicing physician in Williamston of over thirty years' standing, was quietly reading in his office, he was assailed by James Fairbanks, of Stanton, who formerly resided in Williamston. Fairbanks had just arrived in town, having been gone about one year, and went directly from the depot to the doctor's office. When within three feet of the doctor he fired from a No. 22 calibre revolver at the doctor's head, the ball passing through his hair and lodging in the casing of the door, filling his face full of powder. The doctor covering his face with his hands and keeping quiet Fairbanks supposed he had killed him and went upon the street. Justice White, in hurrying to the scene of the affray, took Fairbanks in charge until the arrival of Marshal Vanneter, who put him in the lockup. The whole scene in the office was witnessed by two men.

BEGINNING AGAIN.

When sometimes our feet grow weary
On the rugged hills of life,
The path stretching long and dreary
With trial and labor rife,
We pause on the upward journey,
Glancing backward over valley and plain,
And sigh with an infinite longing
To return and "begin again."

For behind is the dew of the morning
With all its freshness and light,
And before are doubts and shadows,
And the chill and gloom of the night,
And we think of the sunny places
We passed so carelessly then,
And we sight, we pray we pray permit us
To return and begin again."

We think of the many dear ones,
Whose lives proceeded our, in tones
Whose loving thoughts and smiles
Were like rosy shimmer,
And sadly remember harsh words
We might have lightened then,
Are gladly weight or one hand
Could we "begin again."

And yet, how vain the seeking
Life's further press all of us on
And who would shrink from the darkness
Or sigh for the sunshine that's gone?
And it may be, not far on before us
With fairer places than then;
Our path may lead by still waters,
Though we may not "begin again."

Yes, upward and onward forever
Be our path on the hills of
But ever long a radiant dawning
With gladly trial and strife,
And Our Father's hand will lead us
Tenderly upward then,
Up the joy and peace of the better world
He'll let us "begin again."

WHEN THE SHIP COMES IN.

A sweet-faced woman and a sweet-faced child are wandering among the shipping docks of the great city. The woman is plainly dressed, but evidently in her best attire, and there is a touch of gentility in her finery, in the real lace collar, relics of better days, perhaps, the pearl ear-rings and the neat gloves. The child is neatly dressed, too, and as she clasps the woman's hands, looks over her guardian. But the woman's face is not at its best now; a careworn look and a faint wrinkle upon the pale forehead ages her, and lessens the charm of her features.

She is inquiring of dockmen, of the stevedores, of the loungers about the wharves, whether the brig Good Luck has come in. She always receives the same reply to her eager question, for the brig Good Luck has been lost a month ago, dashed on a lee-shore, and ground to pieces by the sea, and will never come in—never—never more.

If they told her, she wouldn't believe them, for the woman and her child have supreme faith that the brig Good Luck will come in soon with cargo and crew, though they have been asking the same question and praying the same prayer for many and many a day.

Then she goes across the street and winds her way along the bales and boxes and passing carts, and through all the hubbub and bustle of the wharf, and climbs a flight of stairs to where the brig owners have their office. They are used to seeing her. They smile sadly when she enters with the child, and look significantly at one another, as much as to say: "Poor thing! she's mad. No wonder, no wonder."

Mad! Yes, she is mad with "hope deferred," with anxiety to meet her husband, Caleb Shelter, master of the brig, her husband and the father of her child. Why does he stay away from her so long?

"Is the Good Luck in yet?" she asks of a clerk.

"Not yet, ma'am."

"She is expected, of course, to-day?"

"Of course."

"There's a vessel coming in now. I see the tall masts. Look! Look!" pointing out of the office window to the river front. "Maybe that's it! Look, dear, look! There's father's vessel, with father on board!"

The child clasps her little hands at the sight.

"Sorry to say that it ain't, ma'am," says the clerk, relapsing into his calculations and paying no more attention to the woman.

She stares out of the open window at the approaching vessel driven by a tug and then with a blank look upon her face, and a moan that is a heart-rending wail:

"No, Lilie, no! That is not the Good Luck. I see the figure-head. The figure-head of the Good Luck is an angel, a white and gold angel. No, no! that isn't it!"

"But my papa will soon come home, won't he, mamma?" whispered the child.

Old Mr. Tawman, who is the head of the establishment here, now comes from behind his desk, and approaching the woman and child, says in a kindly voice:

"Mrs. Shelter, sit down, make yourself as comfortable as you can in a dingy office like this. Here, little one, come here, give me a kiss. A bright, pretty little dear, Mrs. Shelter."

"She looks pale," said the mother, "she is tired; she has been walking too much."

The old gentleman sits down and lifts the little girl up on his knee and kisses her.

She winds her arms about his neck and exclaims:

"You'll tell my papa to come soon, won't you?"

"Yes, dear."

It was the habit of this firm to pay a sort of pension monthly to the widows of captains who were lost in their service. It was not much of a stipend, being only half-pay, but it was certainly a blessing in very, many cases. Mrs Shelter had always received her husband's money here, while he was at sea, or it was sent to her when she was sick or the weather was bad.

"Ah, Mr. Tawman, I'm sure the Good Luck will be in to-day."

"Certainly it will. What's to hinder it?" he answers.

He puts the child down and then goes over to his desk, and unlocking his drawer he takes out an account book and begins writing a receipt. Then he goes over into the cashier's room. While he is there the telegraph clerk calls him over.

Click, clickity click goes the magic instrument, repeating his dot and dash message.

"Hear that!" says the operator. "That's news for you!" The proprietor could read every word by its sound.

"It's like a message from God," says Mr. Tawman, reverently. "I must not tell her."

He comes back to where the woman is sitting, his face flushed with excitement, some strange excitement. He throws into her lap a bundle of bank notes.

"There, Mrs. Shelter, now go home. Take a car at the door."

"Oh, I'm not tired. And I should like to be here when the brig comes in. But I thank you so much."

Here little one, says the good-hearted Mr. Tawman, "here's something for you to buy candy with." He puts into her tiny outstretched hand a bright quarter of a dollar, and laughs at the wonder and delight of the little recipient.

"I'll keep this for papa."

Poor little thing, she is weary unto sleep. She coddles herself in the big arm chair and sings into slumber in an instant.

"Now, Mrs. Shelter, you've had no dinner," says Mr. Tawman.

"Oh, yes, sir."

"Yesterday, perhaps, but I mean to-day. Go down with Mr. Pelton, there, our young man, and get something to eat. You see we have arrangements for comforts of our clerks. We give them a hot dinner, and a good one, too. There is nobody there."

"Go down there and ask the waiter, George, addressing Mr. Pelton, whom he had summoned, to give this good lady a cup of tea and a piece of toast, and all that." Then pausing a moment, as if propriety and philanthropy are struggling for mastery in his mind:

"No, no, George. Tell Henderson to send the dinner up into the room here, that's better." The young man leaves the room. Then Mr. Tawman enters the office again and consults the telegraph operator.

"Send this message at once, Mr. Lindsay, if you please." He writes something and the operator clicks it off at once. It's a long message, a very long message indeed; but the President's message itself is not half so important, so interesting to those whom it concerns.

Then by the time the message is sent, the dinner is ready in Mr. Tawman's private office, when Mrs. Shelter partakes of it, but does not think proper to waken the weary child that she may eat too.

Then Mr. Tawman says: "Now you stay here, and I'll go and bring the little girl up here to-night."

"Oh!" exclaims the mother. "I have my Lilie with me always. You are so very good, though, sir; so very good! And is there no news of the Good Luck?"

"Not a word, I'm sorry to say."

"It can't be possible. The brig must come to-day."

"I'm sure I hope so, with all my heart and soul, Mrs. Shelter."

"I know you do," she responds with a sigh.

"Now go, I'm sorry you have to waken the child, but I suppose you can't help it."

"Come, Lilie," says the mother, touching her lightly on the shoulder.

The child with a start awakens and cries: "Is it my papa? Dear, dear papa?"

Then, seeing her disappointment she bursts into tears.

"Don't cry, dear, don't cry. The brig will come in. Don't cry!" The good old man speaks soothingly to the sobbing child; and the mother catching her hand walks slowly and sadly away, followed by Mr. Tawman, who lifts the little girl down stairs and helps both her and her mother into a car.

The next morning the woman is again loitering about the wharves with the same agonized inquiry. She again puts the question to the wharfmen, and again only receives the same answer. Then, as before, she seeks the office of the brig owners, still accompanied by her little girl, and asks:

"Has the brig Good Luck come in yet?"

"Not yet, ma'am."

She sighs and looks out the window at the shipping. She says she will wait for Mr. Tawman, and sits down.

When Mr. Tawman comes in, as usual, he greets her very kindly and kisses the little girl and says:

"I'm sorry the the brig isn't in yet."

"Will it be in to-day?"

"I hope so." And he goes behind his desk and looks over his letters. He has not long been engaged in his correspondence when a scream from the woman startles him.

She has risen and is pointing excitedly out of the window.

"Here is a ship coming in look! look!"

"That is not it," says a clerk, "that's a schooner."

"Oh, no!" adds Mr. Tawman; "that's not the Good Luck."

"It is! it is!" She darts from the office dragging the child after her, runs across the bustling wharf and to the very edge of the water.

Mr. Tawman rushes to the window opens it and calls to her. To no purpose however. All the clerks cluster about the window to watch her.

"The woman is mad," says one. "She is going to drown herself."

Mr. Tawman says quietly to the telegraph operator:

"It is the Mary."

The schooner is being towed up the river by a tug. She is making preparations to anchor in the stream opposite the wharf. All this time Mrs. Shelter is standing in the midst of a crowd of excited people waving her handkerchief and the little girl is waving hers.

"Look, look! There! There's a man overboard!" cried one of the clerks. A cry of alarm goes up from the wharf.

"Heavens!" exclaimed Mr. Tawman thoroughly aroused. "What does that mean?"

"He's swimming like a fish," says a clerk.

"He has landed. Hark at the cheers."

"Look! look!" shouted the operator. "She is hugging him, so is the little girl. It's Captain Shelter!"

"Thank God!" exclaimed Tawman; "pray heaven she may not sink under the shock. Poor woman. How she clings to the drenched man. Dear! dear!"

Then he puts on his hat and runs down the steps like a boy, and darts over to where husband and wife and child are united and happy.

"Ah!" he exclaimed, shaking the captain by the hand, and not caring for the gaping and wondering crowd all around him. "This is good luck, isn't it, eh? Did you get my telegram?"

When the man can speak he answers:

"Yes."

"I planned it all," chuckles old Mr. Tawman. "You see I got a dispatch yesterday from the Breakwater, saying that Captain Shelter had been picked upon a raft by the schooner Mary. I took for granted that the brig would come in, and come in it did. Owed to the office, every one of you, and after dinner and dry clothes, Cap., you'll have a talk about business. Come on."

March winds! The cruelest, coldest and black winds which prevail in March, makes a battle of life. It is always necessary to have a friend. It is a sore case the weakest colds and all lung diseases.

How Little Can a Person Live on?

This question is one of those most frequently asked, especially in these times. It is often put in reference to a family, also, by some young persons with a view to matrimony. Then the inquiry is: On how small an income is it safe to get married? No rule on the subject can be laid down; so much depends upon individual tastes and economy. We knew a wealthy merchant who began housekeeping on an income of $300 a year; and yet he managed to lay up something every year. He became rich, and after remaining rich many years, in consequence of the imprudence of a relative associated with him in business, he failed. But instead of taking the benefit of the bankrupt law and getting rid of his liabilities without paying them, as he easily might have done, he went resolutely to work, and through his indomitable energy and strict economy he paid off all his debts, and finally died in independent circumstances. Now, many young men in the same position in life would find the income on which he got married and laid up money, insufficient for their tailors' bill; yet this gentleman dressed with a scrupulous nicety that was the subject of general remark. So it is in everything; one man will make a dollar suffice where another would require at least five dollars, or perhaps more, and it is very difficult for the casual observer to tell wherein the difference lies. Perhaps the safest rule is, that whatever your income may be, if you can lay up something from it, then it is safe for you to get married. If you are not able to do this, then, though your income be abstractly speaking, large, you will still find it too small, relatively, to your expenses.

When and How to Hatch Bantams.

Bantams, providing they are all they should be in points and other qualities, are more desirable the smaller we can get them. They have been obtained by a systematic course of dwarfing for many years in the hands of expert breeders. To secure heavy, large and growthy fowls, we must hatch early and feed liberally to accomplish our object, but with bantams the reverse is the case in almost every particular. They must be hatched late in the hatching season, which is usually July or August, while the system of feeding must not tend toward forcing, else you will surely have overgrown specimens. Give them good care, food and attention, but not pamper them, and you will have some nice birds, providing you are breeding from good stock; and the best with these, as with any other stock whatever, is none too good.

Never set your Bantam eggs under a large hen, (such as Brahmas, Cochins, etc.,) or you will have the sorrowful experience of having about nine-tenths of them crushed, or perhaps the other tenth, too. Let the Bantam hen set on the eggs, and she will prove to be a good setter and a careful mother, especially if she is a year or more old. Young ones of these, like young ones of other breeds, are not as constant as are natural ones. Bantams, especially any of the different varieties of the Games, which are so small, can be left to run with the Cochins and Brahmas without any fear of mixing. Though they take up such a small space, they should have separate houses and yards allotted to them where it is convenient to do so.

Philosophy of Suicide.

Suicide has been made the subject of scientific analysis and investigation, and certain points in its "philosophy" may be considered to have been definitely settled. These are summed up by Dr Gray as follows:

1. Suicide, both in health and disease, is a violation of nature's laws.

2. Suicide though always an unnatural act, is, in a large proportion, if not the majority of the cases, committed by persons who are entirely sane.

3. Education and custom being powerful influences in overcoming the instincts of nature, and inducing suicide, the widespread publication of the names of suicides by introducing imitation, and by lessening the horror of the act through familiarity with it.

4. The teaching of any so-called philosophy and sensationalism which tend to the disregard of the truths of religion lead to suicide, breaking down the moral barrier and compounding the wrong of suicide, by rendering it a mere question of choice and expediency with each individual whether he will live or die.

5. Suicide is in no true sense an impulse, act in the sane and the insane it is the result of deliberation of more or less duration, and it is an act determined upon in the mind of the individual, from motives accepted by his judgment as sufficient, whether real or imaginary.

6. Suicide by the sane and the insane is frequently the result of hasty or wrong interpretation of facts, both in their magnitude and consequences.

General Putnam's Hasty Dinner.

Among the many sacrificial traditions and go the old story, so often pictured of Putnam leaving his plough in the furrow to hurry off to the war. So says a writer in the Boston Advertiser. Dr Frederick A. Putnam, a grand nephew of General Israel Putnam, tells the following story, which, so far as we know, is now making its way into print for the first time. "The General was about sitting down to dinner in my grandfather's, his brother's house, when he first news reached him that the British had marched from Boston to attack the Americans. There was most cracker smoking hot on the table when the pounding of a big drum was heard out of doors. All hurried out, and a darkey was seen coming down the street crying, 'The British have left Boston to lick the Americans!' Gen. Putnam's horse, a big black fellow that would eat no one else but his master, was ordered to be in front of the house. Putnam was urged to stay and eat his dinner, but he replied that he couldn't wait, he was off for Boston. Then he grabbed one of the roast chickens from the table, pulled it apart by the legs, and mounted his horse, gnawing the leaves as he rode off for Bunker Hill."

Christ is always with his people, by faith they keep near him. He is with them to counsel in difficulty, to strengthen in weakness, to comfort in sorrow, to guide in duty, to deliver in danger, to crown them with everlasting life in the article of death. Thanks be to God for a means so rich, kind and sweet.

—Some of the nerves in the human body are so exceedingly small that six of them, arranged in a row, are only equal to the thickness of a fine hair.

The Human Race.

A statistician in England, in studying a generation of a million people from birth to death, finds that one-fourth of them die before they reach five years; less than one-twenty-eighth between five and ten years; in the next five years the mortality is lower than at any other period; in the next five years an increase, especially among women—the influence of dangerous occupation—begins to be seen in the death rate. Eight times as many men as women die violent deaths. This is perceptible for twenty years. Consumption is prevalent, and accounts for one-half of the deaths from twenty to forty-five. From thirty-five to forty-five the effect of the wear and tear of the system are seen. At forty-five, the million is lessened to four hundred and twenty-one thousand one hundred and fifteen—death rate increasing rapidly. About one-sixth of the million is left at seventy-five; at eighty-five only thirty-eight thousand five hundred and sixty-five are left, and at one hundred, two hundred and two are left. At fifty-three, men and women surviving are about equal in number, and from fifty-five and outward the women exceed the men.

The Conversation of Women.

There can be no doubt that, as a rule, the readiness of women in conversation is greater than that of men. It is when they have nothing to say that women show their immense superiority in saying it. They can create conversation, which is the great social difficulty. Give a man a subject that he knows anything about, and unless he is really a fool or morbidly reticent, he can talk about it so as to make himself fairly intelligible, and perhaps interesting to those for whom the subject has any interest. But the power of conversation in some women, and not always those of remarkable ability, is the very art of making bricks without straw. They will talk to one an hour about nothing—that is, on no particular subject and with no particular object—and talk coherently and not foolishly, and very pleasantly, all the time. It would be very difficult, perhaps, for the listener to carry away with him any mental notes of what has been said; he may not be conscious of having had his old ones very much enlarged; but he will rise and go his way as one after a light and wholsome meal, sensibly cheered and refreshed.

Genius and Intemperance.

The remark is frequently heard that it is the most gifted, "generous" fellows who are the most apt to fall into intemperance. The saying is neither true nor useful. However it may have been formerly, it has come to pass now that, as Professor Swing suggests, the temperance reform has reached first the minds that are most gifted. "Many years ago," he says, "it was my good fortune to serve my country by being secretary of a temperance society, and in that official dignity I addressed letters of inquiry to presidents of colleges and professors, to ask what was the quality of the young men who in these days finished their college course by the use of ardent drinks. Long letters came from President Woolsey, of Yale, and from Horace Mann, then of Brown, and from Professor Moffat, of Princeton, and they all bore testimony that genius in these colleges and schools drank less than stupidity; that whisky was passing away from the higher order of mind, and was to be found only in possession of the sensual and less bright."

Man is a noble creature. Sunday morning he will come down town and spend sixty cents at a barber shop, making himself look sweet. He will spend as much more on a game of billiards, also get his boots blacked, buy two drinks for himself and a friend; making in all about two dollars for his personal gratification. He will then buy a box of strawberries for twenty-five cents, and go home and help eat them. The strawberries show that he is ready to deny himself, and that he never forgets his darling little wife.

Household Recipes.

Mock Mince Pies.—Four Boston crackers rolled, two-thirds cup cold water, one cup of molasses, half cup sugar, half cup vinegar, one egg, raisins and spices as for mince pie.

Ham Sandwiches.—Chop fine the lean of cold boiled ham; season with prepared mustard and black pepper. Add melted butter and sweet cream until like a paste; these spread between buttered slices of bread.

Squash Pie.—Bake, put through a colander; take two cups of squash, three of milk, two of sugar, two crackers rolled, two eggs, lemon to taste, or nutmeg or cinnamon. This makes two pies. Beat the whites light and stir in last.

Wheaten Gems.—One egg, one cup of sweet milk, three cups flour, one even tablespoon butter, or two of cream, two teaspoons baking powder; bake in gem pans in a hot oven, filling the pans one-third full. Have pans hot and well buttered when the batter is put on. Water may be used in the place of milk, and the egg may be omitted. Very nice.

Cream Sponge Cake.—One cup of sifted flour, one cup of granulated sugar, four eggs, beat the yolks and sugar thoroughly, then add the whites, beating again, then flour very lightly. Bake in layers in a quick oven. Make the cream with a little milk, the white of one egg and sufficient corn-starch to make it the consistency of thick cream, sweeten and flavor to taste. Make the icing for the top as for other cake, only not so stiff.

Chicken Pie.—Make a good biscuit crust; have the chicken boiled and seasoned as for stewed chicden, put it in a pan lined with the crust, adding gravy to nearly cover the chicken; put on a thick top crust, making a small slit in it, bake until you can scrape a fork on the under side without finding dough on it. Another way is to take the meat from the bones and mix it together before putting in a pan with the crust.

Eaton's Ice Cream Candy.—Squeeze the juice of one large lemon into a cup. Boil one and one-half pound moist sugar, two ounces of butter, one and a half teacups water, together with half the rind of the lemon, and when done (which may be known by its becoming quite crisp when dropped into cold water), set aside till the boiling has ceased, and then stir in the juice of the lemon, butter a dish and pour in about an inch thick. When cool take out peel (which may be dried), pull until white, draw out into sticks and check about four inches long with a knife. If you have no lemons, take two tablespoons vinegar and two teaspoonfuls lemon extract. The fire must be quick, and the candy stirred all the time.

Wash for the Hair.—In a pint bottle put a spoonful of olive oil and add two ounces of best spirits of ammonia or hartshorn; shake; then mix with three ounces of alcohol, and when thoroughly mixed fill the bottle with soft water. Remember to put in the order named or you will have "stuff," and no chemical union at all. To apply, take a spoonful or two of this, with a little warm water; dip a sponge or rag in and wet the scalp thoroughly; now rinse off in plenty of warm water, and you will be surprised at the amount of dirt, though you may have thought your head perfectly clean. For the heads of young infants it is just the thing, as it instantly removes the dirty scurf without pain or trouble. It should be rather weaker for a babe than for an adult.

Books.

There is no amusement more attainable, and certainly none more satisfactory, than that which is derived from the perusal of good books. They are companions of whose society we never grow weary, and they have this advantage over other friends: they are easily transported from place to place, they are always accessible and never intrude upon us when we wish to be alone. Within the compass of a small library we have the richest and most select thoughts of the learned and the gifted of all ages. There the poet, the philosopher, the historian stand ready to amuse and instruct us; and yet, how seldom do we consider this blessing as we should? Few of us comprehend how greatly we are indebted to the art of printing for some of the most pleasurable moments of our lives. In conversation with our friends, even the best of them, we are almost certain to degenerate into frivolity and nonsense, but in silent communion with the gifted ones upon our book-shelves, our thoughts are elevated, our ideas enlarged, and our lives ennobled. What a solace to those of us whom circumstances have thrown upon our own resources is a good book. Though confined within the walls of a narrow home, we are free to follow the armies of the Crusaders; we are free to ramble in the forests of merry England before the Conquest; or to wander amid the wonders of old Rome, and the riches of Persia. We can visit all lands with our own Bayard Taylor, or explore strange undeveloped Africa with Livingstone; yet all the while rest in our easiest chair by our favorite window. We see the Pyramids building, we hear the shouting of armies and feel the ground shake beneath their tread, we see the light of burning cities, and hear the shouts of victory, as well as the gentle sounds of pastoral life. Yes, books are indeed the "true Elysian fields where the spirits of the dead converse," and at all times we may enter without fear. And where else shall we find such company? Without undervaluing friendship, or any of the pleasures and sweets of social life, were we to recommend a friend for all emergencies, in sickness, in health, at home or in exile, by the fireside or in camp, in youth or in old age, we should say, take a small library of well selected and well tried books.

Train the Boys for Business.

There is one element in the home instruction of boys to which, says a Boston paper, too little attention has been given, and that is the cultivation of habits of punctuality, system, order, and responsibility. In too many households boys from twelve to seventeen years are too much administered to by loving mothers or other female members of the family. Boys' lives during those years are the halcyon days of their existence. Up in the morning just in season for breakfast, nothing to do but to start off early enough not to be late; looking upon an errand as taking too much time and memory away from enjoyment; little thought of personal appearance except when reminded by the mother to "spruce up" a little; finding his wardrobe always where mother put it—in fact, having nothing to do but enjoy himself.

Thus his life goes on until school ends. Then he is ready for business. He goes into an office where everything is system, order and precision. He is expected to keep things neat and orderly, sometimes kindle fires, file letters, do errands—in short, become a part of a nicely-regulated machine, where everything moves in systematic grooves, and each one is responsible for correctness in his department, and where, in place of ministers to his comfort, he finds task-masters, more or less lenient, to be sure, and everything in marked contrast to his previous life.

In many instances the change is too great. Errors become numerous, blunders, overlooked at first, get to be a matter of serious moment; then patience is overtasked, and the boy is told his services are no longer wanted. This is his first blow, and sometimes he never rallies from it. Then comes the surprise to the parents who, too often, never know the real cause, nor where they have failed in the training of their children.

What is wanted is for every boy to have something special to do; to have some duty at a definite hour, and to learn to watch for that time to come; to be answerable for a certain portion of the routine of the household; to be trained to anticipate the time when he may enter the ranks of business, and be fortified with habits of energy, accuracy, and application, often of more importance than superficial book learning.

The Wooden Shoe in France.

Sabots or wooden shoes are worn by at least one-half of the French people. The peasants and farmers have no others, and in cities and villages numbers of the laboring and poorer classes wear them. Few, perhaps, are aware of the great saving to the nation from this custom. An ordinary pair of sabots cost about 2 francs, or 40 cents, and they will last, without any repairs, at least two years. Taking the population of France to be forty millions, it is safe to estimate that the shoes of twenty millions of them cost the same number of francs yearly, or $4,000,000. Assuming the population of the United States to be about the same as that of France, and comparing the foot gear of the same class of Americans with that of the French referred to, it is no exaggeration to conclude that their leather boots and shoes, with repairs, cost them annually $5 per head, or $100,000,000. The French thus save as compared with the Americans, on this one item alone, $95,000,000 yearly—about equal to the annual interest of $1,950,000,000 at 5 per cent. It is by such savings that we can account for the immense wealth of France; for it is an axiom that the economies of an individual, and more particularly of a class, surely increase the resources of a nation. This great saving is not the only advantage of sabots. Wood is a much better nonconductor of heat and far more impenetrable to moisture than leather; and with the thick woolen "chaussette," or short sock, always worn with sabots, the feet are kept dryer and warmer than they could possibly be by any leather boots or shoes; for this reason they are also much worn in France by the higher classes who live in the country.

—To him whom the science of nature delights, every object brings new proof of the existence of a Deity, and everything that proves this gives cause for admiration. If he lifts his eyes to the clouds, finds he not the heavens full of wonders? If he looks down to the earth, does not the worm proclaim a Master? Could less than Omnipotence have formed and framed these things?

MONEY—FARMS—ABSTRACTS.

If you want to hire money at very low rates.

If you have money to loan.

If you want to buy a farm or a home.

If you want to sell your real estate.

If you want a deed or mortgage correctly made.

If you want a complete abstract of title. Call on A. L. Bliss.

Among other Farms for sale I have one of 160 acres and one of 80 acres in Palmyra both being well tiled and fenced, and first class in every respect, with four market towns within easy driving distance, in good neighborhood. Also 125 acre farm 1½ miles west of river road from Deerfield. Also 160 acre farm and 90 acre farm, and 20 acre farm in Riga, any of which are decided bargains, and good reasons given for naming low prices.

Every purchaser of Lands should insist on being furnished an abstract of title, for our experience of more than 20 years shows that not more than one title in ten is perfect of record, and every week purchases agreed upon are abandoned owing to imperfections of title. I have a good carriage or farm horse, 1300 lbs. in weight for sale at a bargain.

A few thousand dollars now on hand to loan at six per cent, and on long time if desired.

Examiner of Titles, Loan and Land Agent, Adrian Mich.

According to Humboldt the oldest town in the world is Jakutsk, 5,000 inhabitants, in Eastern Sibera. It is not only the oldest, but probably also, the coldest. The ground remains alwas frozen to the depth of 200 feet, except in midsummer, when it thaws three feet at the surface. The mean temperature for the year is 13.7 degrees F. For ten days in August the thermometer goes as high as 85 degrees. From November to February the temperature remains between 42 and 68 degrees below zero. The river Lena remains frozen for the nine months of the year.

SELECT LIST OF LOCAL NEWSPAPERS.

An advertiser who spends upwards of $5,000 a year, and who increased less than $850 of it in this List, writes: "Your Select Local List paid me better last year THAN ALL THE OTHER ADVERTISING I DID."

IT IS NOT A CO-OPERATIVE LIST.

IT IS NOT A CHEAP LIST.

IT IS AN HONEST LIST.

The catalogue states exactly what the papers are: When the name of a paper is printed in FULL FACE TYPE it is in every instance the BEST.—When printed in CAPITALS it is the ONLY paper in the place. The list gives the population of every town and the circulation of every paper.

The rates charged for advertising are barely one-fifth the publishers' schedule. The price for single States ranges from $2 to $80. The price for one inch one month in the entire list is $635. The regular rates of the papers for the same space and time are $2,980.14. The list includes 952 newspapers of which 187 are issued DAILY and 765 WEEKLY. They are located in 788 different cities and towns, of which 26 are State Capitals, 365 places of over 5,000 population, and 468 County Seats. For copy of List and other information, address GEO. P. Cathartic Pills

Combine the choicest cathartic principles in medicine, in proportions accurately adjusted to secure activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. They are the result of years of careful study and practical experiment, and are the most effectual remedy yet discovered for diseases caused by derangement of the stomach, liver, and bowels, which require prompt and effectual treatment. Ayer's Pills are specially applicable to this class of diseases. They act directly on the digestive and assimilative processes, and restore regular healthy action. Their extensive use by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, is one of the many proofs of their value as a safe, sure, and perfectly reliable purgative medicine. Being compounded of the concentrated virtues of purely vegetable substances, they are positively free from calomel or any injurious properties, and can be administered to children with perfect safety.

Ayer's Pills are an effectual cure for Constipation or Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Foul Stomach and Breath, Dizziness, Headache, Loss of Memory, Numbness, Biliousness, Jaundice, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Dropsy, Tumors, Worms, Neuralgia, Colic, Gripes, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Gout, Piles, Disorders of the Liver, and all other diseases resulting from a disordered state of the digestive apparatus.

As a Dinner Pill they have no equal.

While gentle in their action, these Pills are the most thorough and searching cathartic that can be employed, and never give pain unless the bowels are inflamed, and then their influence is healing. They stimulate the appetite and digestive organs, they operate to purify and enrich the blood, and impart renewed health and vigor to the whole system.

MICHIGAN TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

The State Teachers' Institute for Lenawee county will be held at Hudson, commencing at 2 o'clock P. M., Monday, March 28, and closing Friday following. Prof. W. W. Wendell, local committee.

Gentlemen of eminent learning and of successful experience as educators have been engaged to give instruction in the various branches of common school studies, and in the theory and practice of teaching and governing schools. The State has wisely judged that the education of its youth ought not to be intrusted to those who have made no special preparation for the work. It has therefore provided for Institutes in the several counties as the readiest and most efficient means of providing to the great body of the teachers of the State opportunities for fitting themselves for the duties of their calling.

It is hoped that all teachers, and those proposing to become teachers, will respond to this action of the State by availing themselves of the advantages offered by these institutes.

The morning and afternoon sessions will be devoted to the discussion of topics of particular interest to teachers, while the evening lectures will be of a popular character.

Tuition at this Institute is absolutely free. Teachers will be furnished with board gratuitously or at reduced rates.

Full particulars in regard to board, etc., may be obtained upon application to the local committee.

THE FAIR CIRCUIT.

Representatives of the Ohio state, Northern Ohio, Tri-State, Michigan state, Indiana state and northern Indiana state fairs met in Toledo, Wednesday, March 9th, to make arrangements for the circuit. The societies amalgamated by adopting the name of "The Ohio, Michigan, and Indiana Agricultural and Mechanical Fair Circuit. The following resolutions were adopted:

1. That a large single sheet circuit poster, in two colors, announcing the name, date, place of holding, and name and address of the secretary of each fair in the circuit, be prepared, and of which each association in the circuit shall receive not less than 200, the expense to be pro-rated and be paid for by the associations jointly.

2. That it is the sense of this committee that no premiums be offered on musical instruments, sewing machines, farm implements, carriages, wagons and vehicles of all kinds, but that all persons desiring to exhibit are invited to do so, and accommodations will be afforded them to exhibit articles in these classes to good advantage.

3. That the various fair associations here represented shall endeavor to so arrange with the various railroads for the carying of freights, for exhibition at any of the fairs in this circuit, that exhibitors shall be permitted to ship from one fair to another, through the circuit, and be entitled to whatever benefits of reduced or free freights are agreed upon by the companies, for articles and animals that have been exhibited and have not changed ownership.

THE Adrian Times of Tuesday has the following. The Times seems to be better posted about our affairs than we ourselves are. We do not apprehend that any serious consequences will arise from this matter:

Tecumseh, as the readers of the Times are aware, is reaching out for the Webster wind mill factory. Citizens of the village showed Col. Sterling about the place yesterday, and talked deliriously concerning the Toledo and Milwaukee road, upon which no one but a few visionary residents of the ancient county seat ever expects to see dirt fly. Tecumseh has a building—the old agricultural works—well adapted for the manufactory, which is now used as a planing mill. The colonel thinks the company could not improve much on the building if they should build, but he is far from sanguine concerning the projected railway. The citizens of Tecumseh made no proposition to the company, but will do so in a few days.

Mr. Vennor predicts: "The winter of 1881 is not over yet by any means. There are yet at least three storm periods in this month, namely, on the 12th, 13th or 14th, on the 16th and 17th, and lastly on the 20th and 21st. The last two periods will give us heavy snow falls, one of which is likely to be the heaviest fall of the winter. This will be pretty general over a large part of North America, and is likely to cross over to Great Britain. There will also be one more cold dip of considerable severity. The month will end with rain and slush.

Of the members of the old Cabinet ex-President Hayes hopes to live quietly for a time at Fremont; ex-Secretary Evarts goes as Chairman of the United States Representation to the Monetary Conference; ex-Secretary Goff resumes his old place as District Attorney of Western Virginia; ex-Attorney General Devins resumes his Boston law practice; ex-Secretary Schurz is to edit a paper in St. Louis; ex-Postmaster General Maynard and ex-Secretary Ramsey will find solace from politics in preparing cases in Tennessee and Minnesota, and ex-Vice President Wheeler contemplates a trip to Europe.

A suit for $200,000 damages was entered in the Circuit Court of the District of Columbia, by Charles D. Gilmore, a claim agent and land bounty broker, against Carl Schurz, ex-Secretary of the Interior, for injuries alleged to have been done to Gilmore by his disbarment, on April 14, 1880, from practice before the Interior Department. The action was taken by Mr. Schurz after an investigation of the charge against Gilmore of having bribed F. O. Ball, a clerk in the land office. The plaintiff claims he had spent the amount claimed in advertising and otherwise preparing to carry on an extensive business as a claim attorney. Mr. Schurz issued an order that he should not be recognized as an attorney in any claim before any bureau of the Interior Department. This, he claims, affected his fees, amounting to nearly $3,000,000.

Railway circles have been deeply interested in the struggle for possession of the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore road. About two weeks ago Nathaniel Thayer, of Boston, who owned a minor interest, contracted to give control to Gould and Jarrett, at the rate of $70 per share. Boston people, who have never expressed any admiration for the methods employed by Jay Gould, held 86 per cent. of the stock of the road, which was at once placed in the hands of a committee appointed to protect their interests. At midnight on Monday an offer was accepted from the Pennsylvania railroad to pay $80 per share for enough stock to control the Wilmington track. The Baltimore and Ohio road is thus shut out of New York and Philadelphia, and will be compelled to commence active operations for relief under the charter recently granted by the legislature of Delaware. Mr. Thayer is responsible to the Gould syndicate for 120,000 shares of Wilmington stock at $70, and has but 8,000 with which to commence filling his shorts. The Pennsylvania railroad has empowered its directors to issue 400,000 shares of new stock to pay for the Wilmington line. Gould has been whipped for the first time since Sel- over threw him into the arena in Wall street.

CONGRESSIONAL.

MARCH 7.—Senators Blaine and Kirkwood yesterday forwarded their resignations to the Governors of their respective States. The Maine Legislature will doubtless elect Frye as Blaine's successor. The Iowa Legislature not being in session, the Governor will probably appoint James Wilson to fill the unexpired term of Kirkwood. Windom's resignation was sent on Monday.

The death of Carpenter, of Wisconsin, with Allison and Edmunds absent, and the Senators selected for a Cabinet position having resigned, leaves the Democrats free to organize the committees to their liking. Edmunds and Mahone have not yet appeared in the Senate to be sworn. If the President desired to fill many committees they should have been appointed for reference and consideration as soon as the Senate went into executive session.

Messrs. Blaine, Windom and Kirkwood left the Senate and retired to the Senator's private room in the rear of the lobby. The session was mainly devoted to discussing whether the nominations outside of those who were members of the Senate should or should not be referred to the committees.

Mr. Cameron made a speech in favor of postponing action on all the nominations except those of Senators Windom, Blaine and Kirkwood.

Mr. Conkling supported Mr. Cameron in that view. No personal objection was made to the other nominations, the arguments of the two Senators being based on the ground of precedent. It was evident that the Democratic Senators were all in favor of the confirmation of the Cabinet, and they, being backed by a majority of the Republicans, induced Mr. Cameron finally to move that MacVeagh be confirmed.

Messrs. Pendleton, Beck, Davis (Ill.,) and Voorhees spoke on the motion.

Mr. Beck said that if the Democratic party desired to be buried for twenty-five years to come it had better delay a confirmation of the son of Abraham Lincoln.

Mr. Davis sided with Cameron.

Mr. Pendleton favored an immediate confirmation, and a vote being taken, the confirmations were promptly made.

At the conclusion of the session Messrs. Blaine, Windom, and Kirkwood were the recipients of congratulations.

MARCH 8.—The Senate convened at noon. The galleries were well filled with spectators, and a large number of the House occupied seats on the floor of the Senate, the impression prevailing that the Democrats would move to organize the committees.

Communications were laid before the Senate from ex-Senators Kirkwood and Blaine, announcing that they had forwarded to the governors of their respective states their resignations as members of the Senate. The communications were ordered placed on the files of the Senate.

At 12:30 a message from the President was announced, and, upon motion of Mr. Bayard, the Senate went into executive session.

When the doors were re-opened, the Senate adjourned until to-morrow.

MARCH 9.—The Senate convened at noon.

A telegram from the Governor of Iowa was read, announcing the appointment of J. W. McDill to fill the unexpired term of Senator Kirkwood.

A message from the President was received, and the Senate went into executive session. Upon re-opening the doors the Senate adjourned.

MARCH 10.—Immediately upon the assembling of the Senate, a message from the President was received.

Mr. Pendleton offered a resolution providing for the organization of the standing committees of the Senate.

The resolution was read, subject to objection raised by Mr. Anthony.

After reading the resolution, Mr. Anthony moved that it be printed and lie on the table, the subject to be called up to-morrow. Agreed to.

Mr. Pendleton then offered a resolution providing for the organization of the Select Committees, which was disposed of in a similar manner.

The Senate then went into executive session.

When the doors were re-opened the Senate adjourned.

MARCH 11.—Mr. Edmunds took the oath of office for a new term.

A resolution was adopted calling on the attorney general for reports made last session concerning the operations of the United States Marshal and other officials in the west district of Virginia.

Mr. Pendleton called up a resolution for the formation of the Senate committees.

Mr. Davis, of Illinois, declined the chairmanship of the Judiciary committee, and moved to substitute the name of Mr. Garland, of Arkansas, for the position.

The Vice President sustained a point of order raised by Mr. Conkling, that the resolution for the re-organization of the Senate committee is not now in order.

The decision was appealed from by Mr. Pendleton.

Messrs. Hill, of Georgia, Garland, and Pendleton argued that the decision of the Vice President should be overruled.

Before the vote was taken on the appeal from the decision of the Vice President, but after quite a long discussion, the Senate went into executive session.

It was finally agreed that the point of order and appeal from the decision of the chair in regard to the pending resolution should both be withdrawn and the resolution be allowed to come before the Senate for consideration on its merits Monday next.

When the doors re-opened the Senate adjourned until Monday. The point of order raised by Conkling was that the resolution was not now in order. It changed the rule of the Senate, and the notice of the intended change must be given in writing and laid over one day under the rules.

Mr. Pendleton contended that the resolution was a proceeding provided for under rule 46.

The executive session was almost wholly consumed in an ineffectual attempt to reach an agreement as to fixing a day when a final vote might be allowed to be taken without obstruction on the Democratic list of committees.

No nominations were considered.

Owing to a clerical error Mr. Sherman had been placed on the committee on Judiciary instead of Allison. The correction was made.

The revival work at Springville, commencing February 6th and closing March 11th, was conceded by old residents the greatest victory for Christ and the gospel that has been done in that community for forty years. The various issues which had so long been at work rooting out vital piety received a terrible blow. Rev. J. C. Higgins, the Evangelist, who assisted in the work is a mighty man in the name of the Lord. As the result of his labors about seventy-five have professed faith in Christ.

MONDAY, March 14th, the Evening Record made its appearance in Adrian. It is a two cent daily published by R. I. Bonner and E. D. Maun. The enterprise is a new one in this county, but it is more than probable that a two cent paper will meet with flattering success. The name of Bonner insures the patrons of the paper a live, newsy sheet, and we trust that the gentlemen may realize their fondest hopes.

MILLING ENTERPRISE.

A Revolution in Tecumseh Flouring Mills —The Capacity Increased One Hundred Per Cent.

For some time past the flouring mills of Messrs Hayden and Comfort have been shut down for the purpose of putting in new machinery. Last Wednesday morning Mr. Hayden had everything ready and the mill was started. In the afternoon an attache of the HERALD office was dispatched to be initiated into the new art.

As soon as he entered the mill he saw that something was the matter. Mr. Root, the business manager, and Mr. Wilson the head miller, were smiling all over, the other millers were singing and seemed as happy as a family over a newly born babe; even the belts and the cog wheels made joyous music. The HERALD man made known his purpose, whereupon he was placed in charge of Mr. Wilson who kindly assented to show him the machinery.

Upon the first floor stands the principal part of the machinery, where the wheat is cracked. There are five double sets of corrugated rolls, through all of which the wheat passes. It is poured from the hopper into the first pair of rolls which crack the kernels into a few pieces, thence it passes into a sieve made of coarse cloth and the little flour that there is, is bolted through and the larger pieces of wheat pass on into a second set of rolls where it is cracked into finer particles and again bolted. This process is kept up each succeeding pair of rolls cracking the glutinous portion of the kernel into finer particles until the fifth pair of rolls crack it so fine that all the starchy portions of the wheat pass through the flour and leave the mere bran and the germ of the wheat in the bolter. This is the process and the advantages of it over the old method with stones, are that the bran is never mixed with the flour, thus producing a finer and whiter quality, the friction of the rolls is not so great as that of the stones, so that when the flour comes out of the bolter it is cool and ready for packing, and much more the capacity of rolls for cracking, is 50 per cent. greater with the same power than the capacity of the eight run of stone that Mr. Hayden formerly had in the mill. The process does away with stone dressing, thus saving time and labor. When Mr. Wilson had finished his explanation of the rolls he told the reporter he would show him how the purifying was done. He led the way through the upper stories of the mills, crawling over large beams and supporting timbers covered with the white dust of many years. Here Mr. Hayden had placed six of the largest purifyers he could obtain, and one of a smaller size. In these the flour and middlings passed through a process by which the several grades are manufactured. By the time the reporter reached the first floor again he was fully convinced that he understood the purifying process, for he was "whiter than snow."

The rolls are from the Stevens Roller Co., of Buffalo, N. Y., and were first brought into use last June in Wisconsin, where, Mr. Hayden hear of them, sent Mr. Wilson to see how they worked. Mr. Wilson came back satisfied of their superiority, and induced Mr. Hayden to order five double sets and two single.

The cost of the new departure will reach nearly $15,000, but Mr. Root was confident that it was a paying investment. They now grind 80 bushels of wheat per hour, manufacturing 400 barrels of flour each day, while they formerly turned out only 200.

There are only three other mills in the state using them and one of those is the mill of Woolston Comfort of this place. All this flour together with the large quantity manufactured each week by Beck Bros. and Woolston Comfort goes to foreign ports in Scotland, England, Ireland and France. The departure is one worthy of considerable credit as it adds greatly to the already great repute of Tecumseh as a place where the best brands of flour are made in enormous quantities.

THE increasing popularity of the co-operative stores in England has furnished the text to Charles Barnard for a brief article in Scribner for April, entitled, "The Shoppers' Rebellion." He points out the effect which this successful English movement has already had on this side of the water, and predicts a more thorough revolution in the present relations of shopper and shopkeeper. The same number will have an account of the new co-operative apartment-house system, now meeting with much favor in New York. It will be accompanied by estimates and diagrams.

The Missing Rhymes.

The poem with comments upon it given below, which were published in the Indianapolis Herald, is one of the most remarkable in the English language, remarkable for its peculiar rhyme and pozzle and depth of study; and we would like to see if any of our readers can solve it; or, in other words, put the missing rhymes to it, according to the rule laid down, which is as follows:

1st. The rhyming word must have a meaning in keeping with the context, line and verse.

2nd. After the missing word of the first line is found, the missing word of the second line must be exactly the same, with the exception of having only one letter prefixed to it; and the missing word of the third line must be exactly the same as the second, with just one letter more prefixed to it, and all these must be English words, in unison with the whole poem.

To give a clear idea of what is meant, we will insert the missing rhymes of the first stanza:

The captain strode from fore to AFT,
As lordly on his simple RAFT
As though it were some noble CRAFT

Now it will be observed that these rhymes make good sense with what precedes them; and that the second is made from the first by prefixing one letter; and the third from the second, by prefixing one more letter, and all three rhyme and give sense to the whole stanza, which otherwise would be simply nonsense. The first rhyme word is aft; the second is also aft, with only the prefix of the letter R, which makes the word raft; and the third is raft, with only another prefix of the letter C, which makes it craft. And so it goes on down through the whole poem, which is richly worth the study of old and young, the preceptor and his pupils, as ingeniously showing of what wonderful combinations our language is capable.

To give our readers a good fair start, we will here insert the rhymes of the second verse:

He shouted, shoved and ordered, AND
The floating warehouse brought to LAND
Then changing tone, from blunt to BLAND.

Here is the poem:

Cisterns.

We fear many of our readers who have cisterns and depend upon them for their supply of water for family use, hardly realize the importance of keeping them sweet and clean. Rain water as it comes down from the clouds is probably as pure as any water can be, but after it has washed over a roof and down the conductors into the cistern, carrying with it dust, leaves and other rubbish that may have gathered on the roof or in the gutters, it is not strange that the cistern should need to be cleaned out every year or two. If the cistern is not much used, the water is quite likely to become bad. It may look all right, and not taste very bad either, and yet not be healthful. Of course all cistern water should be filtered, and a soft brick filter is perhaps the best; but even then it will become necessary to clean the cistern as often as every two years, and better every year.

An Unfinished Tale.

Mr. Harkins laid down his knife and fork at the supper table, and said to his wife and daughter:

"I've got something to say, and I want you folks to pay strict attention, because I don't want to tell the story over three or four times, as I generally have to do."

It had been Harkins' experience that when he started to tell anything, he always had to tell it over again, and he was getting tired of it.

Mrs. H. bristled up at once, and intimated that she would like to know the time when he couldn't talk and they wouldn't listen.

The daughter thought pa was acting shameful.

"Ma and me always listens!" she added.

"Well," said Harkins, catching his wife's eye, "Mrs. Browbeaker was in from the country to-day, and her four children were with her—"

"That girl has made the tea too strong," interrupted Mrs. Harkins, going out to the kitchen to get some hot water.

"Had her four children with her," continued Harkins to his daughter. "They came in the old family carriage and came to my office. Mrs. B. said she thought it was time her husband was making his will, and asked me—"

"Who's that that has made his will?" interrupted Mrs. Harkins, as she returned from the kitchen.

"Mr. Browbeaker, ma," said the daughter.

"Who said Browbeaker had made his will?" asked Harkins glaring at his daughter.

"Why, didn't you say so, pa?"

"I said Mrs. Browbeaker asked me if it wasn't time he was making a will. That's about as near as you women ever come to anything."

"Why, was Mrs. Browbeaker in town to-day?" said Mrs. Harkins.

"Land of Goshen, woman! didn't I tell you she was," exclaimed Harkins.

"James," said Mrs. Harkins, speaking to the oldest boy, "you must go out to Mrs. Browbeaker's to-morrow. I want that recipe of hers for pickling. She promised it to me long ago."

"I says to Mrs. Browbeaker," continued Harkins, "that I thought her husband was good for many years yet, however—"

"Ma," said the daughter, "that summer silk of mine is torn. I wish you would mend it."

"I told you two or three days ago that you shouldn't wear that dress. You are the most careless child I ever saw—"

"However," continued Harkins, "I told her, however, it might be well for him to draw up the document. There's no telling when death will overtake us."

"Why, who is dead now, Mr. Harkins?" asked Mrs. H.

"Nobody. I was telling you about Browbeaker."

"Oh, yes, what did you say he came to town for?"

"I didn't say he came to town," snapped Harkins. "I said Mrs. B. and the children were in."

"Well, you needn't snap a body's head off," replied Mrs. Harkins, bristling up. "You said that when I was out. What bill is this she wants to collect?"

"I said," replied Harkins, with a frown, "I said she was here to see about her husband making a will."

"When was she here?"

"This morning."

"Oh!"

"Mrs. Browbeaker, agreed with me," said Harkins, taking up the thread of his narrative, "and said she had noticed of late, that Mr. B. showed signs of failing health. He was getting white, and his constitution was never of the strongest. She asked me to invite Browbeaker to run into the office some time—"

Here Mrs. Harkins, who had been keeping up a conversation with the daughter about the singing of the church choir, chirruped:

"La, me, what does he want to run for office for?"

"Well, I'm gormed," said Harkins, thrusting his hands deep into his pants pockets, stretching his legs out under the table and staring indignantly, "who under the canopy said anything about running for office? I said 'run into my office;' but that's near enough—close as you ever get to anything. By George, it was only the other day I introduced you to Rev. Mr. Lamkin, and in ten minutes you were calling him 'Dr. Sheepskin.' You can't even quote that old Pinafore gag, 'hardly ever,' correctly. You—you—by jings!" and, finding he couldn't do justice to the subject, he relapsed, with his chin on his bosom and his ears down below his collar.

And then it would have made the ancient martyrs assumed of themselves to see the air of patience and resignation these women put on as they talked of the blue blood in their veins, and cited the plebeian stock from which the Harkinses sprang, and guessed they had been around, and seen something in their lives, and allowed it was a pity if they couldn't speak above a whisper when the head of the family was around.

Origin of the Term "Uncle Sam."

Immediately after the last declaration of war with England, Elbert Anderson, of New York, then contractor, visited Troy, on the Hudson, where was concentrated and where he purchased a large quantity of provisions—beef, pork, etc. The inspectors of these articles at that place were Messrs. Ebenezer and Samuel Wilson. The latter gentleman (invariaby known as Uncle Sam) generally superintended in person a large number of workmen, who, on this occasion, were employed in hunting over the provisions purchased by the contractor for the army. The casks were marked "E. A.—U. S." This work fell to the lot of a facetious fellow in the employ of the Messrs. Wilson, who, on being asked by some of his fellow workmen the meaning of the mark (for the letters U. S., for United States were then almost entirely new to them) said he did not know, unless it meant Elbert Anderson and "Uncle Sam" Wilson. The joke took upon the workmen, and passed currently, and "Uncle Sam" himself being present was occasionally rallied by them on the increasing extent of his possessions. Many of these workmen being of a character denominated "food for powder," were found shortly after following the recruiting drum and pushing toward the frontier lines, for the double purpose of meeting the enemy and of eating the provisions they had lately labored to put in good order. Their old jokes accompanied them, and, before the first campaign ended, this identical one first appeared in print; it gained favor rapidly till it penetrated and was recognized in every part of the country, and will, no doubt, continue so while the United States remain a nation.

Of Interest to Ex-Soldiers.

The Indianapolis Journal has compiled the following points of interest to ex-soldiers relating to the bounty laws. Those who are interested would do well to cut out and preserve it:

"No bounty paid to volunteers for enlistments before the commencement of the rebellion, April 12, 1861; nor after April 30, 1865, in any case—nor for 100 days, or three, six and nine months men.

"1. Decision of supreme court, March 14, 1870, and act April 22, 1872. This applies only to enlistments for three years, prior to July 22, 1861, and since the commencement of the rebellion. All volunteers who enlisted for three years prior to July 22, 1861, and who were mustered into the service for, three years before August 6, 1861, are entitled to $100 bounty, if they have been honorably discharged and have not received the same for such service. Those discharged for promotion by way of favor are not entitled to this bounty.

"2. Act of July 22, 1861, gives $100 bounty for two and three years volunteers, from April 12, 1861, to December 24, 1863 (except veteran volunteers and recruits for old organizations), and also from April 1, 1864, to July 18, 1864, if they served 2 years or more as enlisted men, or were honorably discharged as such on account of wounds received in line of duty before two years' service.

"Also additional bounty, act July 28, 1866, $100 to 3 years' men from April 19, 1861, and $50 to 2 years' men from April 14, 1861, for same enlistments and conditions as stated in 'No. 2,' if not entitled to receive a greater bounty than $100 under previous laws for all other enlistments: except those discharged for promotion or by way of favor, and drafted men and substitutes.

"3. Act March 3, 1863, gives $100 bounty only to drafted men and their substitutes enrolled for 3 years, from March 3, 1863, to September 5, 1864, if they served 2 years or more, or were discharged on account of wounds received in line of duty before 2 years' service.

"4. A bounty of $300 to volunteer recruits to 'old' organizations (that is, those that had been completed and had left the state to which they belonged), for 3 years' enlistments, from October 24, 1863, to April 1, 1864, paid in instalments as follows: $60 in advance, and $40 after 2, 6, 12, 18, 24 and 36 months, respectively. Also to new organizations, from December 24, 1863, to April 1, 1864, $300 to volunteer recruits, same as in 'No. 4.'

"5. Four hundred dollars to veteran volunteers (that is, those enlisted for 3 years, and who had previously served consecutive months in the army), from January 1, 1863, to April 1, 1864, payable as follows: Advance, $25 (or $60 after September 28, 1863), and $50 after each 2, 6, 12, 18, 24, 30 months, and the balance at expiration of service. Soldiers who had rendered 9 months' consecutive service in the army were permitted to reenlist in another organization after January 1, 1864, and prior to April 1, 1864, and become veterans. If they re-enlisted in the same regiment, they must have previously served 2 years or have been discharged by reason of wounds received in line of duty in order to become veterans, and these were probably paid all bounty due for first service.

"6. Act July 4, 1864. Volunteers enlisted for 1, 2 and 3 years, from July 18, 1864, to April 30, 1865, were paid $100 for 1 year; $200 for 2 years; and $300 for 3 years, in equal instalments; one-third on muster in, one-third at expiration of one-half the term, and the balance at the expiration of the full term of service. And the first corps United States veteran volunteers ('Hancock' corps), $300 in advance in addition to that stated in No. 6.

"7. Colored troops, act July 15, 1864 and March 3, 1865. Colored men, enlisting as volunteers from April 12, 1861, to July 18, 1864, are entitled to the same bounty as white volunteers for the same period.

"Also, colored recruits from October 17, 1863, to June 15, 1864, to the same bounty as white volunteer recruits, if enrolled and subject to draft at the time of enlistment.

"8. Act March 3, 1865, and join resolution April 12, 1866. All soldiers discharged because of wounds received in battle or in line of duty are entitled to receive the same bounty they would have received if they had served their full term of enlistment.

The Coldest Town on the Globe.

This is Jakutsk (or Yakootsk) chief town of the province of that name in Eastern Siberia, on the left bank of the River Lena, sixty-two degrees one minute north, longitude 149 degrees forty-four minutes east, and distant from St. Petersburg 5,951 miles. The ground remains continuously frozen to the depth of 200 feet, except in midsummer, when it thaws three feet at the surface.

During ten days in August the thermometer marks eighty-five degrees, but from November to February it ranges from forty-two to sixty-eight degrees below zero, and the river is solid ice for nine months out of the twelve.

The entire industry of the place—population about 5,000—is comprised in candle works, and yet it is the principal market of Eastern Siberia for traffic with the hunting tribes of Buriats. The former, mostly nomadic, having large herds of horses and cattle, bring to market butter, which is sent on horseback to the port of Okhotsk. The Buriats, also nomadic, bring quantities of skins of sables, foxes, martens, hares, squirrels and the like, and many of them are sold at the great fair in June, which with May, is the active period of the year.

In May the collected goods are conveyed to the sea-ports, whence they are sent in every direction. The merchandise, chiefly furs and mammoth tusks, sold at the fair amount in value to 40,000 roubles (300,000).

Onions and Insomnia.

Frank Buckland says that onions, taken before going to bed, are the best preventives of sleeplessness; and we know several who are troubled that way that use them. If properly boiled, so as to get the twang out of them, the onion is a most delicate vegetable. To every quart of onions add a quart of cold water, with half a tablespoonful of salt. Boil not too fast for two hours. Drain in a colander thoroughly and allow to get cold. Make a sauce with a tablespoonful of butter, the same of flour, and one-half pint of milk; rub butter and flour perfectly together, with a pitch of black pepper. Boil milk, which pour over flour and butter, and stir all the time to keep smooth. Put onions in sauce and let them heat until the same boils. Ought to be served rather dry.

Doing Up Men's Linen.

A husband complained that his shirt bosom and collars were badly done up, and the case was referred to a knowing shirtmaker, and his answer was worthy the attention of housekeepers.

"Yes," said the man "the fault is with your laundress. While doing up your collars, she stretches them the wrong way. Damp linen is very pliable, and a good pull will alter a fourteenth a fifteen inch collar in the twinkling of an eye. She ought to starch them crosswise instead of lengthwise, particularly in the neighborhood of the neck. A lengthwise pull will draw the front of the neckband somewhat under your chin, where it was never meant to go, and of course it spoils the set of your collar. With the front of your neckband an inch too high, and your collar an inch too long, you have a most desirable combination."

The necessary changes were made in the method of the laundry, and all was right with shirts and collars.

Significant Signs.

To call at a friend's house about dinner-time and find him absent, is a sign you will be disappointed.

To drop hot sealing-wax on your fingers is a sign you will be angry.

To receive advice of your mother-in-law's projected visit is a sign you are going to leave home for a time.

To meet a bolting horse on the pavement implies that you are going to run.

To dream of being run over by fire-engines is often a sign that you have had pork chops for supper.

To pick up money is lucky.

If a man says, "I hardly like to ask you, old man, but—" it's a sign that he wants to borrow money.

To collide with three consecutive lamp-posts, and fall over an apple stall, is a sign you are not a Good Templar.

To lose money or jewelry is unlucky.

RECUPERATING THE BRAIN.—The best possible thing for a man to do when he feels too weak to carry anything through, is to go to bed and sleep as long as he can. This is the only actual recuperation of brain force, the only recuperation of brain power; because during sleep the brain is in a state of rest, in a condition to receive appropriate particles of nutriment from the blood, which take the place of those which have been consumed by previous labor, since the very act of thinking burns up solid particles, as every turn of the wheel or screw of the steamer is the result of consumption by fire of the fuel in the furnace. The supply of consumed brain substance can only be had from nutritive particles in the blood, which were obtained from the food eaten previously, and the brain is so constituted that it can best receive and appropriate to itself those nutritive particles during the state of sleep. Mere stimulants supply nothing in themselves; they gorge the brain, and force it to a greater consumption of its substance, until it is so exhausted that there is not power enough left to receive a supply.

Diverting Attention.

A child naturally cries when it is hurt, and it is cruel to try to hush its cries by threats. A thousand times better it is to soothe it by stories, by pictures, or by providing it with new toys. Says a famous doctor, "We have many a time in our professional experience with children, found more benefit to be derived from a beautiful or interesting toy than from a dose of physic. The greatest humanity a mother can exhibit in respect to her sick child is to divert it in all possible ways; as we ourselves, who are but children of a larger growth, sometimes feel really sick, when a cheerful face and much loved friend comes in, and before we know it we forget what was the matter with us."

How to Get Rich.

The great secret of obtaining riches, is first to practice economy, and as good old "Deacon Snyder," says, "It used to worry the life out of me to pay enormous doctor's bills, but now I have "struck it rich" Health and happiness reign supreme in our little household, and all simply because we use no other medicine but Electric Bitters and only costs fifty cents a bottle. WASHINGTON NOTES.

PURCHASING BONDS.

The Secretary of the Treasury estimates that he will be able to expend $20,000,000 in the purchase of bonds during the balance of the fiscal year.

COINAGE.

The treasury department has just ordered the transfer of $4,801,987 of gold bullion from the New York assay office to the mint at Philadelphia, for coinage into eagles and half eagles.

A BONANZA.

According to advices received in New York from Brazil by the steamer Rio de Janeiro, the Fernando Noronha Islands ligation between the Brazilian government and an American citizen, James C. Jewett is in the course of settlement in favor of the latter. Should the government recognize the rights of Mr. Jewett, who claims to have discovered the 9,000,000 tons of valuable phosphate deposits on the Fernando Noronha Rocks and Abrolhos islands, off the Brazilian coast, the freight which American vessels will earn in bringing the article to this country would exceed $45,000,000. This calculation is based on the price of $12 a ton, which was paid for a shipment of the phosphate in 1879.

AN INDIAN CONFERENCE.

The acting commissioner of Indian Affairs, Indian Agent Berry, and three Uncompahgre Ute chiefs held a conference with Secretary Kirkwood, at the interior department, in relation to the selection of lands under the new treaty for the Uncompahgre Utes. The Indians expressed a desire to have lands apportioned them adapted to grazing and agricultural purposes, and claimed that along the Grand river, where, under the new treaty, they are to be located, there is not sufficient land of this character. Secretary Kirkwood informed the Uncompahgre Ute chief that no change could be made in the terms of the recent agreement. If sufficient agricultural and grazing lands can not be found in Grand River valley they will be selected in Utah.

TREASURY ESTIMATE.

The Treasury officials estimate the surplus revenue remaining of the four months of the present fiscal year at $45,000,000. The estimate is based on the expectation that the receipts for March, April, May and June, 1881, will equal those of the corresponding months last year. The sinking fund will require $8,000,000 to complete it by the end of the present fiscal year. According to this estimate and exhibit, there will be a surplus of $37,000,000 available between now and June 30, and which the Secretary of the Treasury might use, under provision of the recent act of Congress, to purchase bonds for cancellation.

CONFIRMATIONS.

The Senate confirmed the nominations of Evarts, Thurman and Howe to be commissioners to the International monetary conference; Lot M. Morrill to be collector of customs at Portland, Me.; D. B. McGarg to be surveyor of customs at Cincinnati, and John W. Green to be collector of internal revenue for the second district of Iowa.

The Senate, Tuesday, confirmed the President's appointment of Hon. Nathan Goff, Jr., late Secretary of the Navy, as United States District Attorney for West Virginia, the position he resigned when called by President Hayes to the head of the naval department. It also confirmed Lewis Richmond, of Rhode Island, for United States Consul at Rome and John L. Frisbie, of Michigan, United States Consul at Rheims, France.

CATTLE STATISTICS.

The census bureau will have ready in a few weeks for publication interesting statistics regarding the condition of cattle raising and trade in this country. Special agents have been detailed to various sections to gather statistics and other data regarding the subject. Some of them have forwarded their reports, which contain a very gratifying showing of the extent of the business on the Pacific slope and throughout the western and southern states. Gen. Walker and others out west informed the general statement that this is the first systematic effort to secure the statistics, or this important branch of industry ever made, he could say nothing until the reports had all been received and compiled. This division of the census bureau is in the hands of Mr. Gordon, who is now located in New York. Six weeks will probably elapse before he will be able to forward the results of his investigations to the department.

THE PORK CANARD.

Secretary Blaine has addressed a note to the British legation on the subject of the false reports sent by the acting British consul, at Philadelphia, in regard to the prevalence of disease among the swine of the western states. The secretary enforces the statements made in Evarts' note of the 7th of March, that all the means of information at the resource of the department concur in showing the late published report as wholly without foundation, and sends copies of the resolutions of the Merchants' Exchange of St. Louis, and the Chamber of Commerce at Cincinnati, explicitly denying the reports of disease among the swine, and showing that the condition of the stock in Ohio and Illinois is exceptionally healthy. The statement of the consul in regard to the prevalence of disease in Ohio is emphatically and fully denied. The Secretary of the State sent also the substance of a communication received from the Secretary of the Treasury, conveying an explicit denial of the report published in England, and asking that the character and source of the information on which Crump's dispatch was based be ascertained. In answer to the British minister's statement that the consul of Philadelphia made his report upon what appeared to be good authority, the Secretary of the State says that all this government can learn, after a searching inquiry, leads irresistibly to the conclusion that the good faith of her majesty's representative at Philadelphia has been imposed upon by designing speculators to their own selfish interests and incalculable injury done legitimate commerce. The Secretary further expresses his trust that the British minister will concur with him in the opinion that no steps can be too urgent or imperative to overtake and contradict this false statement, and that this government confidently looks to her majesty's legation for such a correction.

DAVID DAVIS' POSITION

Senator David Davis in declining the Chairmanship of the Judiciary Committee, said:

No man ever entered Congress freer from political committal or personal obligation than I did four years ago. I had been identified with the Republican party, and still look back with pride to its grand achievements. The extreme measures after the war and the excesses incident to civil strife drove tens of thousands into the liberal movement of 1872. I found myself in company with Charles F. Adams, Horace Greeley, Carl Schurz, Murat Halstead, Stanley Matthews, R. B. Fenton, John Wentworth, Samuel Bowles, Lyman Trumbull, Whitelaw Reid, Cornelius Scott, and others known to fame who had been conspicuous Republicans. Some of them have returned to the fold from which they had separated—doubtless prompted by patriotic motives. I have acted distinctly with the Democratic party, and unless its methods are changed and its wishes be adopted, there is little prospect that the existing political opinions entertained by the country would be materially modified by the reconstruction of both parties, especially when the organization seems to perpetuate the power of the other. I have voted on all public questions according to my convictions of right and I propose to continue in that course. As heretofore, the recognition of the trust generously conferred in my keeping by the Democratic voters in 1877 requires me to sustain the existing organization of the senate for which I disclaim all responsibility. Parts of it are neither agreeable to my taste nor to my judgment. In giving this vote it is proper for me to say, whatever may be the result, that I can accept no honor at the hands of either side. The country needs rest from sectional strife. The voice of patriotism demands peace and fraternal fellowship, north and south, east and west. Every good citizen should desire the success of the administration, for we all ought to have a common interest in the glory and greatness of the republic. Measures intended to advance either shall have my cordial support. The President and his cabinet are entitled to a fair hearing and to be judged impartially by their acts. If they fail to justify public confidence, it will be a misfortune which has overtaken other administrations having equally good impulses and prospects. I shall vote for the appointment of all those committees except the judiciary committee. I wish to retain my old place on the judiciary committee.

A FALLING OFF IN NUMBERS.

Census bulletin No. 73, just issued, states the total number of males in the United States to be 25,520,582, females 24,432,264, or 90,319 females to exery 100,000 males, a loss of 1,282 females in ratio on 100,000 males since 1870, due to extraneous influences.

THE NAVY.

Rear Admiral Wyman, commanding the north Atlantic station, reports that owing to the strong current of the Mississippi river this month, and the strict economy enjoined in the rise of coal during the remainder of the fiscal year, the Kearsarge will not be sent up that river. The Alliance will proceed from New Orleans up the Mississippi to Natchez, stopping at Baton Rouge.

TREASURY DECISION.

The decision of Secretary Windom regarding the right of the national banks to have returned to them the legal tenders they have deposited, with a view to withdrawing their circulation, is to the effect that, after the redemption of their notes has been commenced and the security bonds delivered, they cannot withdraw the legal tenders and continue their old circulation. The principal is that, where a transaction between the department and the banks with reference to retiring circulation is complete, the only thing for the banks to do is to deposit their security bonds and renew their notes. This gives rise to the question whether the identical United States bonds held as security for circulating notes can be re-deposited without transfer. The department decides that this may be done, provided the bonds bear no assignment except that of the Treasurer of the United States to the banks returning them. Of the $18,000,000 of bonds withdrawn, about $16,500,000 were 5 per cents. The act authorizing the issue of 5 per cents provides that the last bonds deposited shall be first paid. Many of the bonds deposited by the banks were first numbers which would not be subject to call for a long time. If the $16,500,000 of bonds withdrawn were obliged to be registered in the department and new bonds issued, the bonds would have had new numbers and been subject to first call if the Secretary should desire to pay them. This would greatly have inconvenienced the banks, but the decision authorizes the banks holding 5 per cents to re-deposit the identical ones which they previously held, thereby giving them the same privileges as other holders of similar bonds.

Rumors are afloat in London that Gladstone will resign the chancellorship of the exchequer to Hugh C. Childers.

The Turks have established a cartridge factory at Constantinople, supplied with American machinery, which turns out 30,000 cartridges daily.

The British House of Commons has passed four clauses of the arms bill. O'Donnell was suspended for disregarding a ruling by the chair.

Great Britain objects to the words of the invitation to the monetary conference, being unwilling to commit herself absolutely to a bimetalic standard.

It is reported in London that a number of persons who went to South Africa for the purpose of influencing the suppression of the slave trade have been starved to death at Larfour.

Four more political prisoners have been jailed at Kilmainham, Ireland. Boyton has telegraphed a statement of his arrest to Minister Lowell, who has called upon the British authorities for the charges against him.

In the German reichtags, Scholz, secretary of state for the imperial treasury, declared the federal governments were resolved not to deviate from the basis laid down for coinage reform. The suspension of the sales of silver did not indicate a tendency toward bimetallism. He said Bismark was emphatically in favor of the maintenance of the status quo. Reform of the coinage could only be affected with his full concurrence. The monetary conference at Paris was not to be an experiment by which one side would gain and the other lose, but a united agreement for averting the danger of the future.

A deputation of the Liverpool incorporated chamber of commerce held a conference with Lord Hartington, Secretary of State for India, and presented a memorial urging the government to appoint a commission to represent England, and especially India, at the monetary conference. Hartington pointed out that there was some difficulty, owing to the terms in which the invitation of France and the United States was couched. As originally worded, it seemed to commit the governments accepting it to the adoption of a bimetallic standard and an admission that the maintenance of the gold standard is impolitic. Government could not participate in any conference which assumed their willingness to abandon the gold standard. Negotiations are constantly taking place with a view to modifying the invitation, in order to permit England to accept it consistently with these reserves. England and India would willingly adopt any safe and prudent measure which might help to rehabilitate the value of silver.

A Word to Teachers from the State Horticultural Society.

The efforts of the State Horticultural Society to call attention to the importance of making our country school houses and school yards more attractive, have led to the following generous proposition from the extensive and reliable seed house of D. M. Ferry & Co., who offer, as an aid in this work, to send free of all expense to the children of the first five school districts in each county of the state, whose teacher shall fill out and send them an application and certificate, a collection of 25 varieties of flower seeds, selected with reference to their adaptability and value for culture in school yards, and accompanied by especially prepared directions for their culture and management. The officers of the Society are aware that they are met at the outset with the difficulty, that many of our school houses have no yards, and are unenclosed, but is there not, some one in such districts who will provide a temporary enclosure that their children may enjoy the benefits of this offer? Blank applications, containing the conditions on which the seeds are sent, may be had at the office of this paper.

THE man who complacently calls at the newspaper office and leaves systematically unpaid for puffs of matters in which he is interested, and then when he has a dollar to spend for a job of printing, wants it done in a minute, at his own intelligent estimate of its value, and takes it away because the busy operatives are not checked on some important work already promised, for his accommodation, has some very near relations in this city.—Adrian Times.

A number of cousins to the same family reside in Tecumseh.

THE SUN FOR 1881.

Everybody reads THE SUN. In the editions of this newspaper throughout the year to come everybody will find:

I. All the world's news, so presented that the reader will get the greatest amount of information with the least unprofitable expenditure of time and eyesight. THE SUN long ago discovered the golden mean between redundant fulness and unsatisfactory brevity.

II. Much of that sort of news which depends less upon its recognized importance than upon its interest to mankind. From morning to morning THE SUN prints a continued story of the lives of real men and women, and of their deeds, plans, loves, hates, and troubles. This story is more varied and more interesting than any romance that was ever devised.

III. Good writing in every column, and freshness, originality, accuracy, and decorum in the treatment of every subject.

IV. Honest comment. THE SUN'S habit is to speak out fearlessly about men and things.

V. Equal candor in dealing with each political party, and equal readiness to commend what is praiseworthy or to rebuke what is blamable in Democrat or Republican.

VI. Absolute independence of partisan organizations, but unwavering loyalty to true Democratic principles. THE SUN believes that the Government which the Constitution gives us is a good one to keep. Its notion of duty is to resist to its utmost power the efforts of men in the Republican party to set up another form of government in place of that which exists. The year 1881 and the years immediately following will probably decide this supremely important contest. THE SUN believes that the victory will be with the people as against the Rings for monopoly, the Rings for plunder, and the Rings for imperial power.

Our terms are as follows:

For the Daily SUN, a four-page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post-paid, is 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year; or, including the Sunday paper, an eight-page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents a month, or $7.70 a year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of THE SUN is also furnished separately at $1.20 a year, postage paid.

The price of the WEEKLY SUN, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free. Address I. W. ENGLAND,

AROUND THE COUNTY.

RIDGEWAY.

Albert Kuffin walks as though he weighed a ton, just because he is papa. Boy.

Miss Myra Wood, of Grass Lake, is visiting her young lady friends hereabouts.

The turnip seems to be about the highest prized vegetable in the land to-day, as was evinced by H. B. Eaton's sale.

Robert Frazer is announced to speak on temperance at the Reform church, East Macon, on Friday evening, 25th. At Grange Hall, Macon, Saturday evening, 26th. At the Christian church, Sunday morning, 27th, at 10:30, and at the M. E. church in this village on Sunday evening.

Miss Annie Lowe, a daughter of Justus Lowe, 22 years of age, died on Wednesday morning. Miss Lowe was a victim of consumption, and her death was not unlooked for.

Chet Brownson undertook to dictate to a bull belonging to Mr. Wilson the other day, but was soon made to seek safety on top of a rail pile, where he was kept a prisoner for some time, a soaking rain adding to his general discomfort. It is stated on good authority that Chet was heard to sigh, "Who will care for mother now?"—He was finally released by the dorg.

The concert given last week by the singing class was well attended, the proceeds amounting to a sum sufficient to put the class out of debt. The music was good, and gave evidence of the benefit of Mr. Hendershot's teaching.

ADDISON.

Barometers and weather prophets are alike unable to keep pace with the weather's antics these last days. One might conclude that old Aeolus had gone off on a pleasure trip leaving his office business for "the boys" to arrange.

Will some poetical exponent of the HERALD be so kind as to furnish its readers a "mud" rhyme? It would be highly appropriate at this juncture.

A species of bronchial epidemic characterized in some cases by glandular swellings of the throat and neck, is quite common here.

Mr. Jay Van Etten contemplates opening a job printing office here as soon as the necessary arrangements can be perfected for doing so (?) "Print a paper!"

Terpening, the Exchange man and sweet cider circulator, is in trouble again. Some way "Hank" is very attractive to handcuff and petty-fog men of late.

The winter term of our schools is nearing its close and we hear Mr. Fuller, the new principal, highly spoken of as an efficient instructor by both patrons and pupils.

Should the "Pearlie" style of "puffing" adopted by our Brooklyn brother be generally adopted for a week or two in other towns, the next issue of the HERALD would contain a list of "dead and wounded" pencil pushers. The writer has in mind a score of parsons and Darwinian links whom he fears would not be "missing" in his locality upon such an event.

Township Ditch Commissioners Morland Moore and Bowen, were engaged during last week and the week previous in perfecting arrangements for the construction of a public ditch or drain to be known as drain No. 1 of Somerset, Wheatland and Rollin; said ditch to commence some distance from the southern boundary of Somerset township, Hillsdale Co., to intersect the county line at a point about three quarters of a mile south-west of this village and terminate on the premises of Mrs. John Sorby, in Rollin township this county. When completed the ditch will be over two miles in length and of sufficient capacity to drain the swamp lands of the adjacent country.

On the night of Tuesday the 21st inst. the large brick store owned by G. M. Lewis, and situated on the west side of the creek in this village was entered by burglars, and goods to the value of nearly thirty dollars, consisting of groceries, dry goods tobaccos, cigars, etc., stolen. A small sum of money which Mr. I. S. Roberts, the proprietor of the goods, had left in the money till was also taken.

On entering the building the next morning a board which had been put up to temporarially take the place of a fractured pane of glass in the front of the store was found to have been removed during the night. And it is probably through the aperture thus made that the thieves gained an entrance.

The bar which secures the door in the rear end of the building was also removed and the door left open; probably though through the scoundrels' haste to escape.

No tracks were found in the street to indicate that any vehicle had passed by during the night and as the goods stolen would weigh more than one person could carry it is reasonable to presume there were more than one associated with the robbery.

Deputy Sheriff Pelham and Constable Brown have the matter in charge but no clue to the whereabouts of the missing goods has been found up to the present writing.

SURPRISE CRYSTAL WEDDING.

On Friday, March 18th, Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Hindes was surprised on seeing a number of teams drive up at their residence and commence to unload the occupants and baskets and bundels, but when they were informed that it was the 15th anniversary of their wedded life, all was explained, and the crowd walked in and took possession of the house.

At two o'clock the table was loaded and the guests, together with the controling power of the house, thirty-two in number, sat down and tried hard to devour all the good things that had been placed upon it, but their appetites failed and they gave up is dispair. At five o'clock all were seated and Mr. Chester A. Linn made a few remarks, as follows:

"Mr. and Mrs. Hindes: A few of your neighbors, together with your father's family, have gathered here today to present to you on the 15th anniversary of your wedded life a few presents. and we trust that you will receive them, not as gifts of value but gifts of friendship from one and all; and in conclusion I would say, that we wish you and your family many years of peace and happiness."

Mrs. Susan Linn delivered the presents, as follows:

Silver tea spoons, 3 dresses, towels and handkerchief—Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Smith.

Glass pitcher and goblets—Horace L. Smith.

THE FARMERS SOCIAL CLUB.

March 18th, 1881, the farmers social club met at Mr. George Griswold's. The members were nearly all present. Our honorary member Uncle John Schreder was present; it being nearly his 92d birthday we were very glad to see him among us and he seemed to enjoy the evening equally as well as the younger members.

This being the last meeting for the winter, a short program was presented consisting of music, a short discussion, an excellent essay upon "fruit canning" by Mrs. F. Horton, and a short summary of the winter's meetings by the Secretary.

After the program the evening was spent in sociability and partaking of refreshments consisting of maple sugar, biscuits, cake and coffee.

The number present was seventy-four and all agreed that we had had a pleasant time and that the Farmers' Club had been a success.

It is proposed to have a meeting of the club in June at Sand Lake, when they propose to sample berries from each man's strawberry bed.

Meeting adjourned to meet the first Friday in November, 1881, at John Fisher's.

Blissfield Advance: About eighteen months ago, a fellow calling himself Jerry Bear, came to Riga village, and soon succeeded in working into the affections of, and marrying a widow who had quite a little property. Immediately after the marriage he commenced getting drunk and raising thunder generally, making the woman's life anything but what she had expected it would be. He took charge of all her loose property and during the time he lived with her, succeeded in disposing of most of it, and investing the proceeds in whiskey. A few days ago he came to town, got drunk, traded off one of his wife's horses and started home. Just east of Pollard's crossing, one of the horses gave out and could go no further. This enraged Bear and he struck the horse on the head with a rail with such force as to kill it instantly. He then skipped for other parts.

LENAWEE COUNTY ITEMS.

THE Lenawee circuit court granted 58 divorces last year.

Eli Bodette, of Deerfield, lately walked nine miles to Adrian and back the same day. He was 100 years old last October, and Lenawee county challenges the country to produce his equal.

Blissfield Advance: We judge everybody is moving away from the vicinity of Blissfield, not less than 25 auction sales having taken place within the last two months, by parties who contemplate going elsewhere.

THE meeting of East Tecumseh literary society was adjourned to next Saturday evening at which time an election of officers takes place and other important business will be brought before the society. All members are requested to be present.

Hudson Gazette: Henry Terpening, of Addison, is to be called upon the court carpet for selling liquor without a license. Now the court will open its eyes in wonder and sympathy when Hank proves, as no doubt he will, that there is no demand for such goods in his section — hence there could not have been any violation of state or federal law.

Clinton News: About nine o'clock on Sunday evening last, R. D. Terryberry and wife heard a curious sound at their front door, and hastening to the door, threw it open, and beheld a basket. Taking it into the house, the contents were found to consist of one fine six-months old boy, two pairs of shoes, a pillow, clothes enough to last a year, a bottle of milk, and a card donating the contents to Bob and family with the request that the boy be well cared for. Bob is delighted with his new charge and says that if an education will do anything for the boy he shall have it. When asked what he would name the boy, replied "Bob B. J. Terryberry."

Deerfield Record:—Deerfield is at last out of the woods, and the average public-spirited citizen feels rejoiced over the matter. On Tuesday, workmen of the Lake Shore railroad put telegraphic instruments into the depot at this station, thus connecting our village in quick communication with the outside world. Friday the new telegraph operator, Will Fetterman, of Pittsburg, who has been the operator at Wyandotte for a year past, reported for duty. He will have full charge of the station. By this change Mr. C. Ward, who has been the faithful and efficient agent for over nineteen years, will step down and out. Our citizens and business men all unite in a vote of thanks to the Lake Shore company for the establishing of a telegraph office in this village.

Clinton News: On Thursday morning of last week the residence of S. Howell, one-mile south-east of this village, was discovered to be on fire. A vigorous application of water and snow subdued the flames by the time the furniture was all removed from the house, and all danger was supposed to be passed. The furniture was again put into the house, and when night came the inmates sought their beds well tired out by the day's excitement. About two o'clock next morning they were awakened by a great light, and it was then found that the flames had again burst out in renewed fury and that it was impossible to save the house. A part of the furniture was removed from the house but the most of it was burned. The fire originated from the kitchen stove and a supposed defective chimney.—There was $600 insurance on the building, and $400 on the contents. Loss not yet estimated at last reports.

Adrian Press: The circumstances of the death of Mrs. Jennie Weeks, whose husband is a resident of Cambridge, are peculiarly distressing. Scarcely more than 3 weeks ago she became the happy bride of Henry W. Weeks, a young farmer of Cambridge. The parents of Mrs. Weeks reside in Venice, Ohio, and the young couple thinking to make them a surprise visit, started thither. They arrived at the railway station near their destination and by accident met the objects of their visit in town. The happy meeting was soon to be followed by a sad sequel.—The young husband and wife got into the carriage, and were driven home, and while the occupants were in the act of alighting the horses became startled by a dog and sprang forward. Mrs. Weeks was thrown from the vehicle with violence, the pit of the stomach striking the edge of one of the mounting steps. She was picked up in an unconscious condition and died before the next morning. The young husband is in deep grief from the cruel bereavement that has overtaken him.

THE VETERAN.

It was a way-worn, grisly man
Came knocking at my door,
And begged for food to break his fast,
Kept since the day before.

He wore a military cap
Of dusty, faded blue;
His tattered army overcoat
Was anything but new.

"Some worthy veteran," I thought,
"Does thus an alms implore,
Who in his country's cause are now
Perhaps has shed much gore."

"Be welcome, weary traveler,"
I said, with hands outstretched,
And placed him in my easy chair,
Whilst food and drink I fetched.

"My worthy friend, you've doubtless seen
Some service in your time?"
"Twixt bites enormous he replied,
"I've served in every clime."

"In what place were you stationed last?"
"At Charleston, sir," he said,
And took his seventh piece of meat.
I thought so much should be eat.

"So, so," said I, "and after all
The services you had seen,
They put you in the navy yard,
And made you a marine."

The old man eyed me for a space
With doubtful, puzzled look,
Then answered "Sir, I rather think
You have my case mistook.

"Where I've just served five weary years
He said when he had risen,
"Was not in the Charleston navy yard—
I served in the State Prison.

OLD DAN.

Farmer Henderson came in from the barn one morning with his hands and clothes wet and covered with mud, his face red and his eyes flashing.

"Ned!" he shouted, as he entered the kitchen. "Where's Ned?"

"Here I am!" came a cheery voice in reply; and an instant after a bright, strong boy of some sixteen years entered the old-fashioned, country kitchen from the adjoining wood-shed, where he had been cutting potatoes for the day's planting. "Do you want anything?"

"I want to tell you this," said Mr. Henderson, as he washed himself at the sink and rubbed his weather beaten face with the coarse towel until it was even more red than before. "Old Dan must be killed! Just see the state I am in, and all from that worthless old rascal! I won't have him about the house another day. He's good for nothing but to make trouble, and he must be shot before night!" added the farmer wrathfully.

Ned was about to plead for his pet when his little sister came into the room.

"Why, papa, what is the matter?" she cried, running to him in amazement. "Did you fall into the creek?"

"I might as well," he replied, half laughing. "Old Dan butted me into the watering trough!"

There was a shout of laughter from both children, in which their mother joined.

"Well, Jedeiah," said Mrs. Henderson, coming into the kitchen, and still shaking with mirth, "what could you have been thinking about to let an old ram, 'most twenty years old, knock you into the watering place?"

"But," exclaimed her husband, "he took me unawares. I had just filled one pail to carry to the barn, and was stooping to dip the other, when the old rascal came to me like the wind, and knocked me completely into the water! He scampered, I tell you, before I could get out. He knew he had done mischief. Anyhow, he's got to be killed to-day, sure. He's only a nuisance, and I'll shoot him to-night, when we come back from town, if he's on the farm!"

Two hours later Mr. and Mrs. Henderson drove away to be absent from home until night. As they rattled out of the yard, Old Dan suddenly appeared close to the gate, and, wagging his tail as if in derision, gave utterance to a hoarse "Ba-a-a!"

The farmer turned, shook his whip at the fellow, and cried; "This is your last day, my boy, make the most of it!"

Ned and Carrie were the only children. Leaving Carrie in the house alone, after they had considered a while whether there was any way of averting Old Dan's sad fate, Ned shouldered his hoe and marched off to his work, planting potatoes with Bronson, the hired man in the "back lot."

But the little girl of thirteen had no thought of being afraid. She had the breakfast dishes to wash, some sweeping to do, and the dinner to get, all before twelve o'clock.

Time fled. The dishes stood in shinning rows upon the pantry shelves, the broom had performed its work, and Carrie was preparing the vegetables to be boiled, when there came a faint knock at the door. Supposing it to be one of the neighbors, the little girl did not rise, but called:

"Come in!"

The door slowly opened and a man stepped within.

He wore a long black coat, buttoned to his chin, and very threadbare. His trousers, too, were black and shiny, and much too short for him. One foot was a boot, while the other was graced by a ragged shoe. He carried a battered silk hat in his hand. His face was long and solemn, but quite red, his eyes bleared, his hands very dirty, and altogether he was a queer looking visitor.

"Is your ma at home, miss?" said he, in a half whine, as he glanced sharply about the room.

"No, sir," replied Carrie, wondering why he asked; "she has gone to Underhill. Did you wish to see her?"

"Oh, no," replied the man. "I asked out of politeness, you know," and he smiled solemnly at the little girl, and winked one eye. "No, I came on particular business with your pa—particular, urgent business. S'pose he's round, is he not?"

"No, sir; he went to town with mother," said Carrie.

"Now, that's too bad!" exclaimed the visitor, as he seated himself; "and I've come so far to see him. But perhaps your brother or sister would do as well."

"I haven't any sister," said the little hostess, laughing, "and my brother is over in the back lot. He'll be in by-and-bye, though, if he'll do."

"Well, I don't hardly believe he will, said the man thoughtfully, and I can't wait to-day anyway; I haven't the time. But I'm terrible hungry. If I could I'd stay to dinner, miss. However, under the circumstances, perhaps you'd better give me a light lunch before I go; a piece of pie, and a cup of tea, and a little cold meat, or something of that sort."

"Oh, certainly; only I can't give you the meat, for we haven't it in the house," said Carrie, rising; "but I will find something." And she took from the pantry a whole apple-pie, which she placed before him, with a knife and fork.

"If you will help yourself I'll have the tea ready in three minutes."

"All right, my dear," said the man, seizing the knife and drawing the pie toward him. "I will act upon your advice. The last time I took dinner with General Grant," he continued, as he cut a great piece and began to eat, "he said to me, 'Governor, governor,' said he, 'never disregard a lady's advice;' and I have always remembered what he said," and he chuckled merrily, and nodded his head at the delicious-looking pastry before him.

Carrie wondered a little at the table-manners of the man who had dined with Grant, but she steeped his tea, flavored it with rich cream and sugar, and passed it to him.

"I am not much of a hand for tea," said the man, as he drained the cup, "but doctors say that I must drink it for my digeston. Ruined my digestion while in the army, you see;" and he winked solemnly. "By the way," he continued, picking up the silver teaspoon from his saucer, "have you any more of these? They are as neat a pattern as I ever saw, and odd, too. I should like to see the rest of the dozen, if you have them."

"Mother has only eleven,' said Carrie in her innocence, "and she is very proud of them, but I will show them to you."

Then she brought the little box with the precious table-silver—eleven teaspoons, four tablespoons and an ancient cream jug all pure silver, and shining brightly—and placed them before her inquisitive visitor to admire. He had finished his light lunch. That is, the pie was demolished and the teapot was empty. As the little girl handed him the treasures he arose, took the box to the window, examined its contents with critical eye for a moment, and then, as if in joyful surprise, cried:

"I am right! They are the very spoons! The very same identical spoons that my friend lost when he was a boy! How lucky it is that I have found them at last!"

With these words, and a very low bow, the rascal opened the door and slipped away with the spoons and a silver cream pitcher down the path towards the gate.

For an instant Carrie stood motionless, then rushing after him she shrieked:

"Give me those spoons! They are my mother's spoons, and you are trying to steal them! You are a thief, a thief! Bring them back! bring them back!"

The man, however, paid no attention to the child's cries, but ran rapidly down the path, carrying the box in his arms; and the spoons and pitcher would have been lost forever if a new party had not appeared on the scene.

Old Dan was quietly nibbling the grass near the gateway. Hearing his little mistress' voice he looked up at the very instant that the tramp passed. What he saw about the man that disturbed him I don't know; but erecting his head with a hoarse "Ba-a-a!" he shot after him like a cannon ball.

The man turned to receive him and defend himself, but the ram struck him fairly in the front and knocked him half senseless, flat on his back, scattering the silver in all directions.

For an instant the fellow remained sprawling in the dust, then he slowly arose, limping and groaning, and without a glance at his enemy began to gather up his stolen spoils.

He had partly completed his task when Old Dan, who all this time had been watching the proceedings from beneath his shaggy eyebrows shook his long beard, and with another tremendous Ba-a! dashed at him again, and over he went a second time, his treasures flying from his hand.

And now began a strange battle. With cries of rage and pain, the man recovered his feet and turned upon the ram, kicking and striking at him furiously, while Dan, accustomed to such warfare from years of experience with the boys of the country side, easily eluded him, and in return butted him to the earth again and again. The spoons and the cream pitcher were knocked hither and thither, as the combatants struggled, the road was trampled into something like a race course, the air was filled with very bad language, very angry "baas" and a great cloud of dust.

But after some five minutes, victory declared itself upon the side of the quadruped; and, bruised and bleeding, with clothes in rags, minus hat and shoe, the vanquished man suddenly turned away and ran limping down the road, leaving his antagonist in full possession of the field and the stolen silver.

Old Dan remained motionless, gazing after his enemy until he disappeared around a distant turn in the road; then shaking the dust from his coarse wool, he gave utterance to a low grumble of satisfaction, and, wagging his tail, returned to his dinner in front of the house.

Half an hour later, as Carrie washed the coveted spoons and the bright little pitcher and laid them carefully away once more, she told her brother the story, and how the robber was foiled, and Ned, full of enthusiasm, cried:

"We will not kill old Dan at all, for I do not believe that father would shoot him now for a hundred dollars!"

And the boy was right. The old ram won more than he knew when he fought the tramp and conquered him. He won his master's regard, and a free, happy life for the remainder of his days.

The first winter after the erection of a telegraph line on the coast of Antrim, Ireland, numbers of starlings migrating from Scotland were found dead or wounded on the roadside, they having, evidently, in their flight in the dusky morning struck against the wires. Strange to say, during the following and succeeding winters, hardly a death occurred among the starlings on their arrival. The inference draw from all this by a writer in Nature is that "the birds were deeply impressed, and understood the cause of the fatal accidents among their fellow-travelers the previous year, and hence carefully avoided the telegraph wires; not only so, but the young birds must also have acquired this knowledge and perpetuated it,—a knowledge which they could not have acquired by experience or even by instinct unless the instinct was really inherited memory derived from the parents whose brains were first impressed by it."

The perfume manufacturers in the department of the Maratime Alps consume annually 600,000 pounds of roses, and the neighborhood of Grasses and Cannes is thickly studden with rose farms. On one hectare of two and a half acres 30,000 bushes ar planted, a single bush yielding for twelve years. A single hectare in good cultivation will net an average profit of twenty-four per cent. per year.

Wishing for Wings.

Wishing, as I sometimes do, for the impossibilities, my husband turned to me and said, "Don't you wish you had wings?" and immediately the question repeated itself: Don't you wish you had wings? And with it came the thought, What would you do with them? Where would you go? Quickly came the answer: If I had wings, the very best use I could make of them would be this: when this husband of mine comes to me with his logic and fallacy, and I have exhausted my powers of argument and of patience, then would I spread my wings, taking my flight over land and sea, I would search the wide world over, until, finding a Protagoras worthy of the contest, I would bring him in triumph, place him at the feet of my Socrates, and then folding my wings, breathe a little and be at rest.

I am thinking now of the mother to whom there is rest in the very thought that, growing weary of the nest in the hedgerows, and seeking for the rest she nowhere finds, could unfold her wings, and soaring to the cliffs so nigh she could hear naught. Glad to be within sight of the home nest, but more glad to be out of hearing. Few are the hours for the mother-bird's rest. She listens to the warbling, until the notes become discordant and the brain becomes a whirl, and she longs for rest; and only a little rest will make her think them the sweetest notes ever heard and her own songs the sweeter. To keep these sweet should be our first thought, for we know the songs we sing shall be their songs. They may make them sweeter, but ours to them must be hymns of joy.

Watch the nightingales as they are brought into the singing-school to be taught by a master voice. They chatter and converse among themselves, until the first notes of the master nightingale strike their ears. They stop and listen, and timidly repeat the strain. Back again the great teacher goes over the same notes, and again the birds sing, growing bolder in their attempts. "Do not be discouraged," says an old writer, "if the young bird be not willing to repeat your lesson and continue to warble; soon he will show you that he has not forgotten the lessons received in autumn and winter; he will repeat them in springtime." Does the mother-bird ever doubt that one day her brood shall have wings to lift it from the earth-bound nest, to airs and visions beyond our ken? She will timidly lead them, step by step, in their weakness, but she knows a power that will lift them up to the sunlight beyond the clouds. These little ones, so helpless and tender, so dependent upon our love, we teach from day to day first to beguile them with the songs, then teach them to love the song, then to sing the songs, and by and by we catch the rustling of wings and the music becomes divine.

When Raphael would make a cherub, he searched the streets for a little "Arab," and placing him before his easel he taught him to lift his eyes to heaven, and giving him wings, behold an angel fit to touch the heavenly strings among a myriad of angels!

To the mothers teaching these lessons well, growing weary and faint in the noon-day of life, then when the nest has become torn and rent, and the brood has become scattered, the morning will come when to her shall be given wings, to soar above life and death forevermore.

In Russia taxes are collected in this way: A peasant, representative of a district, comprising several villages, is charged with the duty of collecting a certain amount of money, and it is the business of the people to distribute the taxes among themselves, as they like the best. For the prompt collection, in first place, the representative is responsible, and in case of tardiness he is imprisoned for a week with common criminals, and furnished with food at the cost of three cents a day. A district is forced to pay for all its members, whether they are actual residents, or have gone elsewhere, or are in the army. In case a tax collector is unable to do his duty, he reports to the authorities; then the police appear armed with rods, and if the rods do not secure the desired result the property of the delinquents is sold at auction.

TENACITY OF LIFE IN A BEETLE.—A correspondent of Notes and Queries gives the following instance of a beetle's tenacity of life: A relative of mine, while cutting a loaf of bread, found imbedded in it a beetle. A small portion of the loaf with the beetle in it was cut out entire, and, after a lapse of about five minutes the beetle began to crawl out apparently none the worse for its incarceration. It is, of course, well known that beetles are fond of warmth, but I should not have thought that one would have so comfortably survived some hours spent in a living tomb, escaping the danger of being crushed to death in the making of the bread, and subsequently the risk of being killed either by suffocation or the heat of the oven.

From numerous experiments made in the great hospital at Posen, Prussia, it appears that ice is a most effectual remedy against small-pox. One of the patients, in a fit of delirium, escaped to the garden where the snow lay two feet deep. There remained the whole night, with no covering but his shirt. On the following morning the fever had subsided, and the pustules had dried. This strange circumstance attracted the physician's attention, and after consultation, they determined to keep the temperature of the small-pox wards very low, and apply small quantities of ice to the patients. The result surpassed their expectations, and at the end of a week all the patients had recovered.

American Ball-Blue has quickly found its way into our laundries. It is absolutely pure, harmless, and imparts the most beautiful hue to the washing.

The introduction of magnets into the great flouring mills has been a revelation to the millers who complained of wire in wheat. Not only have the magnets captured all the stray pieces of iron bands, and thus removed the last objection urged against wire-binding harvesters, but they have revealed the startling fact that, of the scraps of iron and steel that find their way to the mill mixed with wheat, fully one-half are something besides pieces of wire, and of such a nature as to be even more dangerous to mill machinery.

The best remedy for strains and galls on horses is Henry & Johnson' American Oil Liniment. Good for man and beast.

Heat of the Sun.

Since astronomers have computed with scientific accuracy the vast amount of heat radiated into space by the sun, they have been puzzled to account for its unfailing supply. Whatever be the nature of the heat, or however boundless the capacity of the sun to furnish it, exhaustion is inevitable, unless sources of supply exist outside of the sun.

As there has been no perceptible diminution of heat since the time of Babylonian and Greek astronomers, it is evident that such sources of supply must exist, and it is the task of science to find them out.

Prof. Pierce, of Harvard university, who stands at the head of American mathematicians, has no doubt that meteorites are an unfailing fountain of supply. He thinks our system is crowded with them; that they are perpetually falling upon the sun's surface, and the arrested motion is converted into heat.

The theory is plausible, and in harmony with what we know of the vast number of meteorites that have their orbits within our system, as shown by the meteoric showers of August and November. But it would seem that there must be a slow action in the mass of the sun in the course of centuries, disturbing the order of the system by the inevitable laws of gravity. If there is substance enough in the meteorites to develop heat, there must be enough to increase weight.

A Wonderful Discovery.

For the speedy cure of Consumption and all diseases that lead to it, such as stubborn Coughs, neglected Colds Bronchitis, Hay Fever, Asthma, pain in the side and chest, dry hacking cough, tickling in the throat, Hoarseness, Sore Throat, and all chronic or lingering diseases of the throat and lungs. Dr. King's New Discovery has no equal and has established for itself a world-wide reputation. Many leading physicians recommend and use it in their practice. "Yes, if women could only believe it, there is a wonderful beauty even in growing old. The charm of expression arising from softened temper or ripened intellect, often amply atones for the loss of form and colouring; and consequently, to those who never could boast either of these latter, years give much more than they take away. A sensitive person often requires half a lifetime to get thoroughly used to this corporeal machine, to attain a wholesome indifference both to its defects and perfections, and to learn at last, what nobody would acquire from any teacher but experience, that it is the mind alone which is of any consequence; that with a good temper, sincerity, and a moderate stock of brains—or even the two former only—any sort of body can in time be made useful, respectable, and agreeable, as a traveling-dress for the soul. Many a one, who was absolutely plain in youth thus grows pleasant and well-looking in declining years You will hardly ever find anybody, not ugly in mind, who is repulsively ugly in person after middle life.'

A Great Chicago Enterprise.

The Laboratory for the manufacture of Electric Bitters is one of Chicago's greatest enterprises, giving employment to a large number of hands. The extensive sale already attained for this wonderful remedy is astonishing.—Wherever once introduced, and be comes known, it is almost impossible to supply the demand, because of their true merit—curing where all others fail—and at a reasonable price (fifty cents). Sold by C. A. Wright & Co.

A finished life—a life which has made the best of all the materials granted to it, and through which, be its web dark or bright, its pattern clear or clouded, can now be traced plainly the hand of the Great Designer; surely this is worth living for? And though at its end it may be somewhat lonely; though a servant's and not a daughter's arm may guide the failing step; though most likely it will be strangers only who come about the dying bed, close the eyes that no husband ever kissed, and threw the shroud kindly over the poor withered breast where no child's head has ever lain; still, such a life is not to be pitied, for it is a completed life. It has fulfilled its appointed course, and returns to the Giver of all breath, pure as He gave it. Nor will He forget it when he counteth up His jewels.—[From "A Woman's Thoughts about Women.

EXCELLENT RECIPE FOR REMOVING DANDRUFF.—A well-known physician tells us that there is nothing better than the following preparation: To one pint of alcohol add gum-camphor as large as a hickory-nut. This, so to speak, merely camphorizes the alcohol. Bergamont, or oil of rose, or any other essence, may be used to perfume it, as the individual desires. Wet the scalp with it daily. It will also be found a stimulant of the scalp, a promoter of the growth of the hair, and will, in many instances, prevent it from falling out.

THE LITERARY REVOLUTION.

This very remarkable enterprise continues to make such progress as to astonish its friends and astound its enemies. Its greatly increasing proportions have compelled the removal of its head-quarters from the Tribune Building to the very large and beautiful building, No. 764 Broadway, which is in the very midst of the "book district" of New York City, and, therefore, of the publishing enterprise of the nation. This building, though six stories in height, 25 feet front and 100 feet deep, is sufficient only for the offices and retail store of the Company. The manufacturing is carried on in several large buildings located in other parts of the city, though it is contemplated concentrating them soon in one immense factory to be erected.

Their list of recent and early forthcoming publications are extremely interesting to all who enjoy what is choicest in literature. The Library Magazine is unique in both form and character and altogether delightful in the richness of its contents. Of the books announced, Green's larger "History of the English People," reduced from $10 to $1; Carlyle's "History of the French Revolution," reduced to 40 cents; Carlyle's "Heroes and Hero Worship," 25 cents, and the "Revised New Testament," which is promised to be manufactured with rapidity—heretofore unheard of, will attract special attention. It is worth while for every one who has not already seen it, to send and get the illustrated pamphlet, "Book Making, and Type Setting by Steam," which will be sent free upon application. Address, the American Book Exchange, 764 Broadway, New York.

THE ILLUSTRATED SCIENTIFIC NEWS.

One of the handsomest publications is the ILLUSTRATED SCIENTIFIC NEWS, published by Munn & Co., New York. Every number contains thirty-two pages, full of engravings of novelties in science and the useful arts. Ornamental wood work, pottery, vases and objects of modern and ancient art are finely shown.

The March number contains, among various other subjects illustrated, a full description of the manufacture of paper hangings, with engravings; how the deceptive curve is produed in casting the ball by the baseball pitcher, his attitude, how he holds and handles the ball, all fully illustrated. The number before us also contains engravings of Capt. Eads' proposed ship railway across the Isthmus, and a novel hydraulic railway locomotive.

In addition to this it contains many valuable recipes for artisans and housekeepers.

This publication will be found instructive and entertaining to all classes, but will be best appreciated by the most intelligent. Published by Munn & Co., 37 Park Row, New York, at $1.50 a year, and sold by all news dealers.

THE leading feature of APPLETONS' JOURNAL for April is the first part of a story of old Greek life, by Professor Georg Ebers, whose romances of ancient Egypt have attracted so much attention recently. The title of this story is "A Question: a Greek Idyl." The scene is laid in Syracuse, on the seashore, and is confined wholly to pictures of domestic life. This is followed by an article on "Mysteries and Myracle-Plays," by Mrs. Hooper, founded on the recent French work on this theme by Julleville. The article contains much fresh matter on an old subject. There is a long review, with many striking extracts, of Oliphant's "Land of Gilead"; the account of the "dervish miracles," which is given in full in the JOURNAL, being fairly startling. The editor, in his department, ventures to question the claims of Carlyle to be considered a great thinker; and having last month, attempted to demolish the notion of woman's intuitions, he this number disputes the common idea that tact is a special feminine quality.

APPLETONS' JOURNAL is published monthly, at 25 cents per number, or $3.00 per annum. D. Appleton & Co., Publishers, 1, 3 & 5 Bond street, New York.

PROF. WATSON'S WILL.

The will of the late Prof. Watson, as at present understood, will be probated, but it is not necessarily conclusive of the share of the property the wife will get. Under the laws of Wisconsin, a wife cannot be disinherited, nor can her dower (or one-third) interest in her husband's estate be alienated without her consent. In case of a will like this, giving a wife a certain sum instead of her dower interest, under the law she can have her choice; she can either accept the sum, allowance, or annuity named in the will in lieu of dower, or claim the one-third which the law sets apart as her dower. Mrs. Watson does not contest the will in any form, but simply avails herself of the alternative provided by law, and claims her dower interest in her husband's estate, instead of accepting the sum set apart for her, and her claim will be recognized by the law. With Mrs. Watson's one-third of the estate, or $10,000, she will have also the proceeds of a life insurance of $5,000, giving her $15,000 in all.

Vase Culture of Ivy.

Mr. J. McNab, of the Royal Botanical Gardens, Edinburgh, recommends the vase culture of ivy in moss and water for drawing-room purposes. The directions he gives for its management are as follows:

The ivy should be grown in long opaque glass jars and vases, and it is essential that such vessels should be wide at the top, so that the plants after being properly rooted, can be taken out and the jars cleansed when necessary. In the selection of ivy for vase culture, long pieces with small leaves are to be recommended; those taken from the stems of the trees, where the points are inclined to be pendent, will be found to answer best, such ivy having generally stout stalks covered with aerial roots. Each vase, according to its size, should contain three, four or five pieces, each piece being rolled up separately, in a small portion of hypnum or spagnum moss, the latter being preferable.

After this tie all the pieces loosely together, in a clump to suit the width of the vase, and place them in it so that the ball of moss does not reach within five or six inches of the bottom. It will be necessary to keep the water in the vase about half way up the moss till the cuttings are properly rooted. From the moss the roots will extend into the water below, and it will be found that these roots produced in the moss and water will be quite sufficent to nourish the plants. Cutting plants whose roots have been produced in soil, if lifted and placed in vases, will ultimately do well, but the probability is that the root will die and the plants for a time sicken until new fibers are formed capable of enduring moss and water culture. After the ivy is properly rooted, the glass jars may be kept full of water, and sprigs of flowers may also be inserted in them. The water and flowers may be changed when necessary, and even the ivy, whose roots ought now to be a solid mass, may also be taken and replaced at pleasure, without injury.

THE GREATEST MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.

Kellogg's Columbian Oil is a powerful remedy, which can be taken internally as well as externally by the tenderest infant. It cures almost instantly, is pleasant, acting directly upon the nervous system, causing sudden buoyancy of the mind. In short the wonderful effects of this most wonderful remedy cannot be explained in written language. A single dose inhaled and taken according to directions will convince any one that it is all that is claimed for it. Warranted to cure the following diseases: Rheumatism or Kidney Disease in any form, Headache, Toothache, Neuralgia, Sprains, Bruises, Flesh Wounds, Bunions, Burns, Corns, Spinal Affection, Colic, Cramping Pains, Cholera Morbus, Flux, Diarrhoea, Coughs, Colds, Bronchial affection, Catarrh, and all aches and pains, external and internal. Full directions with each bottle. For sale by C. A. Wright & Co., Tecumseh.

Timber Culture.

We feel sure that the subject of timber culture does not engage the attention of the public as its merits demand. The annual consumption of railroad ties alone is over 40,000,000. It requires thirty years' growth to produce the average railroad tie. There is over 90,000 miles of railroad in this country; making over 180,000 miles of fencing, which cost over $50,000,000, and over $15,000,000 annually for repair. We have over 75,000 miles of telegraph wires, which require over 300,000 telegraph posts, and the annual repair takes 30,000 more. But, if we should go on and enumerate the amount required for farm-fencing, buildings, brick-burning (which requires 2,000,000 cords a year), match-making, shoe-pegs, furniture-making, saddle-tree making, packing-boxes, scythe and tool handles of all kinds, wagons, carriages, agricultural implements, and fire-wood,—it would swell the grand total at least $200,000,000 annually. And, notwithstanding this great demand and shortened supply, the havoc of lumber-destroying is going on just as rapidly as ever.

The time is coming when this wholesale destruction will be regretted. The supply will be exhausted; and then it will take more than fifty years to restore it, at great expense and labor. The supply thereafter can never be made to equal the demand for it. The Rural World for a third of a century has been battling against this wasteful destruction of timber; but still it goes on. Those who will now turn their attention to timber culture and to the preservation of what timber they have, will receive a big reward in the near future.—Rural World.

Given Up by the Doctors.

Where doctors have failed to cure, and have given their patients up to die, Electric Bitters have often been used, and a cure effected, greatly to the astonishment of all. Diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Urinary Organs are positively cured by Electric Bitters. They invariably cure Constipation, Headache and all Bilious Attacks. Try them and be convinced that they are the best medicine ever used. Sold by C. A. Wright & Co. at fifty cents a bottle.

"The disposition which can bear trouble; which, while passing over the lesser annoyances of life, as unworthy to be measured in life's whole sum, can yet meet real affliction steadily, struggle with it while resistance is possible; conquered, sit down patiently, to let the storms sweep over; and on their passing, if they pass, rise up, and go on its way, looking up to that region or blue calm which is never long invisible to the pure of heart—this is the blessedest possession that any woman can have. Better than a house full of silver and gold, better than beauty, or high fortunes, or prosperous and satisfied love."

Charles Hartman, Toledo, Ohio, says:—I knowed it cured me, and I hope others similarly troubled with pain the chest may be helped by the "Only Lung Pad" as I have.—See Ad.

Useful Hints on Economy.

If every man of family would lay in a small amount of copper wire from coarse to fine, and some rivets and burs of the same metal; also, a pair of pincers or pliers suitable for use with wire, and a pair of tinners' shears or snips, a punch to make holes for the rivets, and a hammer, he will have an outfit with which a person with very little mechanical skill can save enough money every year to pay the subscription price of our paper by mending cracked or broken articles about the premises. With the rivets he can almost instantly mend in a durable manner any broken strap about a harness, replace sundry iron hoops on hollow ware, and will find frequent use for them for other articles, often preventing loss of time in sending to the harness-maker or other manufacturer. The copper wire will come into frequent use in every household to keep intact many things weakened by use, fractured or broken, such as buggy-shafts or spokes—if on the farm, rake, fork or hoe-handles, etc. By wrapping the wire tightly around the injured portion, twisting the ends with the pincers firmly and cutting them off with the shears, a neat, durable job is accomplished. Copper wire can be easily restored after having been kinked by frequent use, by drawing it forcibly around an iron rod or hard wood. By the help of the shears, joints of stove pipe can be shortened, when required, and extra tin cans of all sizes can be made to serve many useful purposes. Leaks in roofs can be easily remedied by inserting strips of tin two inches long under the shingles where they join. This patchwork cannot be seen, as the strips are covered by the shingles. Strips of tin tacked over knot-holes or season-cracks in floors, or to guard against vermin, such as mice and rats, are cheap and efficacious. By cutting out the side or end of kerosene cans and turning down the sides with the pincers and hammer, and inserting either sidewise or crosswise a wire bail, they will be found as durable and handy as baskets, and will last longer than hooped wooden-ware in dry atmospheres.

TO THE AFFLICTED.

Since the introduction of Kellogg's Columbian Oil it has made more permanent cures and given better satisfaction on Kidney complaints and Rheumatism than any known remedy. Its continued series of wonderful cures in all climates has made it known as a safe and reliable agent to employ against all aches and pains, which are the forerunners of more serious disorders. It acts speedily and surely, always relieving suffering and often saving life. The protection it affords by its timely use on Rheumatism, kidney affection, and all aches and pains, wounds, cramping pains, cholera morbus, diarrhœa, coughs, colds, catarrh, and disorders among children, makes it an invaluable remedy to be kept always on hand in every home. No person can afford to be without it, and those who have once used it never will. It is absolutely certain in its remedial effects and will always cure when cures are possible. Call at C.A. Wright & Co's. and get a memorandum book giving more full details of the curative properties of this wonderful medicine.

Rules for Cooking Vegetables.

A French cook gives the following general rules for cooking all kinds of vegetables; "Green vegetables should be thoroughly washed in cold water and then dropped into water which has been salted and is beginning to boil. There should be a tablespoonful of salt for each two quarts of water. If the water boils long before the vegetables are put in, it has lost all its gases, and the mineral ingredients are deposited on the bottom and sides of the kettle, so that the water is flat and tasteless, then the vegetables will not look or have a fine flavor. The time for boiling green vegetables depends much upon the age and time they have been gathered. The younger and more freshly gathered the more quickly they are cooked. Below is a very good time table for cooking vegetables:

Potatoes boiled, thirty minutes.
Potatoes baked, forty-five minutes.
Sweet potatoes boiled, fifty minutes.
Sweet potatoes baked, sixty minutes.
Squash boiled, twenty-five minutes.
Green peas boiled, twenty to forty minutes.
Shelled beans boiled, sixty minutes.
String beans boiled, one or two hours.
Green corn, thirty to sixty minutes.
Asparagus, fifteen to thirty minutes.
Spinach, one or two hours.
Tomatoes, fresh, one hour.
Tomatoes, canned, thirty minutes.
Cabbage, forty-five minutes or two hours.
Cauliflower, one or two hours.
Dandelions, two or three hours.
Beet greens, one hour.
Onions, one or two hours.
Beets, one to five hours.
Turnips, white, forty-five to sixty minutes.
Turnips, yellow, one and a half to two hours.
Parsnips, one or two hours.
Carrots, one or two hours.

YEAR.—The Egyptians, it is said were the first who fixed the length of the year. The Roman year was introduced by Romulus, 738 B. C., and it was corrected by Numa, 713 B. C., and again by Julius Cæsar, 45 B. C., who fixed the solar year as being 365 days and six hours. This was denominated the Julian style, and prevailed generally throughout the Christian world till the time of Pope Gregory XIII. The calendar of Julius Cæsar was defective in this particular, that the solar year consisted of 365 days, 5 hours and 40 minutes, and not of 365 days, 6 hours. This difference at the time of Gregory XIII. had amounted to ten entire days. To obviate this error Gregory ordained in 1582 that that year suould consist of 355 days only; and in 1751 it was ordered to be so used in England; and the next year eleven days were left out, the 3d of September, 1752, being reckoned as the 14th, so as to make it agree with the Gregory calendar.

MONEY—FARMS—ABSTRACTS.

If you want to hire money at very low rates.

If you have money to loan.

If you want to buy a farm or a home.

If you want to sell your real estate.

If you want a deed or mortgage correctly made.

If you want a complete abstract of title. Call on A. L. Bliss.

Among other Farms for sale I have one of 160 acres and one of 80 acres in Palmyra both being well tiled and fenced, and first class in every respect, with four market towns within easy driving distance, in good neighborhood. Also 125 acre farm 1½ miles west of river road from Deerfield. Also 160 acre farm and 90 acre farm, and 20 acre farm in Ridge, any of which are decided bargains, and good reasons given for naming low prices.

Every purchaser of Lands should insist on being furnished an abstract of title, for our experience of more than 20 years shows that not more than one title in ten is perfect of record, and every week purchases agreed upon are abandoned owing to imperfections of title. I have a good carriage or farm horse, 1300 lbs. in weight for sale at a bargain.

A few thousand dollars now on hand to loan at six per cent, and on long time if desired.

Some Recent Points in Etiquette.

Say "Goodbye," not "Good morning."

Upon leaving a room, one bow should include all.

Never wait over fifteen minutes for a tardy guest.

Upon introduction, enter at once into conversation.

A note requires as prompt an answer as a spoken question.

"Genteel" and "gentility" are words tabooed in good society.

Regrets in reply to invitations should contain the reason therefor.

Strangers arriving should notify friends by card or by their presence.

At the table you are not required to thank the one who waits on you.

You should exchange calls with individuals before inviting them to your house.

Only letters to unmarried ladies and widows are addressed with their baptismal name.

The custom of leaving a blank margin on the left hand side of each page of a letter is obsolete.

To return a personal call with cards enclosed in an envelope signifies that visiting between the person, is ended.

Unless there is a great difference in age, a lady visiting should not rise, either on arrival or departure of other ladies.

Man's Noblest Work.

This is an age of great works and wonderful inventions. Steam, electricity, water, air, all are made to serve man; but unquestionably the greatest inventions are those which preserve man's health and prolong his life, and among the greatest of these is Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Its effects are truly wonderful and hundreds are happy to day, who looked forward to an early grave. For Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, loss of voice, Hay Fever, Hoarseness, Croup, or any affection whatever of the Throat, Chest or Lungs, Dr. King's New Discovery will positively cure. We can cheerfully recommend it to all, and can unhesitatingly say it is the only sure cure for Throat and Lung affections. Trial bottles ten cents; regular size $1. For sale by C. A. Wright & Co., Tecumseh.

Hints About Sleeping Rooms.

Many persons complain of always getting up tired in the morning. This is very often due to defective ventilation of the bed-room, or from using an undue amount of warm bed clothes and bedding. Feather beds are too soft and yielding, and partially envelop the sleeper, thus producing profuse perspiration. The habit of lying too much under blankets is also very pernicious by reason of the carbonic acid thrown off by the sleeper being respired. Again it is a common error to suppose that by simply opening a window a little at the top a room can be ventilated. People forget that for proper ventilation there must be an inlet and an outlet for the air. In bed rooms there is often neither, and if there is a fireplace it is a common error to suppose that foul air goes to the top of the room. Certainly heated air goes to the top, but the chief impurity, the carbonic acid, falls to the bottom. There is nothing so efficacious in removing the lower strata of air as the ordinary open fireplace, especially if there is a fire burning. No method of ventilation has yet been discovered half so efficacious.

Astonishing the World.

For a perfect renovation of exhausted and enfeebled constitutions, female weakness and decline, nothing so surely and speedily produces a permanent cure as does Electric Bitters. Their wonderful cures are astonishing the world. For Kidney or Urinary complaints they are a perfect specific. Do not give up in despair, for Electric Bitters will positively cure, and that where everything else fails. Sold by C. A. Wright & Co., at 50 cents a bottle.

Theory of Absorption.

The theory of cure by Absorption is certainly growing in favor. The whole remedy for one dollar. For sale by Druggists.

GEO. P. ROWELL & CO'S
SELECT LIST OF LOCAL NEWSPAPERS.

An advertiser who spends upwards of $3,000 a year, and who invested less than $350 of it in this List, writes: "Your Select Local List paid me better last year THAN ALL THE OTHER ADVERTISING I DID."

IT IS NOT A CO-OPERATIVE LIST.
IT IS NOT A CHEAP LIST.
IT IS AN HONEST LIST.

The catalogue states exactly what the papers are: When the name of a paper is printed in FULL FACE TYPE it is in every instance the BEST.—When printed in CAPITALS it is the ONLY paper in the place. The list gives the population of every town and the circulation of every paper.

The rates charged for advertising are barely one-fifth the publishers' schedule. The price for single States ranges from $2 to $30. The price for one inch one month in the entire list is $625. The regular rates of the papers for the same space and time are $2,980.14. The list includes 915 newspapers of which 187 are issued DAILY and 765 WEEKLY. They are located in 788 different cities and towns, of which 26 are State Capitals, 363 places of over 5,000 population, and 468 County Seats. For copy of List and other information, address GEO. P. ROWELL & CO., 10 Spruce St., New York.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT TECUMSEH, MICHIGAN, AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

TECUMSEH, MICH., MAR. 24, 1881.

THE NATIONAL CANDIDATE.

Gen. Jas. B. Weaver, the National candidate for President in the last campaign, was advertised to speak in Tecumseh last Monday afternoon, but through some misunderstanding he did not arrive till four o'clock P. M., and then had to go directly on to Adrian where he was advertised to speak in the evening.

Gen. Weaver addressed a good audience in the evening at the Adrian Opera House. We take the following brief synopsis of his speech from the Adrian Times:

Gen. Weaver is robustly built, wears a heavy mustache, and speaks slowly and distinctly. He said this was the seventh meeting he had held in the state, and was the only one in which the house had been large enough. He mentioned this fact to show the "deep interest" felt in the enunciation of the principles of the greenback party. The speaker started out by castigating the old parties, gradually letting up on the democrats and discharging most of his broadsides at the republicans. He claimed that in the recent campaign both parties buried the financial question out of sight, and took a novel way of proving the assertion by quoting distinct declarations from the platform of each. Let no one be discouraged, said he, by the slow growth of the greenback party. It is growing fast enough to be healthy and honest. If there was an immediate prospect of the party getting into power, every political bummer would rush to it. The spasmodic growth of the greenback party in Michigan was one of the worst things that could happen to it. The speaker alluded to the genius of the forefathers in forbidding titles of nobility, abolishing the law of primogeniture, etc. But there was one thing they did not foresee—the on-coming of giant corporations—or they would have taken precaution to protect the people from their grasp.

Gen. Weaver's fundamental proposition, which he repeated with emphasis, was that no power essential to the happiness and welfare of the whole people should ever in a republic be allowed to pass out of the hands of the people into the hands of men not chosed by the people, and not responsible to them. The speaker applied the principle to the money, transportation and other questions. The burden of his lamentations was that the national banks issue the currency to be used as money. He believes that congress ought to control the volume of money. He complained that the greenback party is called "communists, repudiators, and wild fanatics," but he charged the corporations of the country with being "land thieves, bond thieves, monopolists, and responsible neither to God nor man." The party will be administering the government after those who are sneering at it are "dead, damned and forgotten." He was dissatisfied with the administration of President Hayes, and was not pleased with Garfield's inaugural.

The audience paid the speaker good attention, and frequently expressed approval by applause. A general hand-shaking followed the speech.

Vennor is ahead yet. His great culminating storm of the season, which was to strike Chicago on the 20th, arrived there on the 19th, just one day before the time. The wind had been blowing strong during the night, first from the southwest shifting to northeast, and increasing to a gale of at least 30 miles an hour. Then came the snow, at first fine and piercing, later in large wet flakes, being driven along horizontally by the wind and sticking to everything it touched.—The city was quickly shrouded in a white mantle. It was impossible to see across the street, so dense was the fall. In a very short time the cars experienced difficulty in running, owing to heavy wet snow packing and drifting on the tracks, and within an hour they were blocked at all points on every line. They could not be moved forward or back. The horses were taken off and the cars abandoned, passengers being obliged to go on foot or return home. On the west Madison street line, thirty cars were blocked in one bunch. At Robey street six horses were attached to empty cars, and they were run into the barns as rapidly as possible. Snow plows were of no use, it being impossible to keep them on the tracks. It is the first time this winter that street cars have been unable to move.

President Garfield is bothered with more office-seekers in Washington then when he was at Mentor. But he has one consolation. In Washington they are compelled to board themselves.

Ward and Hugh are laboring this week with the denizens of Battle Creek.

MEDICAL LEGISLATION.

A bill is now pending in the legislature for the regulation of the practice of medicine, and for the protection of the people from the practices of incompetent, uneducated pretenders. Acts of similar character have been in operation in many states, and in Canada since 1866. Shall our own state, while it boasts one of the foremost of medical schools, continue to neglect the interests of her people in this matter? Lawyers, teachers, etc., are required to give satisfactory proof of their qualifications and fitness before engaging in their pursuits. Shall less be required of those who assume responsibilities and direct interest much greater than any other? The proposed legislation is not in the interest of any class or school of physicians. It is not calculated to foster monopoly, or class interests in medicine, but to simply secure proper qualifications from those who engage in its practice. It is not to add to the burdens of the people, as the expenses of the law, should it become one will be met by the registration of physicians. It will be under state control, and yet will be self-sustaining. We trust the bill entitled "An act to prescribe the qualifications and duties of practitioners in medicine and surgery, and to regulate the practice of medicine" will receive the careful, earnest consideration from the legislature, which its importance demands, and that they will before closing their labors, enact a law which shall give the public security from the frauds practiced by ignorant unscrupulous pretenders in medicine. The people have neither the time or ability to discriminate between the fraudulent and the genuine in physicians, and they ask that the law afford them a guaranty of the qualifications of the man in whose hands they propose to trust their lives.

The Philadelphia Times is a model newspaper. It published a retrospect the other day at the close of its sixth year, giving a condensed history of its inception and progress during the six years of its existence. It is certainly a very remarkable showing. The Times has not only been a literary success—every one who reads the paper knows that—but it has achieved great pecuniary success also. On this point the article quoted from says:

The Times has attained a measure of financial success in six years that is entirely unprecedented in the history of American journalism. After the first three months of its publication, it never drew a dollar from its capital for current expenses, and it closed the first year with its capital intact and a liberal cash profit in its treasury. It is, we believe, the only first-class daily journal ever founded in this country that has paid not less than six per cent. annual dividends to its shareholders from the day it started; that never gave a note or other obligation for money in its business; that never borrowed a dollar from any one; that never had a bill unpaid after maturity or demand; that has paid its entire real estate mortgage of one hundred thousand dollars out of profits; that has a like sum of one hundred thousand dollars of reserve profits in its treasury to-day, and that owns over half a million of property, without one dollar of debt, on an investment of two hundred thousand dollars of capital. And this has been achieved not only without the favors of power, but by rejecting the official favors of friendly power. It is the tribute of the intelligent, independent citizen to the independent journal. It proves that as independent voting is most profitable to the community, independent journalism is most profitable to the newspaper, and The Times enters its seventh year more widely read, and more generously supported in every department, than ever before in its successful history.

LAW OF LIBEL.

The State Press Association has proposed a Bill in relation to libel suits, to the legislature, which ought to pass. Something of this kind is very much needed.

SECTION 1. It shall be unlawful for the attorney or counsel for the plaintiff in any action for libel to possess any contingent pecuniary interest in the result thereof, and if any such interest be shown it shall bar the plaintiff's right of action.

SEC. 2. In prosecutions for libels brought against the editor or publisher of any newspaper, where no malice is shown, only actual damages shall be recovered.

SEC. 3. Publishers of newspapers shall be liable only for the actual damages proved to have been sustained in consequence of any publication, when it is shown that such publication was believed by them to be true, and was published by them in good faith, and where a retraction has not been refused.

SEC. 4. In criminal prosecutions for libels it shall be deemed a full and sufficient defense if the defendant shall prove that the publication was made by the act of another person without the defendant's express authority or consent and without his knowledge, and that there was no want of care on his part.

SEC. 5. All acts and parts of acts contravening any of the provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

IN his new Seed Catalogue for 1881, Joseph Harris, of Moreton Farm, Rochester, N. Y., says that what we most need is a variety that will take the place of the Peachblow. He thinks the Genesee County King and Perfection the two most promising varieties for this purpose. They are vigerous growers, yield largely, and are of good quality.

Adrian Press: Not a little excitement was caused Tuesday by the arrest of Levant Brown, on a charge of stealing from an office in the day time, Mr. T. J. Hiller, of Hudson, making the complaint, alleging that some time last fall Brown stole an inkstand from his office. Brown used the inkstand in the court room here, and on being taken before Justice Lamb, plead not guilty and was let off on his own recognizance to appear next Tuesday. We believe Brown admits the inkstand is Hiller's and the case is very likely to be settled on explanation being made.

HOMER ANDREWS CAPTURED.

Homer Andrews alias Travers who last week Wednesday made the murderous assault upon Thos. E. Johns, a produce dealer in Wixom, Oakland Co., has, after a hot chase and search, been captured.

The circumstances are as follows: Johns stopped at the house of a farmer, A. N. Kinnie, for supper. Andrews, who was in the employ of Kinnie heard Johns at the supper table remark that he had about $500 in his pocket. After supper Andrews as if going to do the chores went out and proceeded down the road to a place where Johns would pass. He secreted himself, armed with a heavy club. Soon Johns drove down the road, as soon as he was by the spot Andrews jumped out and run up behind the buggy, dealing Johns three or four heavy blows on the head. He then rifled the insensible man's pockets and placed the body in a granary near by. He proceeded to a farm house and stole a horse and sulky with which he made his escape from the slowly aroused neighborhood. He was tracked to Ann Arbor, where he stole another horse and hurried on his way. He passed through Tecumseh, stopping for a short time. He proceeded to the house of his father in Weston. He remained a short time there on last week Thursday. Sheriff Bidwell and his deputies were on his track and maintained a vigorous search. They followed him to the house of Chester Savage in Medina township. Here Andrews was secreted but he succeeded by slamming doors in the officers' faces to reach the outside and immediately run into a piece of woods near by. The officers failed to trace his course in the woodland and gave up the chase. Andrews kept on evading the officers, who were misled from time to time by various rumors, until a farmer, Mr. —— of Medina township, while working in the field last Tuesday P. M., saw Andrews in a bordering piece of woods. He immediately threw off his coat and vest and gave chase. Andrews, who was attenuated by anxiety and hunger was weak and unable to put space between him and the fleet footed farmer. As a consequence Andrews was captured by the pursuer and delivered over to the authorities in Adrian thus securing the $900. reward.

Johns, the victim of the assault, is in a low condition but probably will survive.

G. PAUL SMITH.

*G. Paul Smith, the young elocution*ist and impersonator is billed for the Opera House next Tuesday evening, March 29. His entertainments are highly spoken of wherever he has been.

The G. Paul Smith entertainments are delightful. In his impersonations he ranks ahead of Helen Potter.—Chicago Daily Tribune.

The character personations and recitations of G. Paul Smith are truly wonderful. Although but nineteen years of age he already stands pre-eminent in his profession, and will, in time, no doubt, astonish the world.—Chicago Times.

The audience that listened to Master Smith last evening was delighted. He exhibits a degree of talent which, in one so young, is marvelous. His readings were powerful and "Little Sene" caused many hearts to thrill—the wild grief of the old man and the sublime heroism of the burning girl were so vividly pictured as to cause many tears to flow. But in his personations he particularly excels. As Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton, we forgot the boy elocutionist and saw only the pleasant-faced, middle-aged lady, with silvery hair and sweet voice. "Over the Hill to the Poor House" was a perfect picture—the old mother relating her mournful story and breaking down with grief at the end in a manner most affecting, while "Solon Shingle" kept his audience convulsed with laughter for about half an hour. It was a delightful entertainment and one that will benefit and elevate the character of any place.—Cincinnati Times.

THE Greenbackers were considerably *disappointed last Monday after*noon by the failure of Gen. Weaver to reach Tecumseh in time to deliver a speech as was expected. But their minds were in a degree appeased by the appearance of the lately defeated candidate for President upon the platform of the car at the Chicago street crossing, à la Grant, who spoke to the assembled crowd while the train was standing. He expressed his regret at being unable to fulfill his engagement here; and referred to the increasing strength of the party; gave a whack at the national banks and then resumed his seat in the car.

THE Teachers' Institute for Lenawee county will be held in Hudson, commencing Monday, March 28, at 2 p. m., and closing Friday afternoon of the same week. THE AMERICAN CYCLOPEDIA.

Messrs. D. Appleton & Co's new Encyclopedia, revised edition of 16 royal octavo volumes and index, with 6,000 illustrations given in the highest style of art, with its typography and letter paper, makes the work, for beauty and neatness, decidedly the finest ever offered to the American people. It has besides the advantage over all other encyclopedias now being forced upon our attention, of being truly and decidedly an American work, while the others, under whatever name, are simply British; and we all know that British means only John Bull and nobody and nothing else. This may be pleasing to some, but we must confess that it is not and never was to our taste. This work will be found especially rich in history, biography, science, art, and in fact there is hardly any subject or event of any kind, which is not in some form or other treated upon in it by the finest and most analytical minds of both this country and Europe.

Mr. T. E. Gridley who represents the House in this matter here and may for a short time at least, be found at his room in Sink's Hotel, is a gentleman of science, culture and ability, and presents the work in a manner likely to commend itself and prove acceptable to all whom he may favor, or who may favor him, with a call.

This work can only be procured of the authorized agents and is not put upon sale at the book stores and is of such a character that no business or professional man can well afford to be without it.

We hope our citizens will improve this opportunity to at least examine the work and to compare it with others of the kind offered to the public attention and should they conclude to make themselves the possessor of it they may rest satisfied that they have in this respect procured the newest, best and most valuable work of the kind for an American citizen that is to be had at any price—and the terms and times of payment are such as to put it within the reach of not only every professional man, but also of almost every working man and artisan in the place.

The Japanese have some curious customs. The workman shoves the plane towards him, while the teeth of a saw are so set that it is the upward pull which cuts. They print on but one side of the paper, and commence reading in what we call the back part, turning the leaves from the left to the right. The lines run up and down and not across the page like our books. The pages are numbered at the foot. The face of the clock moves while the hands stand still. Of course we cannot fully understand these things, but that is the way things are done on the other side of the world.

In the matter of the estate of Charles M. Tilton, Minor.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of John L. Dailey, alleging among other things that he and said minor reside without this State, to wit: at the city of Denver, in the county of Arapahoe in the State of Colorado; that said minor is entitled to property in said county of Lenawee, and on producing to this court in the county in which such property or the principal part thereof is situated a full and complete transcript from the records of the county court of the county of Arapahoe in the State of Colorado, duly exemplified and authenticated, showing that he has been appointed guardian of said ward, and that he has given a bond and security in said State of Colorado in double the value of the property of said ward, and showing that he still remains such guardian, and further, alleging that said property is now in the possession and under the control of Edwin B. Wood, and that a removal of the property of said ward will not conflict with the terms and limitation attending the right by which said ward owns the same nor be nor become prejudicial to his interest therein, and praying that this court issue to petitioner letters or a certificate of guardianship of the estate of said ward, authorizing said petitioner to demand, sue for and recover any such property and remove the same to the place of residence of himself and said ward, and directing any guardian, executor or administrator residing in the State of Michigan having possession of any of said property to deliver the same to said petitioner.

Thereupon it is ordered, That Monday, the 28th day of March, A.D. 1881, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the next-of-kin of said ward, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing. WASHINGTON NOTES.

By way of a coincidence it is remarked that Benjamin Lincoln, the first Secretary of War, was appointed in 1781, and the present Secretary of War, Robert Lincoln, was appointed, in 1881, just 100 years difference between the dates of the appointments. A picture of the first Secretary hangs on the wall of the Secretary's Department, and a picture of the present Secretary will be placed alongside it. There is no relationship between the two.

THE PENSION OFFICE CLERICAL FORCE.

In view of the accumulation of work in the pension office, Congress, just before its adjournment, passed a bill granting the commissioner of pensions 150 additional clerks. These places will probably be filled by Secretary Kirkwood next week. Provision must first be made for the accommodation of so large a number of clerks, the building now occupied by the pension bureau being already crowded.

DAKOTA.

Gov. N. G. Ordway, of Dakota territory, is in the city. He was appointed more than a year ago. When he first assumed his duties he says he found the inclination of the Legislature was to pass, regardless of public policy, bills involving heavy appropriations for court-houses, public buildings, etc. Nearly all of these bills the governor vetoed. At first this action made him unpopular, but before the Legislature adjourned he was presented a vote of thanks. The Governor says the territory is now out of debt, although some of the counties have contracted heavy obligations, that there are twelve hundred miles of railroads in the territory, and that it is growing in population and wealth.

THE FORTUNE BAY OUTRAGES.

Secretary Blaine took up the thread of the negotiations with England respecting the Fortune Bay outrages and others of like character where, Lord knows, it left off. During the last few days he has been cabling almost constantly with Lord Granville. As a result, the latter proposes that the whole matter be referred for decision to Senator Blaine and Sir Edward Thornton, British minister here. If they disagree, they are to name a referee, whose decision shall be accepted as final by the two governments. This proposition is now under consideration, and will probably be accepted by our government.

THANKS FROM THE CZAR.

The Secretary of State has received from Mr. Foster, United States Minister at St. Petersburg, the following telegraphic dispatch conveying an acknowledgment of the expressions of sympathy of the President and Senate in the national bereavement which Russia has just experienced:

"To Blaine, Secretary, Washington.

The Minister for Foreign Affairs says the Emperor is profoundly touched by the expressions of sympathy of the President and Senate of the country for which the deceased Emperor professed sincere esteem and earnest friendship. It is a legacy which he left to the Emperor Alexander III., and which his Majesty, in accord with the Russian nation accepts, from the depths of his heart.

FOSTER,
Minister to St. Petersburg."

FINANCIAL.

The United States bonds re-deposited since Secretary Windom's decision by the national banks which had previously withdrawn their bonds to the deposit of legal-tender notes amount to $5,467,950; United States bonds deposited by other banks which had not previously reduced their circulation, $828,500; national bank notes received by banks which deposited legal-tender notes during the pendency of the funding bill, $1,813,750; amount issued to other banks which deposited, $1,623,320; total, $3,437,130; issued upon deposit of bonds during the same period, national bank circulation outstanding, $346,735,628; legal-tender notes on deposit to secure withdrawing circulation, banks in liquidation, and insolvent banks, $38,921,104, leaving the net amount of circulation of the national banks outstanding, secured by United States bonds, $307,813,524; United States bonds to secure circulation, $347,632,000, of which $46,983,000 are 6s of 1881, $158,470,100 funded 5's, $137,179,050 4's and 4½'s.

POSSIBILITIES OF AN EXTRA SESSION.

For two or three weeks past nearly every report public life has discredited the possibility of an extra session, yet, notwithstanding this fact, gossip about an extra session has most of the time to time to make its appearance on the surface. A prominent friend of Gen. Garfield, a Republican Senator, said: "It is not yet a settled question whether there is to be an extra session or not. People who say that Gen. Garfield has no intention of calling an extra session are very much mistaken. The policy of such action has been in his mind for some time. I consider it very nearly an everything whether an extra session is called or not." It is understood here to-night that the subject will come up at a cabinet meeting. The same friend of Gen. Garfield said that he thought that the matter would be absolutely settled one way or the other within the next week.

STANLEY MATTHEWS.

There now seems to be little prospect of confirmation of the nomination of ex-Senator Matthews as an associate justice of the United States Supreme court. As the new Judiciary committee is arranged there is only one member of it who will vote for his confirmation—Mr. Lamar, of Mississippi. This leaves only one chance for Mr. Matthews, and that is to have the committee discharged from further consideration of the nomination and get a direct vote on the nomination in the Senate. The impression is abroad, too, that the President is apathetic as to whether he is confirmed or not. It is said he sent his name in because of a promise extracted upon the re-nomination of all of the appointments made by President Hayes which failed of confirmation at the last session. Friends of Mr. Matthews are exceedingly despondent, and have now but little hope of his confirmation.

NOTICES TO OFFICE-SEEKERS.

Secretary Lincoln has issued the following notice:

It is not being possible for the Secretary of War to receive personal applications for clerkships, he is directed that no person be admitted to see him for that purpose. Applicants will file their papers with the chief clerk, who will submit them.

The Secretary of War has also issued the following order for the transaction of business in the department:

Reception of members of Congress and all persons not officers of the department, from 10 to 1 o'clock; reception of heads of bureaus and officers of the department having business with the secretary, from 1 to 3 o'clock. From 3 to 4 o'clock all persons will be excluded, and heads of bureaus and officers of the department are respectfully requested not to call in this hour unless specially invited.

REBELLION RECORDS.

Congress appropriated in the Sundry Civil bill, which has become a law, the aggregate sum of $100,000 for continuing the work of compiling and publishing the official records of the war of the rebellion. This will only partially complete the work, which will require several years yet. So far only a few volumes have come to the public printer. The entire compilation will consist of ninety-six volumes. It will be the first general publication of military records of the late war. Col. Scott, the compiler, says it is intended to embrace all official documents that can be obtained and that appear to be of any historical value. Owing to the great number of documents dating to events contemporaneous in the several areas of active military operations and to the general conduct of the war, it has been found necessary to adopt the plan of publication in series. The first series will embrace the formal reports, both union and confederate, of the first seizures of United States property in southern states and of military operations in the field, with correspondence, orders, and returns relating specially thereto. The second series will contain the correspondence, orders, reports, and returns, union and confederate, relating to prisoners of war, and to State or political prisoners. The third series will contain the correspondence, orders, reports, and returns of the union authorities, embracing their correspondence with confederate officials, and not relating specially to the subjects of the first and second series. The fourth series will exhibit the correspondence, orders, reports, and returns of the confederate authorities, similar to that indicated for union officials as of the third series, and with the exception therein indicated.

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE

MARCH 14.—The oath of office was taken by Messrs. McDill of Iowa, and Cameron of Wisconsin.

Mr. Morgan offered a resolution denouncing assassination as a means of redress for any grievance.

On the question of organizing the Senate speeches were made by Messrs. Pendleton, Conkling, and Hill, the latter inquiring particularly what Senator chosen by Democrats would prove false to his trust.

Mr. Mahone took a position in front of the Vice President's desk and declared that he should vote as he pleased; that he owed nothing to the Democrats, and that the Democratic party had done more injury to the South than anything else.

Mr. Ingalls proposed that by unanimous consent the question of organization should be postponed until Thursday, when all seats of Senators will be filled.

Mr. Pendleton, while not authorized to give consent on the part of his own side of the chamber, deprecated the idea of making the question one of physical endurance.

Mr. Voorhees expressed the idea of going on with the organization of committees at once, and offered to be one of the two Democrats who would withhold their votes.

The resolution of condolence with the government and people of Russia was taken up and adopted unanimously.

Adjourned.

MARCH 15.—When the Senate met the desk of Senator Mahone was decorated with a handsome basket of flowers.

Mr. Voorhees called up the resolutions offered by him yesterday, calling on the Attorney General for information as to the names of Deputy United States Marshals appointed in the State of Indiana to attend the polls at the election in that State in October last.

On motion of Mr. Edmunds an amendment was adopted calling for any information in possession of the Attorney General bearing upon the necessity for the employment of such marshals.

The resolution, as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. Pendleton called up his reorganization resolution, when Mr. Cameron of Pennsylvania, interposed a motion to adjourn. Lost—yeas, 34; nays, 36—Mr. Davis, of Illinois, with the Democrats, and Mahone with the Republicans.

Mr. Cameron, of Pennsylvania, followed up with a motion to proceed to the consideration of executive business. Lost—yeas, 34; nays, 37.

Mr. Pendleton moved to adjourn. It was evident, he said, that no vote could be reached on the pending business. Agreed to; adjourned.

MARCH 16.—The organization resolution was taken up.

Mr. Cameron, of Pennsylvania, moved to adjourn, but yielded to Mr. Vest to offer a resolution requesting the President to communicate to the Senate correspondence and accompanying documents between the governments of the United States and Mexico, during the years 1859 to 1861 inclusive, and also the correspondence during said years between the State department and the United States minister at Mexico, in reference to any proposed convention or treaty between the two governments. Adopted.

The motion to adjourn was lost—yeas, 28; nays, 35; Mahone not voting,—and was followed up with a motion to proceed to the consideration of executive business. Lost—yeas, 32; nays, 34; Mahone voting in the affirmative.

Another dilatory motion having been voted down, Mr. Cameron, of Pennsylvania, moved to go into executive session.

After a short debate the motion was lost.

Mr. Beck said that, as there was a Republican President, backed by a Republican House, it might be better for the Democratic party that he also have the Senate at his back, and have the credit for all that was good and the responsibility for all that was bad; therefore he (Beck) was not attempting to hold on to a few privileges, and he thought the Senate might as well adjourn, and made a motion to that effect. Agreed to.

Adjourned.

MARCH 17.—The credentials of Senator Edgerton, of Minnesota, were presented, and he took the oath of office.

Mr. Pendleton said he had received information which induced him to believe that it would be impossible to obtain a vote upon the pending resolution this morning, and he therefore moved to adjourn. Agreed to.

Adjourned.

MARCH 18.—The credentials of Mr. Frye, were presented, and he took the oath of office.

Mr. Pendleton called up the organization resolution.

Mr. Anthony moved that the resolution be indefinitely postponed.

Mr. Conkling inquired whether it was Mr Anthony's desire to have the resolution postponed in order that he might offer another resolution.

Mr. Anthony replied that it was.

The vote was taken, and resulted, yeas 37, nays 35. Davis, of Illinois, voted in the negative with the Democrats. When Mahone's name was reached he also voted with the Democrats, and a buzz of astonishment ran around the assembly, but before the vote was announced he arose and changed his vote, amid some applause and some vigorous hissing in the galleries. Messrs. Vance and Edmunds were paired.

The Vice President then said, the vote of the Senate being evenly divided, the chair will vote aye. He therefore declared the motion carried.

The resolution offered by Mr. Anthony, reorganizing the Senate committees, and on a Republican basis, was agreed—yeas, 38; nays, 36; the Vice President casting the deciding vote, and then the Senate went into executive session.

Mr. Saulsbury said he did not rise for the purpose of objecting to the vote of the Vice President, but to express his own opinion that in the organization of the Senate, the Vice President was not clothed by the constitution with power to decide in a question of this character. He simply wished to say that, here and now, there was an assumption of power on the part of the Vice President unwarranted by the constitution.

Mr. Logan said the Vice President merely followed precedents, and quoted a similar case in 1879.

The following are the Senate committees as elected, the first named on each committee being the Chairman:

Privileges and Elections—Hoar, Cameron (Wis.), Teller, Sherman, Frye, Saulsbury, Hill (Ga.), Vance and Pugh.

MONDAY, March 21.—The board met, organized, and adjourned till morning.

TUESDAY, March 22.—A communication was read from W. A. Underwood, in which he stated that he had no bill for services in the grand stand case.

The claim of W. K. Gibson, for assisting in the prosecution of W. T. Lawrence, amounting to $267, was reported.

The committee on claims reported back the claim of Dr. G. A. Hendricks, of Ann Arbor, amounting to $51.80, for attendance on court, and embalming the body of Matthias Johnson, who was killed at the fall of the grand stand, and over whose remains the inquest was held. Referred to a special committee consisting of Sups. McComb, Gates and Warren.

A number of other claims were reported on favorably and allowed.

BROOKLYN.

Everything is chilled except good intentions, and they are to be subjected to a temperance hammering tomorrow evening in Methodist hall to temper their tenacity for town meeting. I dont know what is expected to happen that day, but whatever it may be the ministers are anxious it shall pan out properly.

There is some reason for thinking that clergymen who live remote from railroad communication are not acquainted with the new gospel version or else have endured such moral pressure from left-handed morality they are obliged to forgo their privilege of branching out into new paths for fear of offending patrons and losing their present thin chance of doing good.—They deem it safer to endure the ills they have than fly to others they know not of. Others have found a way to avoid temporal unpleasantness while doing spiritual work.

If the Addison sister would only suggest the argument to her pastor that never offends prejudice of any kind, all would be lovely. Here it goes by the name of Home Influence. It is a species of saving grace, very much lauded in temperance sermons, and notwithstanding the variety of outside competition it does accomplish a great deal. There are of course some isolated cases where the basis of home has been undermined for sixteen generations before the shell was set up.—The women who preside there inherit a ready-made business. They plant their talents as they do oats for window baskets. They cover the pool with a mask and sprinkle on the words. The roots of meaning go somewhere below, a pretty pretense waves above. This is a skill in window gardening home affairs, for the eyes of one's neighbors, that wins applause and deserves it.

All the home there is under such roofs is created by the home influence and it is the fashionable hobby that orators ride as gracefully as a little boy does the broom. The exercise seems about as natural and refreshing to one as the other, and there is only this difference, the boy sometimes shifts ends with the commotion he makes, but the man just shifts the commotion and his share in the making. His implicit faith in women's abtlity to wring music from wrangle is very affecting to most of the brethren and flattering to the sisters.

It is a safe subject to talk about and it is only when something gets compressed into the home that all ont-of-doors can't hold without spreading, that the sentiment seems inadequate to PEARLIE.

Blissfield Advance: In the fore part of last week Justice Clark married Edward Rogers of this place, and Algia Brisbin of Wellsville, both parties representing that they were of age. On Friday afternoon, however, the parents of Miss Brisbin, who were unaware of the marriage of their daughter, came to the village, and learning the facts, were very much incensed thereat. Legal lights were consulted, the girl interviewed and finally induced to return to the parental roof. Saturday, Brisbin went to Adrian and swore out a warrant for Ed's arrest, on the harge of seduction, stating that Algia was under sixteen years of age. Monday was set for the hearing, but before examination commenced the authorities learned that the girl was probably of marriageable age, and the case was dropped on defendant paying costs.

Adrian Times: Gen. Casement is employing all the laborers he can find preparatory to commencing the work of ballasting the Butler road. The contractors have been awaiting the arrival of an engine, and in the meantime have been putting in side tracks and erecting boarding shanties at the gravel bed. Gen. Casement intends to crowd the work. To-day's Free Press says: "Gen. Casement and brother, contractors for the Detroit, Butler & St. Louis railroad, were in the city making arrangements for the use of locomotives and cars, for construction trains. They have no intention of letting the grass grow under their feet, and Gen. Casement says he will put that road through faster than any man dare think of trying to."

Morenci Observer: Presiding Elder Lilly, while on his way to an appointment last Saturday, was followed for about about six miles by a deputy sheriff who supposed him to be the notorious Andrews. On learning that he was following a preacher the officer retraced his journey in not very amiable mood.

BURGLARS ABROAD.

Last Sunday night a gang of burglars, no less than three, visited the houses of several citizens with depredating intent. They were undoubtedly somewhat acquainted with the town as they visited the house of ticket agent Satterthwaite, freight agent Hughes, banker Lilley and express agent Jones; places where there would naturally be same money.

They commenced their prowlings around the house of Newberry Satterthwaite before he was asleep. He heard them walking on the ice about the house and when one of them walked upon the front porch and tried the door the dog barked. Newberry ran down stairs and opened the door in time to see the burglars flying across the road toward Brewer's foundry.

At H. L. Jones' they cut down a rose bush in front of a window and in this way succeeded in entering the house. They went all through the house but failed to enter the room in which Mr. Jones was sleeping, where there was a light. His clothes laid in the middle of the floor containing two watches and a considerable sum of money. They did not obtain anything and finally departed. Mr. Jones' little girl heard them open the window and go through the house but supposed it was her father.

Charlie Bell saw them sneaking about Johnny Hughes' house, and leave without being able to get in.

At Mr. Lilley's they entered the house through a front window. They went through into Mr. Lilley's sleeping room, and a man was at the foot of the bed when he wakened. He jumped out of bed, and the burglar jumped at the same time and escaped the same way he entered. He took a pair of pants and boots, procuring ten dollars in money from a pocket book. In the morning Mr. Mitchell found the pants and boots and returned them together with a lot of papers.

A search was made for them but of no avail. The same parties undoubtedly were concerned in the murderous work at Dr. Hause's. For the next few nights every one in town went to bed with the idea that he would receive a visit during the night, but nothing serious occurred. If any one has an opportunity a bullet might bring the most justice to the criminals.

THE audience that greeted G. Paul Smith at the opera house last Tuesday evening was quite meagre, but those who did not attend missed a rare treat.

As an elocutionist he is ordinary having complete control of his voice, but as an impersonator he is among the best. His impersonation of Elizabeth Cady Stanton was excellent and exceedingly mirthful. Miss Armstrong and Sears were both good; Miss Armstrong elicited considerable applause being an adept whistler, while Miss Sears delighted the audience with her guitar solos.

The opera house managers induced the company to give a second entertainment to night. The programme will be different from that of the first night and every one in town who can enjoy a good entertainment should avail themselves of the opportunity.

Adrian Times: It is currently reported that a certain doctor of medicine, in a town north of us, ekes out a subsistence by acting as agent for a firm of gravestone dealers. He gets them the job of putting up headstones etc., over the remains of his patients, and gets a percentage for his services. Frugal physician. Does he whack up with the undertakers, too?

It is also currently reported that this same doctor bestows his gravestone favors upon foreign dealers to the detriment of his own townsmen. It would be a God-send if he could be persuaded to bestow his medical favors upon foreign patients.

Clinton News: S. W. Dorr, of Manchester, expects to have 3,200 bushels of fine winter apples to place upon the market June 1st. He keeps them by the refrigerator process, on a large scale.

NOTE.—Clayton village in Dover and Hudson townships 368

Adrian Press: "Red Larry" has all the symptoms of a person who bears a charmed life. A short time ago exultant telegraph dispatches announced Larry's arrest, two years after escaping from Ludlow Street jail and triumphantly announced that "the officers have him now." He was carefully guarded with revolvers, and everybody waited for the moment when the Northampton bank robbers of whom Larry was chief would get their deserts. Now comes the finish. The grand jury, on the 18th, failed to find a bill against them, and Larry and his companions cooly walked out of the court house. The persons who four years ago were swift witnesses against them "didn't know," "had forgotten" etc. For such a vast amount of froth there was very little beer at the bottom of the mug. Of course the witnesses hadn't been hired to forget anything. Certainly not.

Adrian Times: Last October, a sort of preacher named Geo. H. Forbes flitting about the county, holding meetings in some places for the sect called Cnristians. While tarrying in Palmyra the fellow was suspected of stealing a number of small articles, but before a warrant was issued he found it convenient to disappear. Nothing was heard of his whereabouts till this week, when the officers received information that he was located in St. Clair, and thither deputy sheriff Hyde departed. Forbes had switched from theology to law, being found reading in a lawyer's office. Some of the stolen property, which consisted of articles of no great value, was found at the house where he boarded. Forbes was brought to the city and lodged in jail last night. He confesses to the larceny of the articles.

Adrian Times: In January, a small sum was abstracted from the money drawer of Grims' hotel, in Palmyra. The Grim-visaged proprietor cogitated a couple of months, and then swore out a warrant for Daniel Carney, a young man of 19, employed in the village paper mill. Deputy sheriff Jibb arrested the paper maker Friday, who finally confessed the larceny. Suspicion pointed to Carney by the finding of a pair of stolen boots hidden in a barn on the premises where he boarded. Carney says he purloined about two dollars, but it is gratifying to learn that his conscience impelled him to immediately pass the ducats over the bar for drinks. He was arraigned last night, before Justice Robbins, waived examination, and retraced his steps to the jail.

Now comes Vennor with weather predictions for the whole year to come. This is the way he maps it out; and those who do not like it can console themselves that the prognostication was made for Canada; while those who do, may know that it applies equally well to the United States. "The spring will be fairly early, hot and dry, and the midsummer cool and wet. The autumn promises to be open, dry and fine. There is likely to be a great deal of sickness during the year, but the weather—except in a few isolated sections—will be favorable to agricultural pursuits. The winter of 1882 bids fair to be open and generally mild, with but few, and those short-lived, storm periods."

The Supervisors at their recent session ordered the fence around the county buildings removed.

A SUMMER RECIPE.

I walk through the streets of the city
Where the business throngs pass by,
The pavements are burning with fever
They've caught from the sultry sky;
And I long for the shadowy woodlands
And the valleys that near them lie.

I long for the perfumed breezes
That over the meadows blow,
For the clear, cold, spring in the valley
Where the coolest waters flow;
For the fold asleep in the shadows,
And the listless kine that low.

And yet this morning the postman
Delivered a letter to me
From my cousin who lives in the country,
And wishes the city to see
For weary, listless, of this farming—
Of laboring constantly.

"Out here the heat is oppressive
And though we sit under the trees,
I assure you the wind's not sufficient
To make a respectable breeze
So I think I'll run down to the city
To pass a few days at my ease.

"Thus city folks resort to the country
And leave their discomforts behind
While the rustic would flee to the city
For rest for both body and mind.
Each thinking that in the transition
Relief he will certainly find.

"But whether one dwells in the city
Or lives in the country, the plan
He should follow, when comes the hot weather
If he is a sensible man,
Is to try hard to have a good temper
And to keep just as cool as he can."

MY MIDNIGHT PERIL.

The night of the 17th of October—shall I ever forget its pitchy darkness, the roar of the autumnal wind through the lonely forest, and the incessant downpour of the rain.

"This comes of short cuts," I muttered petulantly to myself, as I plodded along, keeping close to the trunks of the trees to avoid the ravine through which I could hear the roar of the turbulent stream forty or fifty feet below. My blood ran cold as I thought what might be the possible consequences of a misstep or a move in the wrong direction. Why had I not been content to keep in the right road?

Hold on! was that a light, or my eyes playing me false?

I stopped, holding on to the low resinous boughs of a hemlock that grew on the edge of the bank, for it actually seemed that the wind would seize me bodily and hurl me down the precipitous descent.

It was a light—thank Providence—it was a light, and no ignis fatuus to lead me on to destruction and death.

"Hallo o-o-o!"

My voice rang through the woods like a clarion. I plunged on through tangled vines, dense briers and rocky banks, until, gradually nearing, I could perceive a figure wrapped in an oil cloth cape, or cloak, carrying a lantern.

As the dim light fell upon his face, I almost recoiled. Would not solitude in the woods be preferable to the companionship of this withered, wrinkled old man? But it was too late to recede now.

"What's wanting?" he snarled, with a peculiar motion of the lips that seemed to leave his yellow teeth all bare.

"I am lost in the woods; can you direct me to R—— station?"

"Yes, R—— station is twelve miles from here."

"Twelve miles!"

I stood aghast.

"Could you tell me any shelter I could obtain for the night?"

"No."

"Where are you going?"

"To Drew's, down by the maple swamp."

"Is it a tavern?"

"No."

"Would they take me for the night? I could pay them well."

His eyes gleamed; the yellow stumps stood revealed once more.

"I guess so! folks don't stop there.

"Is it far from here?"

"Not very; about half a mile."

"Then make haste and let us reach it. I am drenched to the skin."

We plodded on, my companion more than keeping pace with me. Presently we left the edge of the ravine, entering what seemed a trackless wood, and keeping straight on until lights gleamed fitfully through the wet foliage.

It was a ruinous old place, with windows all drawn to one side, as if the foundation had settled, and the pillars of a rude porch nearly rotted away.

A woman answered my fellow traveler's knock. My companion whispered a word or two to her, and she turned to me with smooth, voluble words of welcome.

She regretted the poverty of their accommodations; but I was welcome to them such as they were.

"Where is Isaac?" demanded my guide.

"He has not come in yet."

I sat down on a wooden bench beside the fire, and ate a few mouthfuls of bread.

"I should like to retire as soon as possible," I said, for my weariness was excessive.

"Certainly." The woman started up with alacrity.

"Where are you going to put him?" asked my guide."

"Up chamber."

"Put him in Isaac's room."

"No."

"It's the most comfortable."

"I tell you no."

"But here I interrupted the whispered colloquy.

"I am not particular—I don't care where you put me, only make haste."

So I was conducted up a steep ladder that stood in the corner of the room, into an apartment ceiled with sloping beams and ventilated by one small window, where a cot bedstead, crowded close against the board partition, and a pine table with two or three chairs, formed the sole attempts at furniture.

The woman sat the light—an old oil lamp—on the table.

"Anything more I can get you, sir?"

"Nothing, thank you."

"I hope you will sleep well, sir. When shall I call you?"

"At 4 o'clock in the morning, if you please. I must walk over to R—— station in time for the 7 o'clock express."

"I'll be sure to call you, sir."

She withdrew, leaving me alone in the gloomy little apartment. I sat down and looked around me with no very agreeable sensation.

"I will sit down and write to Alice," I thought; "that will soothe my nerves and quiet me perhaps."

I descended the ladder; the fire still glowed redly in the hearth beneath; my companion and the woman sat beside it talking in a low tone, and a third person sat at the table eating; a short, stout, villanious-looking man, in a red flannel shirt and muddy trousers.

I asked for writing materials and returned to my room to write to my wife.

"My darling Alice—"

I paused and laid down my pen as I concluded the words, half smiling to think what she would say could she know of my strange quarters.

Not till both sheets were covered did I lay aside my pen and prepare for slumber. As I folded my paper I happened to glance toward the couch.

Was it the gleam of a human eye observing me through the board partition or was it my own fancy? There was a crack there, but only blank darkness beyond, yet I could have sworn that something had sparkled balefully at me.

I took out my watch—it was 1 o'clock. It was scarcely worth while for me to undress for three hours' sleep. I would lie down in my clothes and snatch what slumber I could. So, placing my valise at the head of my bed, and barricading the lockless door with two chairs, I extinguished the light and laid down.

At first I was very wakeful, but gradually a soft drowsiness seemed to steal over me like a misty mantle, until, all of a sudden, a startling, electric thrill coursed through my veins, and I sat up excited and trembling.

A luminous softness seemed to glow through the room—no light of the moon or stars was ever so penetrating—and by the little window I saw Alice, my wife, dressed in floating garments of white, with her long golden hair knotted back with a blue ribbon. Apparently she was coming to me with outstretched hands, and eyes full of wild, anxious tenderness.

I sprang to my feet and rushed toward her, but as I reached the window the fair apparition seemed to vanish into the stormy darkness, and I was left alone. At the selfsame instant the sharp report of a pistol sounded—I could see the jagged stream of fire at exactly the pillow, straight to the very spot where ten minutes before my head had lain.

With an instantaneous realization of my danger, I swung myself over the edge of the window, jumping some ten feet into the tangled bushes below, and as I crouched there, recovering myself, I heard the tramp of footsteps into my room.

"Is he dead?" cried a voice up the ladder—the smooth, deceitful voice of the woman with the half-closed eyes.

"Of course he is," growled a voice back; "that charge would have killed ten men certain."

A cold, agonizing shudder ran through me. What a den of midnight murderers I had fallen into! And how fearfully narrow was my escape!

With the speed that only mortal terror and deadly peril can give, I rushed through the woods, now illuminated by a faint glimmer of starlight. I know not what impulse guided my footsteps—I never shall know how many times I crossed my own track, or how close I stood to the deadly ravine—but a merciful Providence encompassed me with a guiding and protecting care, for when the morning dawned with faint, red bars of orient light against the stormy eastern sky, I was close to the high road, some seven miles from R——.

Once at the town, I told my story to the police, and a detachment was sent with me to the spot.

After much searching and many false alarms, we succeeded in finding the ruinous old house; but it was empty—the birds had flown; nor did I recover my valise, and watch and chain, which latter I had left under my pillow.

"It's Drew's gang," said the leader of the police, "and they've troubled us for two years. I don't think, though, they'll come back here just at present."

Nor did they.

But the strangest part of my story is yet to come.

Some three weeks afterwards I received a letter from my sister, who was with Alice in her English home—a letter that filled me with surprise.

"I must tell you something very singular," wrote she, "that happened on the night of the 17th of October. Alice had not been well for some time—in fact she had been confined to her bed for nearly a week—and I was sitting beside her, reading. It was late—the clock had just struck one—when all at once she seemed to faint away, growing white and rigid as a corpse. I hastened to call assistance, but all our efforts to restore animation were in vain. I was just about sending for the doctor, when her senses returned as suddenly as they had left her, and she sat up in bed, pushing back her hair and looking wildly around her.

"Alice," I exclaimed, "how you have terrified us all! Are you ill now?

"Not ill," she answered, "but I feel so strange. Grace, I have been with my husband!"

"And all our reasoning failed to convince her of the impossibility of her assertion. She persists to this moment that she saw you and was with you on the morning of the 18th of October. Where and how she cannot tell, but we think it must have been a dream. She is better now, and I wish you could see how fast she is improving."

This is my plain, unvarnished tale. I do not pretend to explain or account for its mysteries. I simply relate facts. Let psychologists unravel it. I am not superstitious, neither do I believe in ghosts, wraiths or apparitions; but this thing I do know: that, although my wife was in England in body on the morning of the 18th of October, her spirit surely stood before me in New York in the moment of deadly peril that menaced me. It may be that to the subtle instinct and strength of a wife's holy love all things are possible, but Alice surely saved my life.

Save Your Papers.

Those who destroy their daily paper when it has been read miss one of the great uses of a good journal. A daily paper is a history of the world issued in daily parts. It is the most impartial history that will ever be printed. It gives the events of the twenty four hours preceding its appearance with the faithfulness of a photograph. These occurrences may be twisted by the future historian into any shape that may suit his purpose, but the daily paper reflects, like a mirror, the world's history of the day before. The paper is also a history of your state and a complete local chronicle of your city.

"It is also a literary medium that gives the thoughts of the best minds in all countries and on all subjects, the latest achievements in science, the record of travel in far off lands, the world of discovery and adventure that is at once entertaining and instructive, the latest literary and poetic gems; in fact it gives every thing that an intelligent reader may desire. Who would think of purchasing such an encyclopedia of knowledge in any other form only to throw it away when read? Those histories, and Picturesque Europes and Americas, and other classes of periodical literature which are sold at fifty cents a part, are read, carefully treasured and bound. Why should not a good newspaper get the same treatment? The volumes at the end of the year would form an invaluable local, state, and general history of that year which would be a whole library in itself. It is true that folio sheets, by reason of their size of page, make an unwieldy volume that is too bulky for practical use, but this objection cannot be urged against those papers of quarto shape, where the year's numbers can be divided into two handsome volums of convenient size, and therefore easily handled. One volume a year is enough to make the weekly edition, and the same arguments that urge the preservation of the daily have equal force when applied to the weekly. So, reader, spare this sheet, tear not a single page; but keep each year complte, a history of the age.—Detroit Free Press.

The Tiger.

His whole frame is put together to effect destruction. In cutting up a tiger you are impressed with this. His tendons are masses of nerve and muscle as hard as steel. The muscular development is tremendous. Vast bands and layers of muscle overlay each other. Strong ligaments, which you can scarcely cut through, and which soon blunt the sharpest knife, unite the solid, free-playing, loosely-jointed bones. The muzzle is broad and short and obtuse. The claws are completely retractile. The jaws are short. There are two false molars, two grinders above, and the same number below. The upper carnivorous tooth has three lobes and an obtuse heel; the lower has two lobes, pointed and sharp, and no heel. There is one very small tuberculous tooth above as an auxiliary, and then the strong back teeth. The muscles of the jaw are of tremendous power. I have come across the remains of a buffalo killed by a tiger, and found all the large bones, even the big strong bones of the pelvis and large joints, cracked and crunched like so many walnuts by the powerful jaws of the fierce brute. The eye is peculiarly brilliant, and when glaring with fury it is truly demoniac. With his bristles rigid, the snarling lips drawn back, disclosing the formidable fangs, the body crouching for his spring, and the lithe tail puffed up and swoolen, and lashing restlessly from side to side, each muscle tense and strung, and an undulating movement perceptible like the motions of a huge snake, a crouching tiger is a sight that strikes a certain chill to the heart of the onlooker. When he bounds forward, with a roar that reverbrates among the mazy labyrinths of the interminable jungle, he tests the steadiest nerve and almost daunts the bravest heart.

The "Village Blacksmith" in Prose.

Under the spreading chestnut tree the village smithy stands; the smith, a mighty man is he, having been twice elected to represent his ward in the City Council. His hair is crisp and black and long, and to appearances, hasn't been combed since his mother used to comb it for him when he was a boy. His face is like the tan; but it wouldn't be so much like it if he would wash it once in a while. His brow is wet with honest sweat, and, as intimated above, it is about the only thing it ever is wet with. Week in, week out, from morn till night, you can hear his bellows blow, and you can also hear the blacksmith pound louder then his bellows about the unheard of number of horse shoes he turned out in an hour on a wager of $1,000. You can hear him swing his heavy hand hammer—Longfellow calls it a "sledge"—but in this our distinguished friend is a little off. It is the helper that swings the sledge. We are not a little surprised that Mr. Longfellow should make such a mistake as this regarding a business to which he was apprenticed, and which he honored for so many years. But we digress. Children coming home from school look in at the open door. They love to hear the bellows roar and see the flaming forge; but what they most love to see is the village blacksmith wrestle with a three-year colt he is trying to shoe. They love to catch the burning sparks that fly like chaff from the threshing floor; but, great Lucifer, you ought to hear the little cusses swear when they happen to catch one! He goes on Sunday to the church, and sits among his boys in order to keep them from throwing spit-balls at the parson. He hears his daughter's voice singing in the village choir, and it makes his heart rejoice, but it makes other people's blood run cold, for she can't sing any better than the average village chorister.

Bismark has always been fond of dogs. When he was a student and a country squire he never went out for a walk without having a couple of hounds at his heels. At Gottingen, where he led a wild, reckless life, he was summoned before the dean for entertaining some boisterous friends with whom he had traveled into the Hartz. With characteristic assurance, he put on his dressing gown and riding boots and startled the venerable official by rushing into the room with a large bloodhound at his heels. The interview was a short one, and Bismark and his dog went back to their quarters. Four young students of the corps of Hanover caught sight of the man and dog and began to laugh. Bismark remonstrated, high words followed and each of the four challenged him to a duel. The Chancellor's favorite dog for many years was Sultan, a Danish mastiff, who invariably accompanied him when he walked or rode at Varzin.

A Good Example.

"I suppose that you won't go to the Sabbath School to-day, Lucy?" said a mother one stormy Sabbath morning, settling herself to read.

"Please let me go to-day, mamma; I want to go because it rains."

"Why, Lucy, that is my excuse for staying at home. How can you make it a reason for going?"

"Our teacher always goes, mamma, in all weather, although she lives so far away. She told the class that one Sabbath, when she went through the storm, and did not find even one scholar, she was so discouraged that she could not help crying. She asked us, too, if we did not go to our day schools in the rainy weather; and she said, while we must obey our parents, if we ask them pleasantly to let us go they would likely be willing. Mamma, will you please let me go to-day?"

"Well, I am willing, my dear, if you wear your school suit. Go and get ready."

But the mother no longer took any interest in her book, but said to her husband (a lawyer), who came in from the library, "Lucy is going to Sabbath school to-day because it rains, so that her teacher may be encouraged by the presence of at least one pupil. Suppose we go to chapel for the same reason, if not for a better

"Agreed. I never could plead a cause to an empty court room, and ministers must find it hard work to preach to empty pews."

TO THE AFFLICTED.

Since the introduction of Kellogg's Columbian Oil it has made more permanent cures and given better satisfaction on Kidney complaints and Rheumatism than any known remedy. Its continued series of wonderful cures in all climates has made it known as a safe and reliable agent to employ against all aches and pains, which are the forerunners of more serious disorders. It acts speedily and surely, always relieving suffering and often saving life. The protection it affords by its timely use on Rheumatism, kidney affection, and all aches and pains, wounds, cramping pains, cholera morbus, diarrhœa, coughs, colds, catarrh, and disorders among children, makes it an invaluable remedy to be kept always on hand in every home. No person can afford to be without it, and those who have once used it never will. It is absolutely certain in its remedial effects and will always cure when cures are possible. Call at C. A. Wright & Co's. and get a memorandum book giving more full details of the curative properties of this wonderful medicine.

Comparative Longevity.

Herr Max Waldstein, of the statistical department at Vienna, has published a pamphlet giving some curious statistics as to the ages of some of the inhabitants of Austria and other parts of Europe. He says that the number of people in Europe who are upwards of ninety years old is 102,831, of whom 60,303 are women. Of those who are over 100 years of age there are 241 women and 161 men in Italy, 229 women and 183 men in Austria, and 526 women and 624 men in Hungary. There are in Austria 1,508,359 persons over sixty years of age, comprising 7.5 per cent. of the whole population. It is found that the percentage of old people is much higher among the Germans than among the Slavs. In the German provinces of Upper Austria and Salzburg it is 11.5; while in Galacia it is only 4. In Hungary there are more old men than old women, which is explained by the fact that the excess of women over men is less in Hungary than in other countries. According to Herr Waldstein, there are in America 100 women and 86 men who are 100 years old, 41 women and 37 men who are 101, and 78 women and 60 men who are upwards of 104 years of age.

Greatest Remedy Known.

Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumptive is certainly the greatest medical remedy ever placed within the reach of suffering humanity.—Thousands of once hopeless sufferers, now loudly proclaim their praise for this Discovery to which they owe their lives. Not only does it positively cure Consumption, but Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Hay Fever, Hoarseness and all affections of the Throat, Chest and Lungs yield at once to its wonderful curative powers as if by magic. We do not ask you to buy a large bottle until you know what you are getting. We therefore earnestly request you to call on your druggists, M. Wright & Son, and get a trial bottle free of cost which will convince the most skeptical of its wonderful merits, and show you what a regular one dollar size bottle will do. For sale by M. Wright & Son, Tecumseh.

A CURE FOR CROUP.—There are many varieties of croup, up to its most dangerous form according to some, called diphtheria, when the whole body becomes infected with the disease, and death generally ensues. Dr. Teste, a physician of standing, reiterates that he never failed to cure croup by means of bromium since he first employed it twelve years ago. The remedy is simple; the one hundreth part of pure bromium dissovled in distilled water. Take every hour, and oftener if necessary, at the commencement of the disease two or three drops of the solution in a teaspoonful of sugared water.

Given Up by the Doctors.

Where doctors have failed to cure, and have given their patients up to die, Electric Bitters have often been used, and a cure effected, greatly to the astonishment of all. Diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Urinary Organs are positively cured by Electric Bitters. They invariably cure Constipation, Headache and all Bilious Attacks. Try them and be convinced that they are the best medicine ever used. Sold by C. A. Wright & Co. at fifty cents a bottle.

An Illinois clergyman meets heart-broken girl on train; tells her there is a better land; supports her fainting form; helps her off at a small station, and finds his watch and $200 gone. Does it pay to be good?

Here is the worst pun we have seen in six months. In Alabama they chew the tassels of the fir tree as a substitute for tobacco. Which reminds us of the old adage, "Be fir-chewers and you'll be happy."

Whitewash on Poultry Houses.

The man who lets his cellar go from year to year without a fresh coat of whitewash may have to pay a hundred-fold the cost in the doctor's bills, with the risk of inestimable loss to his household in health or even in life. Whitewash is also worth more than it costs in the buildings occupied by domestic fowls. The Carolina Farmer has the following judicious remarks on its use for poultry houses:

"Without a free use of whitewash no poultry breeder can expect to keep his fowls healthy for any length of time, and to a neglect of this oth be attributed many of the disappointments and much of the loss experienced by amateurs, who do not realize, until they have paid dearly for the experience, that cleanliness is one of the first principles in poultry keeping, and that lime, in different forms, is an invaluable agent in promoting cleanliness in poultry houses and amongst fowls. Where it can be done without too much expense, we would advise persons in building their poultry houses to use planed boards, at least planed on the inside, in preference to rough ones, for it is far easier to keep the fowl house clean when smooth boards are used, while the lice and other vermin cannot so readily find a lodging-place. As a preventive is cheaper and better than a cure, we advise those who build a poultry house to give it a good whitewashing both inside and out, before the fowls are let inside. To make the whitewash still more distasteful to the vermin which have such a taste for poultry, mix a small quantity of carbolic acid with the wash, stir it well till it dissolves, and then apply. It is not injurious to the fowls, but is to the vermin, and at the same time, is a deodorizer and disinfectant."

The universal expectation of married people is, that their married lives will always be happy ones. Deluded dreamers! They imagine that they are different from other people, and that when they enter the portals of matrimony, love, peace and prosperity will ever be their attendants. Such had better consider themselves the same as others, but form iron resolutions to do different from other married people—resolutions that will keep them from the dangerous coasts on which so many have been wrecked and ruined. Unhappy marriages depend upon many causes. Previous to marriage, many try to appear more intellectual, more amiable or more accomplished than they really are. Depend upon it, that love brought into existence by a moonlight stroll, strengthened by deceit and fashionable displays, and finally consummated through the influence of intriguing friends, will fade in after life almost as fast as the flowers which compose the bridal wreath.

Preserve Your Lumber.

It is a good thing that the state of Texas has at last turned its attention to the protection of its timber; and every man in the state who owns any timber land should take especial care to preserve it; for the day is not far distant when lands will be worth more on account of their timber than on account of the richness of the soil. In fact in many portions of the state this is the case already.

The American people, because of the dense forests that once covered a large portion of the continent, were educated to look upon timber as a curse, and the great sine qua non has been how to destroy it. But they are beginning to realize the fact now that it was placed here for some other purpose than an impediment to the farmer, and are talking about devising ways and means to preserve it.

Until quite recently the general government took no active steps to stop this wanton waste of timber, but at last the Secretary of the Interior seems determined to stay the destruction of this invaluable boon to mankind, and we only hope his exertions will meet with success.—Texas Paper.

The Chinese Tumbler.

There's a pretty little bird that lives in China, and is called the Fork-Tailed Parus. He is about as big as a robin, and he has a red beak, orange-colored throat, green back, yellow legs, black tail and red-and-yellow wings. Nearly all the colors are in his dress, you see, and he is a gay fellow.

But this bird has a trick known by no other birds that ever I heard of. He turns somersaults? Not only does he do this in his free life on the trees, but also after he is caught and put into a cage. He just throws his head far back, and over he goes, touching the bars of the cage, and alighting upon his feet on the floor or perch. He will do it over and over a number of times without stopping, as though he thought it great fun.

All his family have the same trick, and they are called Tumblers. The people of China are fond of keeping them in cages and seeing them tumble. Travelers often have tried to bring them to this country, but the sea voyage is not good for them, and they are almost sure to die on the way.

TO ADVERTISERS.

GEO. P. ROWELL & CO'S
SELECT LIST OF LOCAL NEWSPAPERS.

An advertiser who spends upwards of $5,000 a year, and who invested less than $350 of it in this list, writes: "Your Select Local List paid me better last year THAN ALL THE OTHER ADVERTISING I DID."

IT IS NOT A CO-OPERATIVE LIST.
IT IS NOT A CHEAP LIST.
IT IS AN HONEST LIST.

The catalogue states exactly what the papers are. When the name of a paper is printed in FULL FACE TYPE it is in every instance the BEST.—When printed in CAPITALS it is the ONLY paper in the place. The list gives the population of every town and the circulation of every paper.

The rates charged for advertising are barely one-fifth the publishers' schedule. The price for single States ranges from $2 to $80. The price for one inch one month in the entire list is $625. The regular rates of the papers for the same space and time are $2,980.14. The list includes 958 newspapers of which 187 are issued DAILY and 763 WEEKLY. They are located in 788 different cities and towns, of which 26 are State Capitals, 363 places of over 5,000 population, and 4 County Seats. For copy of List and other information, address, GEO. P. ROWELL & CO., 10 Spruce St., New York.

We receive the Legislative Journal regularly. It is very interesting reading, but like Webster's Dictionary it is a little monotonous.

A leading Republican senator hit the nail on the head when he remarked, "Well, we have got Mahone, and Mahone has got us too."

Senator Conkling proposes to find out before he goes any further whether he or Blaine is to control the political machine in the Empire State.

THE Clinton News is certainly devoted to the welfare of the town when it openly states that there are girls in the village who would not refuse a good offer.

There is likely to be a hot fight in Adrian over the municipal election next Monday. The young men captured the Republican convention, and the same element is likely to control the Democratic nominations.

"The sun do move," earnestly contended the Rev. John Jasper, of the principal colored Baptist church in Richmond. So persistently did the Reverend John stick to his views on this subject that fame and fortune have now followed his efforts as a lecturer. His lecture is very funny and all the more so because he is as earnest as he is ignorant and has not the least idea that he is talking nonsense. He has made so much by lecturing that he has recently been enabled to do a good deed for his church in lifting a mortgage debt of $800, which had caused some inconvenience. Brother Jasper's flock is numerous, but composed of poor people. "The debt do move" is now their grateful acknowledgement of the services of their devoted pastor.

The anti-monopoly league has got fairly organized and has begun to scatter seeds of information among the people. Mr. F. B. Thurber, one of the officers of the League, in a published interview in the New York Herald, says:

"The movement is progressing very rapidly—more rapidly, in fact, than its friends anticipated—and it bids fair to be a great power in the land. Regarding its purposes, it is destined to organize the sentiment which exists in the community favorable to holding corporations to a proper responsibility to the public. The abuses of uncontrolled corporate power have been steadily growing, and with them the feeling that something must be done to protect the public interests. The press and the commercial bodies of the country have been calling attention to this subject and doing a large amount of educational work, but verbal protests are of no use unless backed up by an organization of the voting power of the people; this can only be exercised through organization, and this is what the Anti-Monopoly League proposes to do."

THE OLDEST SURVIVORS.

TECUMSEH, March 28, 1881.

To the Editor of The Detroit Free Press:

DEAR SIR—Looking over your paper of to-day, I find an article from Hugh McCurdy, giving a sketch of the life of Dr. E. Raynale, of Birmingham, who died on Thursday of last week. He there speaks of Dr. Raynale as the last surviving member of the first Constitutional Convention, and of the first State Senate of 1835. He is a little mistaken on that point. Dr. Joseph Howell and myself, who were both members from this county to that convention are still alive, and residents of this county. Joseph H. Patterson who was also a delegate to that convention, from this county, is, or was lately, also still alive, but had moved to St. Joseph County. The last time I met Gov. McClelland in Detroit before his death, we spoke of Dr. Raynale as almost the only surviving member, except ourselves, of the old convention of 1835.

JOHN J. ADAM.

ED. HERALD:

As I wrote the above note to the Free Press in quite a hurry, I forgot to add that Hezekiah G. Wells of Kalamazoo, who was also a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1835, and the youngest member of that body, is still alive and well, and likely to survive for many years yet. He has held many important positions in the service of the United States, and at home in this State; and he is at present, or was for the year ending in February, the President of the Michigan State Pioneer Society, which he considered the most honorable of any he has held.

A SAD VISIT.

Prof. Fairfield started at the beginning of the vacation to visit his sister at Battle Creek, and upon his arrival there he was met by his sister at the depot with the sad news of his mother's death. We clip the following from the Detroit Free Press in relation to the matter:

Mr. E. B. Fairfield, Jr., Superintendent of Schools at Tecumseh, Mich., and his sister, Miss May Fairfield, arrived at Mendota, Ill., Saturday to look after the remains of their mother. The countenances of both bore marked evidence of how deeply they felt the sad bereavement that had so suddenly befallen them, and neither of them could get up nerve enough to view the remains. In an interview with Mr. Fairfield this evening, he stated that the deceased lady was his step-mother and the wife of the Rev. E. B. Fairfield, Chancellor of the State University of Lincoln, Neb., formerly President of Hillsdale College, Michigan for twenty-one years, and well known in most of the States as a lecturer and preacher. The deceased lady and her only daughter, May, left their home at Lincoln a week ago Friday last for Battle Creek, Mich., in order that May should be placed in a Sanitarium there to undergo a course of treatment for erysipelas, from which the young lady has been suffering for some time. They were delayed much on the way through the late snow storm. On reaching Battle Creek Mrs. Fairfield, feeling ill and tired from the effects of the journey, decided that she would not remain there as long as she had intended, and determined to return home. The next day she wrote to that effect to her son at Tecumseh, and left for home. Mr. Fairfield left Tecumseh on Friday to visit his sister at Battle Creek. He arrived there about 2 o'clock this morning, and, to his surprise, found his sister in the waiting room of the depot. She informed him of the sad event, and in half an hour after both started for this city. On the way here they read the particulars of their mother's death in the Tribune, and being ignorant of the cause to which it was attributed, were horrified to find it resulted from suicide. Mr. and Miss Fairfield do not believe it possible that she should have committed the act, and assert that it must have been the result of a stroke of apoplexy, and, in support of that assertion, state that her mother and sister died of apoplexy within the past two years. Mr. Fairfield expects his father here at 3:25, and almost dreads his coming, as, considering his advanced age, it will no doubt be a great shock to him. The remains were placed in a casket this afternoon, and will be conveyed to Lincoln tomorrow.

CARLYLE'S REMINISCENCES.

"By special arrangements" with the American public, the Literary Revolution will issue immediately a beautiful Acme edition, elegant cloth binding, of the "Reminiscences of Thomas Carlyle," price 30 cents, postage 6 cents, and it can be had of the nearly 2,000 booksellers who are agents of the Literary Revolution in all parts of the United States.

Thomas Carlyle, more than any other man of the nineteenth century, taught the American public, and people of good sense throughout the world, to despise pretense and humbug whether exhibited by monarch or menial. Sensible people who want a good book at an honest price will buy it where they find it. There is in this country no law which gives to a foreign author, as it gives to an American, the right of the monopoly of the publication of his book. If publishers choose to pay a foreign author anything, they can do it only as a "donation," because he can give them in return no protection from competition. Readers have the privilege of making such donation, if they choose to do so without paying it to the publishers and trusting to the possibility of their paying it to the author for them. There is no donation included in the price above named. Readers who want to combine a possible donation, and a positive price, can get an edition of this same book from other publishers at from two to eight times the price. Address for catalogue, American Book Exchange, Publishers, New York.

THE good people of Monroe seem to be very much out of sorts lately, on account of some parties purchasing the marsh between the city and Lake. This marsh has always been a resort for sportsmen, with guns and fishing tackle. The owners of the marsh claim that they offered the same to Monroe sportsmen for $100 less than they sold to the strangers, and still these parties complain because it was sold to outside parties.

Lovers of celery will be happy to learn that it is not only a luxury, but a very useful article of diet. It is claimed that celery is a cure for rheumatism and small-pox. It should not be eaten raw, however, but boiled and served with hot milk. The remedy, it is said has been tried by physicians with uniform success in severe cases of rheumatism, gout, and for small-pox it is pronounced a specific.

On Saturday, April 2d, at one o'clock P. M., S. C. Stacy will sell at the premises in this village the Geo. C. Monaghan property. There is a lot 12 rods square, well fenced with good buildings. This will be a rare chance for any one who may wish to buy a good village home at reasonable figures.

STABBING AFFRAY.

A Burglar Enters the Residence of Dr. Hause and effects his Escape by Seriously Stabbing the Doctor.

Last Tuesday morning the citizens of Tecumseh were greatly surprised to hear that Dr. Hause had been seriously injured during the night by being stabbed by a ruffian who had forced an entrance into his house for the purpose of plunder. The report brought forth unusual sympathy, as the Doctor during the last year has been so extremely unfortunate in receiving serious injuries.

It was but little over a year ago that the Doctor was waylaid on his way home at night, knocked senseless, and thrown upon the railroad track after his pockets were rifled, and had the greater part of his right hand taken off by the night passenger train running over it.

He had barely recovered the use of his right arm before, while attending the Knights Templar Conclave in Chicago last August, he was thrown from a passenger train dislocating his shoulder. The perversed fates did not allow his misfortune to stop at this point, after twice plunging him nearly in death's hands. But he was still to experience another frightful ordeal at Hillsdale, falling near the cars and being struck on the head and carried along a number of feet by a moving train. The Doctor recovered after many weeks of skillful treatment. His friends hoped that he had now passed through all of his alloted troubles, but it seems not.

Last Tuesday morning about half past one the Doctor heard some noise in the rear part of the house as if some one was trying to force an entrance into the house. He sprang out of bed and took a revolver that had been loaded for some months, and went to the back part of the house. He passed through the sitting room where the coal stove was into the kitchen, leaving the door open so that the glow of the stove made some light. From the kitchen he passed down two steps into the wood shed. He then, hearing a noise in the kitchen, turned around and saw the form of a man standing above him in the kitchen door. He covered the man with his revolver and ordered him to surrender, but the man did not seem to heed his words, and the Doctor immediately pulled the trigger of the revolver. But the revolver proved false to him and only snapped in the burglar's face. Hereupon the thief, taking advantage of the position, sprang toward the Doctor, grasping his left hand in which he held the revolver and thrust a long dirk knife into the abdomen of the Doctor just below the breast. The Doctor then seized the villian and threw him into the corner of the wood shed and then fired another shot at him. This time the revolver went off and sent a ball into the body of the desperado, who wrenched himself from the Doctor, slipping around back of him and again plunged the knife to the hilt into his back a few inches above his hip. The Doctor dropped to the floor, while the villain effected his escape, and as he was disappearing the Doctor fired two shots at him, the last one undoubtedly striking him in the hand as he dropped the knife which he held in it. The Doctor then yelled for Mrs. Hause who was sleeping unconscious of all that had transpired. She awakened and run out and found the Doctor in the middle of the room lying in a pool of his own blood. Mrs. Hause says that the Doctors hair was all standing upright from his head, and his eyes bulged out and his countenance as white as a sheet presenting altogether a frightful appearance. Mrs Hause called Eva who quickly responded and as she came into the room the Doctor said, "I shot the devil but he stabbed me." She then run out upon the porch and called loudly for help awakening several persons who answered the call.

Deputy Sheriff Merritt was soon on hand and together with others aroused a sufficient number of persons to guard all the roads leading out of the town and both ends of the railroad. The night was dark and a search for the man was futile, the citizens remaining out until daylight.

The Doctor in the meantime was placed in bed and Dr. Catlin called to care for him.

An examination of the gashes reveals nothing that is liable to prove fatal, the knife entering and missing the spinal column and the kidney. The cords and nerves of the right leg were severed, so that when a reporter called on Wednesday morning the right leg was partially paralyzed. His condition is steadily improving but it is impossible to tell at this time the extent of the injuries, which all hope are not very serious.

The Doctor that day had sold a piece of land and the burglar probably hearing of it thought he might procure some of the money. He effected an entrance by poking a long stick through a window in the woodshed and displacing with the stick the catch upon the door lock, thus giving him free entrance to the house. But he was foiled in his attempt by the Doctor's pluck. The burglar was a man as tall as the Doctor, and if the Doctor's right hand had not been crippled he would probably have suffered less and kept the ruffian prisoner.

It is possible that the criminal escaped by means of a horse and buggy as shortly afterward people living on Union street heard a horse and buggy going up towards the Cemetery at a furious rate of speed. Sheriff Bidwell was on hand early in the morning and remained during the forenoon, in the meantime searching several houses in the town where he suspected the man might be secreted. Deputy Merritt proceeded to Clinton and arrested two young fellows who had been seen in Tecumseh the day before, but they were afterwards released, the officers being convinced that they were not the guilty party. No efforts of the officers brought about any good results and probably the villain will escape the avenging hand of the law, the same as the parties who maliciously assaulted the Doctor a year ago last fall. To compensate for the Doctor's extraordinary visitation of calamities, it seems, he was naturally gifted with a super human constitution, which has carried him through more than an ordinary man could endure.

A BUSINESS CHANCE.

Does Tecumseh want a new woolen mill? Not a small carding mill, but a large woolen factory suited to turn out the finest cloth and which will give employment to 100 operatives. Such a mill would cost with building, grounds, machinery and a working reserve capital all complete about $100,000, and the men who invested in it would get a good yearly dividend on their capital.

An opportunity of this kind is now at hand if the men of means in this community will take hold of the matter. Mr. G. W. Lewis, who for the past ten years has been Superintendent of the Clinton Woolen Factory and who is well posted in all the details of that business stands ready to invest $10,000 to start such an enterprise here, and give his time and knowledge in getting it under way. He thinks Tecumseh is a good locality for a first-class woolen mill, as we have good deal of unused water power. At least he feels so confident of the ultimate success of such an enterprise here that he is willing to head a stock subscription paper with $10,000. Who will take hold of this matter and push it through?

JOHN R. JAYNES, manager of Silvers' branch clothing house in Manchester, left for parts unknown Tuesday night of last week. In settling the year's accounts it was found he had done business to the amount of $30,000, on which there was no profit. Mr. Silvers expected something wrong from Jaynes' extravagant manner of living. After consultation with his employer he owned up that he had overdrawn his account to the extent of $1,100, but on examination it was found that he had overdrawn $1,500. He was given time in which to secure the debt, but could not do so, and fled, probably to Canada, where he came from. A warrant has been issued and officers are on the look out for him. He had supported his father and helped his brother pay off a mortgage on his father's place. Great surprise is felt at his action by all who knew him.

A PAPER by R. W. Emerson, on his personal impressions of Thomas Carlyle, made up from his unpublished letters written at the time of his first visit to England, will appear in Scribner for May. The publication is made by special arrangement with Mr. Emerson and the Massachusetts Historical Society, before which the paper was read, and in the minutes of which it is to be printed after its appearance in Scribner.

A GENTLEMAN from Manchester went to sleep in the depot Tuesday night waiting for the train. During his heavy slumbers the train came and went. Jim Glasgow found him afterwards, wakened him and told him that the train had gone. The poor fellow's longing for home was so great that he started on foot, a distance of twelve miles, 11 o'clock at night, and a blinding snow storm raging.

LOWE.—In Ridgeway, March 23d, 1881, of chronic inflammation, Amy, daughter of Mary L. and Justus Lowe, aged 23 years.

Heaven has opened wide its portal,
They we loved have entered in;
Changed from mortal to immortal,
Freed from sorrow, pain and sin.

In the realms of endless glory,
Mingled with the seraphs bright,
Now they tell redemption's story,
Clothed in robes of spotless white.

Their time on earth was short indeed,
But now they reign above,
From all earth's ills forever freed,
They sing their Savior's love.

But can we wish them back again,
To such a world as this,
Who far from guilt, and grief, and pain,
Now lives in realms of bliss?

Sickness and pain were oft their lot,
While in this vale of tears;
Nor should we mourn who linger here,
That they in Heaven appear.

Cease, cease to weep, ye friends bereft,
Behold in bliss the saints ye love,
Bright Angels bore, when earth they left,
Their spirits to the realms above.

A man being asked by a seedy poet whether he had written anything he thought would live, replied: "Before you trouble yourself on that score I advise you to write something that will let you live."

Angelo, to Phœbe—yes, at thy command, I'd pick the stars from the firmament—I'd pluck the sun, that oriental gold of day that traverses the blue arch of heaven in such majestic splendor—I'd tear him from the sky and—" "Don't Henry; it would be so very dark!"

"Ma, does Pa kiss you because he loves you so?" inquired a little boy of his mother. "To be sure my son; but why do you ask that question?" "Well, I guess he loves the kitchen girl, too; for I seen him kiss her more'n forty times last Sunday, when you were to church."

A Dutchman was relating his marvelous escape from drowning, when thirteen of his companions were lost by the upsetting of a boat, and he alone was saved. "And how did you escape their fate?" asked one of his hearers. I did not go in to pose!" was the Dutchman's placid answer.

An editor got shaved in a barber shop lately, and offered the darkey a dime, which was refused, because, said he, "I understand you are an editor!" "Well, what of that?" "We never charge editors nuffin!" "But such liberality will ruin you." "Oh, nebber mind, we make it up off the Gemmen!"

A lady, wishing the services of a dyer, was referred to an excellent workman who was something of a wag in his line. The lady called and asked: "Are you the dyeing man?" "No, madam, I'm a living man—but I do dye for you!" quickly replied the man of many colors, putting the emphasis where it was needed.

"Fanny, don't you think that Mr. Bolt is a handsome man? "Oh! no—I can't endure his looks. He is homely enough." "Well he's fortunate, at all events, for an old aunt has just died and left him fifty thousand dollars." "Indeed! is it true! Well, now, since I come to recollect, there is a certain noble air about him, and he has a fine eye—that can't be denied."

A young woman who had never learned the gentle art of cookery, being desirous of impressing her husband with her knowledge and diligence, manages to have the kitchen door ajar on the day after their return from the bridal trip, and just as her lord comes in from the office, exclaims loudly: "Hurry up, Eliza, do! Haven't you washed that lettuce yet?" "Here, give it to me; where's the soap."

The tremendous force of the ocean waves has been illustrated at Wick, on the extreme Northern coast of Scotland, where a breakwater has been building for some years past. It may give an idea of what is meant by wave-power. It was found that stones of ten ton weight were as pebbles to the waves which have been measured to be thirty-two feet from crest to the bottom of the trough. The outer end of the break-water, where the storms beat most violently was built of three courses of one-hundred-ton stones laid on the rubble foundations; next above these were three courses of large flat stones, and upon these a mass of concrete built on the spot, of cement and rubble. The end of the break-water was thought to be as immovable as the natural rock, yet the resident engineer saw it yield to the force of the waves and swing around into the less-troubled water inside the pier. It gave away not in fragments, but in one mass, as if it was a monolith. The displaced mass is estimated to weigh about 1,850 tons.

THE GREATEST MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.

Kellogg's Columbian Oil is a powerful remedy, which can be taken internally as well as externally by the tenderest infant. It cures almost instantly, is pleasant, acting directly upon the nervous system, causing sudden buoyancy of the mind. In short the wonderful effects of this most wonderful remedy cannot be explained in written language. A single dose inhaled and taken according to directions will convince any one that it is all that is claimed for it. Warranted to cure the following diseases: Rheumatism or "Kidney Disease" in any form, Headache, Toothache, Neuralgia, Sprains, Bruises, Flesh Wounds, Burns or Burns, Corns, Spinal Affection, Colic, Cramping Pains, Cholera Morbus, Flux, Diarrhœa, Coughs, Colds, Bronchial affection, Catarrh, and all aches and pains, external and internal. Full directions with each bottle. For sale by C. A. Wright & Co., Tecumseh.

The Force of Habit.

The force of habit is very strong in most men, and as an illustration, we will mention that a conductor on the Housatonic road has fallen into the custom of winding his watch at a certain place near North Bridgeport, and so firmly has the habit become fixed that no matter what he may be doing when his train approaches that point, he will, without thinking, take out his watch and wind it. He may be absorbed in a conversation at the time, but the operation is performed half mechanically just the same. He says he varies scarcely ten rods from evening to evening. The same curious devotion to custom is noticed sometimes among locomotive engineers. One of the old engineers on the same road will sound his whistle at the necessary points apparently without thinking of the duty. In the midst of a conversation his hand will reach mechanically for the whistle rod, and it will be found that he scarcely ever varies from the same place.

A Wonderful Discovery.

For the speedy cure of Consumption and all diseases that lead to it, such as stubborn Coughs, neglected Colds, Bronchitis, Hay Fever, Asthma, pain in the side and chest, dry hacking cough, tickling in the throat, Hoarseness, Sore Throat, and all chronic or lingering diseases of the throat and lungs, Dr. King's New Discovery has no equal and has established for itself a world-wide reputation. Many leading physicians recommend and use it in their practice. The formula from which it is prepared is highly recommended by all medical journals. The clergy and the press have complimented it in the most glowing terms. Go to your druggist and get a trial bottle free of cost, or regular size for $1.00. For sale by M. Wright & Son, Tecumseh, Mich.

There is on exhibition in London a Japanese Nobleman's room, given by the governor of Kioto to Dr. Dresser, who was a royal guest in Japan. It is about twelve feet long by rather less in width, and about nine feet in height. The roof consists of panneis of cedar. All the wood in the room has a polished surface. The walls are formed of slides opening into the adjoining room, and are edged with black lacquered strips of wood, the slides being of paper decorated with figures of birds. At the end of the room is a recess, the upper part composed of wood cut so as to represent a flight of storks. Close to this is a larger recess, which, in accordance with the fashion of the country in high life, is reserved for the accommodation of the Mikado, should he ever visit the house. There is an opening at the side for the introduction of refreshments.

Theory of Absorption.

The theory of cure by Absorption is certainly growing in favor. The Lion Malaria and Liver Pad and Body and Foot Plasters absorbs the poison from the system, and will positively cure the worst case of Malarial, Intermittent and Remittent Fever. The whole remedy for one dollar. For sale by Druggists.

A FARMER'S WALK.—It may interest a good many readers to know just how far a poor farmer has to walk during the cropping season. I have gone to the trouble to find out how far a man must walk to put in and tend forty acres of corn. To plow the ground with a sixteen-inch three-horse plow, he travels 250 miles; to harrow the ground thoroughly before planting, he will have to travel 100 miles; to plant the same, he travels 50 miles; to cultivate it three times, he will have to travel 300 miles—making a total of 700 miles, besides the gathering. After this is all done, he has harvesting, etc., to do.

Hens should never be allowed to disturb the setters by laying in their nests. Broken eggs and a bad hatch will result. It was cut into five logs and measured 5,682 feet, 3,500 feet of which will cut into uppers. This, we believe, is the biggest tree story of the season.—Bay City News.

The body of an old woman, evidently drowned, was found the other day in a ditch in Romulus, Wayne county, on the farm of J. Templin. It proved to be that of Mr. Templin's sister-in-law, who left her home in Ecorse February 1, and had not been seen since. She was over 70 years old and partly insane.

Mrs. Upright, the woman shot through the head by her husband at Greenville is still alive, though her recovery is pronounced impossible. Her statement that he compelled her to lead a life of shame and shot her because she did not give him $25 on demand, is generally believed by the Greenville people, and has stirred up great indignation against Upright, who is in jail awaiting the result of her injuries. Mrs. Upright says she ran away from home when only 14 years old to marry Upright, and has supported him ever since.

The newly organized county of Oscoda has not a store, shop or office within its limits. There is only one postoffice, and that in the extreme southern edge of the county. THE Cheboygan Tribune says the only thing that prevents the commencement of grading on that end of the Jackson, Lansing & Saginaw railroad is the great depth of snow. The snow has settled considerably within the past two weeks, and should the weather continue warm it will not be many days before a large force will be actively at work.

Mr. J. F. Wilcox, of Montrose, while hunting in the woods of Maple Grove township, on Tuesday last, came in sight of a large wild cat which he was fortunate enough to kill. The animal was a handsome specimen of its kind, weighing 27 pounds, and measuring three feet and three inches from the tip of its nose to the root of tail. It had just killed a spike horn deer, and was eating the flesh and sucking the blood of its victim, when shot by Mr. W., clinging to the body after death.—Saginaw Herald.

Owosso Press: On the farm of G. W. Essig, three and a half miles from Owosso, coal has been struck at a depth of 117 feet. When at a depth of ninety-six feet they struck a strata of hard black slate. This strata was twenty feet thick. Passing through this they immediately struck a strata of very hard coal, so dense and hard that it will not soil the hands while handling it. They have as yet gone only about eight or ten inches in the coal, but from the thickness of the slate they judge the coal vein to be an unusually thick one. The vein is found to be four feet nine inches in thickness, three feet nine inches of hard "nut" coal, and one foot of soft. The vein of hard coal is thicker than any part of the Corunna coal mines.

A Baltimore resurrectionist is in trouble, and the people of the monumental city are horrified to find their cemeteries have been desecrated and in a measure depopulated for the benefit of certain medical colleges, those at Ann Arbor among the rest. Among the letters brought to light is one purporting to come from Dr. Herdman of Ann Arbor, in which he says: "I learn through Dr. Rochester, of Buffalo, that you are prepared to furnish material for dissection, and I write to ask how many you may be able to furnish us during the next three or four months, what price you may want, and how you have been in the habit of shipping. We consume over 100 in the course of a winter, and if you desire, and we can make satisfactory terms, we can give you large orders."

Detroit Evening News: For the purpose of affording the students in the dental school at Ann Arbor practice in tooth carpentery, students from other departments of the university are allowed to come there and have their teeth plugged for the simple cost of the materials. The other day a medical student took over a lame tooth for treatment, but unluckily fell into the hands of a personal enemy who treated him unmercifully, sawing, boring, rasping and battering the miserable molar in a manner unprecedented in dental torture. A few days afterward this same dent went over to the medical department for a little free vaccination, and, as fate would have it, fell into the hands of the same medic, whose head was still bandaged from his much-stuffed tooth. Revenge is sweet, and they do say that dent's arm was vaccinated with a variety and thoroughness that will prevent its operating on another tooth for the next three months.

A young girl named Martha Yeomans, residing in Ann Arbor, with her widowed mother and sister, attempted to commit suicide on Sunday afternoon by taking a large dose of morphine. The morphine was kept in the house and the girl took twenty grains shortly after 3 o'clock in the afternoon. She is a student in the High School and in good health, and no cause is given by her friends for the attempt upon her own life. Some little time after taking the morphine, and when it had begun to take effect, she went to her mother and told her what she had done. Prof. Langley, who resides near by, and Dr. Herdman were immediately summoned, and by the use of an electric battery and other means she was kept alive during the night. Her life was several times despaired of, and it was only by the prompt and constant efforts of her medical attendants that it was saved. On Monday her condition was very [illegible] thought that she was out of [illegible]

MONEY—FARMS—ABSTRACTS.

If you want to hire money at very low rates.

If you have money to loan.

If you want to buy a farm or a home.

If you want to sell your real estate.

If you want a deed or mortgage correctly made.

If you want a complete abstract of title. Call on A. L. Bliss.

Among other Farms for sale I have one of 160 acres and one of 80 acres, in Palmyra both being well tiled and fenced, and first class in every respect, with four market towns within easy driving distance, in good neighborhood. Also 12½ acre farm 1½ miles west of river road from Deerfield. Also 160 acre farm and 90 acre farm, and 20 acre farm in Riga, any of which are decided bargains, and good reasons given for naming low prices.

Every purchaser of Lands should insist on being furnished an abstract of title, for our experience of more than 20 years shows that not more than one title in ten is perfect of record, and every week purchases agreed upon are abandoned owing to imperfections of title. I have a good carriage or farm horse, 1300 lbs. in weight for sale at a bargain.

A few thousand dollars now on hand to loan at six per cent, and on long time if desired.

Scientific travelers are peculiarly favored by the government of Japan, and are not only permitted to explore the country, but are encouraged to do so. The conduct of the authorities toward them is in marked contrast to the restrictions enforced upon missionaries and merchants, who are strictly compelled to observe treaty stipulations in regard to routes of travel.

Chicago Ahead.

All the world now looks up to Chicago as the great western metropolis of America, being far ahead of all competing cities; but none the less so, in its line, is Electric Bitters. From their real intrinsic value they have advanced to the front, and are now far ahead of all other remedies, positively curing where everything else fails. To try them is to be convinced. CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

MARCH 21.—The Vice President laid before the Senate a communication from the Governor of Wisconsin, transmitting the joint resolution of the Legislature of that State relative to the death of Hon. Matt H. Carpenter. The resolution was read and laid on the table, and the Senate went into executive session.

When the doors were reopened the Senate adjourned.

MARCH 22.—Mr. Voorhees offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the hostile attitude assumed by the national banks toward refunding the national debt at low rates, and the recent attempt to dictate the legislation of Congress on the subject, are contrary to the best interests of the people, and well calculated to excite alarm for the future.

Mr. Morrill [illegible] Monday next.

Mr. Voorhees [illegible] the resolution, and to submit a few remarks on the subject.

Mr. Morrill [illegible] a point of order that the resolution was not in order, inasmuch as it was a legislative proposition.

Mr. Ferry concurred that the [illegible] a matter of legislation, and [illegible] sion.

Mr. Voorhees said he had no [illegible] ning in conflict with any question [illegible] in offering his proposition. He had [illegible] formed the precedents were that even executive acts might be passed here at this session, and await the action of the House next session. He understood precedents stood in that way. He simply desired to submit a few remarks which would be in the interest of the people on this question. It might be desired on the other side to rule the resolution out on a point of order. He did not know about that.

Mr. Conkling suggested that the Senator withhold the offer of his resolution until to-morrow, so as to enable the Senators to look at the precedents and law on this question. The Senator would lose nothing by doing so. Such a resolution must be addressed to the legislative and functions of the Senate. The Senator did not admit, nor did he (Conkling) think, that in rising to speak to the Senate, the Senators was speaking to somebody else. Remarks in the senate were addressed to the Senate. Therefore, if he were to say he wished to address the Senate on a subject which could not in any way be considered by the Senate, it would be an open admission that he was using his place in the Senate, as he would the hustings, to speak to the people.

Mr. Voorhees finally acceded to the suggestion made by Mr. Conkling, and withdrew his resolution.

The Senate then went into executive session. When the doors were reopened the Senate adjourned.

MARCH 23.—Mr. Voorhees again submitted the resolution he yesterday offered and subsequently withdrew, declaring that the hostile attitude by the national banks in the refunding of the national debt at a lower rate of interest, and their recent attempt to dictate the legislation of Congress are contrary to the best interests of the people, and calculated to excite their alarm for the future.

Mr. Morrill raised a point of order. The resolution was not in order, inasmuch as it was a legislative proposition.

Mr. Sherman thought it would be unjust to the chair to require him to decide the point until all precedents on the question has been cited. His recollection was that propositions like this had been debated in every executive session ever called, and he hoped Mr. Voorhees would be permitted to speak to the point of order.

Mr. Voorhees argued that the proposition was clearly in order, and cited from precedents to show that at the special executive session of the Senate any business could be transacted which did not need the cooperation of the House of Representatives. He quoted from the opinions of Chase, Seward, and Douglas, to the effect that the Senate in special session might do any act which it was competent for it to do alone, without co-operation of the House, and stated that the theory was embodied by Mr. Seward in a resolution and unanimously adopted. The proposition submitted needed the concurrence by the House. It was to give information upon a great overshadowing question. It was to give the departments of the government the opinion which the Senate entertained on the great public matter, and it might be very important to certain branches of the government that this expression of opinion should be given.

Mr. Morrill withdrew his point of order against the resolution, which was laid over for a day under the rules.

Mr. Dawes offered a resolution for the election of Senate officers, naming the certain officers selected by the Republican caucus yesterday, laid over.

After an executive session the Senate adjourned.

MARCH 24.—In the United States Senate Mr. Dawes called up his resolution to proceed to the election of officers. David Davis argued that the majority which chose the committees is fairly entitled to elect the officers, and that such result should be delayed by his vote. Don Cameron says the Republican side would sit the question out. Mr. Brown, of Georgia, stated his intention to sit until December before consenting to change of officers—a declaration which Mr. Hoar pronounced treasonable. An all-night session was clearly outlined, when a Republican Senator slipped out for lunch and the Democrats carried an adjournment.

MARCH 25.—Mr. Ingalls offered a resolution calling on the Secretary of War for a list of all appointments, other than those in the army, made in his department from the 1st of December, 1879, to March 4, 1881; under what provisions of the law said appointments have been made; what changes, promotions, details, and transfers have been made within such period, and the reasons for such transfers; what revocations of appointments and promotions have been made; what dismissals have been made and for what causes; what employes have been cut out of the lapsed fund; what clerks have been paid by the statute, and whether or not any commission has been convened to consider appointments in said department. Laid on the table for future action.

Mr. Dawes called up his resolution for the election of Senate officers, the pending motion being to postpone its consideration until the first Monday in December.

A protracted debate ensued, participated in by Messrs. Johnston, Logan, Dawes, Beck and others.

Mr. Pendleton moved for an executive session which was defeated—yeas, 29; nays, 29.

Debate continued until 5:30 when another motion for an executive session was lost.

After further debate roll-calls followed on alternate motions made on the Democratic side to adjourn and go into executive session. These motions were all defeated, generally by a tie vote, but at 6 o'clock so many Senators were paired that the Senate was left without a quorum, and the roll was called.

Mr. Bayard suggested that, as it was not desirable the struggle should degenerate into one of physical endurance, it was better to adjourn.

Mr. Dawes assented, and the Senate adjourned till to-morrow.

MARCH 26.—Immediately after reading the journal, Mr. Dawes demanded the regular order, being the resolution for the election of Senate officers.

Mr. Pendleton moved to go into executive session. Rejected—yeas, 29; nays, 29.

Senator Mahone was present and voted with the Republicans.

A motion to lay the motion on the table was lost—yeas, 28; nays, 29.

Mr. Beck referred to the statement made yesterday by Mr. Dawes, that he supported Mr. Riddleberger because he belonged to a party of men who opposed that party which had its heel on the neck of the black man in Virginia, and desired to call that Senator's attention to a scene which had taken place in the Virginia Legislature. Mr. Morse, a colored man who notably could neither read nor write, and who therefore would not be entitled to vote in Massachusetts, had arisen and made a rather rambling speech, in which he advocated the payment of the State debt, and had then yielded to Mr. Riddleberger. That gentleman thereupon had offered a resolution to expel Morse, which was rejected. The man who had sought to expel an ignorant but honest colored man was the man who was now championed by the Senator from Massachusetts (Dawes).

Mr. Groome—Does it appear whether Riddleberger proposed to expel him because he was a colored man or because he was in favor of paying the debt?

Mr. Beck—Poor man! I suppose he took a double chance on him. [Laughter.]

The motion to go into executive session having been defeated, Mr. Mahone took the floor to address the Senate. This aroused that body which had been very dull all day, into something like attention. He was unfortunate, he said, in having been absent from the Senate yesterday when some allusions had been made to Riddleberger and himself. He had been in Virginia, and was still too unwell to review the speeches.

Mr. Dawes interrupted, and said that if the gentleman would prefer to speak Monday he would move to adjourn.

The motion was agreed to. Adjourned.

Oscar de Lafayette, a member of the French Senate, died in Paris on Sunday, aged 65 years. Being a grandson of the Marquis who aided the American colonies in achieving their independence, it was the intention of President Grevy to send him to the Yorktown centennial to represent the republic of France.

The burning of the opera house at Nice was caused by an explosion of gas at the back of the stage. The audience were soon left in total darkness, and a wild panic ensued. By midnight thirty-six bodies had been extricated. A lady committed suicide on finding that her husband had been burned to death. WASHINGTON NOTES.

IMMIGRATION.

Immigrants arrived in the United States for eight months ended February, 28, 1881, of whom nearly 80,000 were from Germany, 77,000 from Canada, 30,000 from England Wales, and 30,000 from Ireland.

THE CABINET MEETING.

It is ascertained on trustworthy authority that an extra session of Congress was not included among the topics considered at the cabinet meeting Friday. The fact is generally accepted as conclusive evidence that the President has decided against a special session unless something unforeseen happens. The delay in settling the matter of rest is explained by one of his advisers to the President's usual custom of delaying to every argument that can possibly be advanced against any contemplated action on any important matter.

MACHINERY EXHIBITION.

The [illegible] of the United States at Hamburg, informs the department of State that an industrial exhibition of power and work machinery will take place at Altona from Aug. 15 to Oct. 17. The Hamburg-American Steamship Company offers to take back to New York and American objects of exhibition free, provided the vessels are sent to the exhibition by the company's steamers.

THE NEW YORK COLLECTORSHIP.

Senator Conkling gives no sign of what he will do about the nomination of State Senator Robertson to be collector of the port of New York. The unanimous vote of the New York senate approving the appointment of Robertson is a very important factor in the matter, as the question of Conkling's reelection comes up next Winter. Some of Conkling's friends say that he will accept the nomination favorably, drawing as much of the sting out as he can in that way.

EXPORTS.

The total values of exports of domestic breadstuffs during the eight months ended February, 1881, were $182,428,826; eight months ended February, 1880, $162,855,659.

The total values of exports of domestic provisions, tallow, and dairy products for the two months ended Feb. 18, 1881, were $20,956,933; same period of 1880, [illegible] values of exports of provisions and tallow for the four months ended Feb. 18, 1881, $33,168,399; four months ended Feb. 18, 1880, $34,196,425; total values of dairy products for the ten months ended Feb. 18, 1881, $22,219,097; ten months ended Feb. 18, 1880, $15,320,007.

SHORT OF FUNDS.

Secretary of the Treasury Windom issued a circular to-day, saying: "Congress having failed sufficiently to provide for the requirements of the public service under the appropriation for fuel, light and water, and miscellaneous items for public buildings for the fiscal year, custodians of public buildings under the treasury department are notified that the amount of appropriation available is insufficient to provide for labor and for supplies not embraced in existing contracts beyond the 31st inst. Therefore custodians will notify all persons employed in buildings, and all persons of corporations furnishing gas, water, or other supplies paid from aforesaid appropriation, that department will have no means available for payment of such services or supplies beyond the date above specified."

SUPREME COURT DECISION.

A decision was rendered by the United States Supreme court, to-day, in the case of Grinnel et al. against the Chicago Rock Island and Pacific Railway company, upon appeal from the Supreme court of Iowa. The question in controversy is whether the railway company, under the act of Congress, acquired a valid title to the lands within the old fifteen-mile limits of the Mississippi and Missouri Railroad company, which were certified to the State under that grant by the department of the interior for the benefit of that company, but which were left outside of the new twenty-mile limit by a change of the location of the old line made by the present company under the act of Congress amendatory of the previous act. The judgment of the Supreme court of Iowa sustaining the railroad company's title of the lands in controversy is affirmed.

THE SEARCH FOR THE JEANNETTE.

From all indications, the naval board now preparing a plan for the expedition soon to set out for the relief of the Jeannette is one of the most incompetent imaginable. It is not made up of practical men and its members ignore all suggestions of a practical character from men who have had long experience in Arctic circles. Capt. Hooper was first spoken of as the commander of the expedition, and as the one best fitted to command it, through his experience in southern seas, but the naval officers scouted at the idea of an expedition commanded by a revenue marine officer, and so that plan was at once abandoned. The people who have charge of this relief expedition appear to be very jealous of any outside suggestions. It is expected that they will have everything ready to depart for San Francisco by the 1st of June.

APPROPRIATIONS BY THE LAST CONGRESS.

An official tabulated statement of the appropriations made by the third session of the forty-sixth Congress for 1881 2 has just been prepared by Mr. Robert J. Stephens, chief clerk of the House Committee on appropriations. This statement gives a history of each of the fourteen regular appropriation bills from the time it was reported to the House until it became a law. The grand total of the appropriations is $193,241,391. This does not include the deficiencies for the remainder of the present fiscal year, amounting to, $23,561,591, nor miscellaneous appropriations, amounting to about $1,000,000. These bring the aggregate up to $216,802,512. This amount is $4,839,249 less than the estimates. The largest bill is the pension bill, which appropriates—$68,382,306; this includes $18,282,906 deficiency for 1881. The bill as reported appropriated $50,000,000. The deficiency was added on in the Senate. The bill was reported to the House on Dec. 10, 1880, and became a law Feb. 26, 1881. Until 1880 the annual average for pensions has been about $30,000,000. The postoffice bill, which is next in size to the pension bill, appropriates $40,957,432. This is $1,419,500 less than the estimates. It was reported to the House on Jan. 8 and became a law on March 1. The army bill, which became a law Feb. 21, appropriates $26,687,800, which is $2,365,646 less than the estimates. The Sundry Civil bill, which was reported Feb. 16 and became a law on the last day of the session, appropriates $22,002,194, nearly $1,500,000 less than the estimates. The appropriation for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the government amount to $15,677,679—$560,000 less than the estimates. This bill was reported to the House on Feb. 2, and finally passed Congress on March 3, 1881. The appropriations for the navy amount to $14,566,657, over 400,000 less than the estimates. Rivers and harbors, $11,546,800, about $4,000,000 more than the estimates. General deficiency, $5,289,046, over $700,000 less than the estimates. Indians, $4,855,860, nearly $300,000 less than the estimates; consular and diplomatic service, $1,192,435, over $60,000 less than the estimates; District of Columbia, $1,689,008—$145,000 more than the estimates; fortifications, $5,750,000, over $800,000 less than the estimates; agricultural department, $635,500, over $500,000 less than the estimates, and military academy, $522,435—$72,000 less than the estimates.

THE RIVER AND HARBOR BILL

includes a large appropriation for the Mississippi river. The agricultural bill was reported for the second time as a separate bill. Heretofore it has been included in the legislative, executive, and judicial bill. The deficiency contains $835,26, for internal revenue, $450,000 judgments of court of claims, and $400,000 for public printing. In the same bill $224,157 is appropriated for Miami Indians. The miscellaneous estimates, amounting to $2,000,000, include war claims and all other estimates, public and private. These were cut down one-half.

THE BEST REMEDY FOR

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs,

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.

In diseases of the pulmonary organs a safe and reliable remedy is invaluable. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy, and no other so eminently merits the confidence of the public. It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, of such power as to insure the greatest possible efficiency and uniformity of results. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt relief and rapid cures, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily. In ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergyman's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

Low prices are inducements to try some of the many mixtures, or syrups, made of cheap and ineffective ingredients, now offered which, as they contain no curative qualities, can afford only temporary relief, and are sure to deceive and disappoint the patient. Diseases of the throat and lungs demand active and effective treatment; and it is dangerous experimenting with unknown and cheap medicines, from the great liability that these diseases may, while so trifled with, become deeply seated or incurable. Use AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and you may confidently expect the best results. It is a standard medical preparation, of known and acknowledged curative power, and is as cheap as its careful preparation and fine ingredients will allow. Eminent physicians, knowing its composition, prescribe it in their practice. The test of half a century has proven its absolute certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

The executive committee of the Sheep Breeders' Association will hold a meeting next Saturday evening to make arrangements for their annual shearing festival which will be held at the Centre April 29th.

Nine from this township were in attendance at the Teachers' Institute held at Hudson last week. They report a pleasant and profitable time.—Teachers should make a special preparation for the work.

Geo. Fuller and Frank Pitcher have rented the store at Wolf Creek and will immediately go into the grocery business at that place.

The following teachers have been engaged for the summer schools:—Dist. No. 1, Alma Smith; No. 2, Clara A. Waldron; No. 3, Dell Timpson; No. 4, Jennie Reynolds; No. 5, Josie M. Butrick; No. 6, Fannie M. Webster; No. 7, Sadie Gamble; No. 8, Hattie Joseph; No. 9, Etta Wilson; No. 10, Frances Jackson.

Election passed off very quietly last Monday, 307 votes being polled.—The Democrats and Nationals having separate tickets. The Republicans elected their entire ticket with an average majority of 33. Heretofore the Democrats and Nationals have united their strength and succeeded in defeating the Republicans. There were four Prohibition state tickets and fifty-eight Democratic voted.

RIDGEWAY.

Fifty-three prohibitionists in Ridgeway this spring.

Township ticket Democratic, except clerk and one constable.

Chet Brownson fell off the straw stack. "What a fall was there my countrymen," 240 lbs. averdupois.

It is reported that Joe Exelby has the timber out for a hotel at Britton station.

There is a project on foot for a sheep shearing exhibition in this township.

The novelty shop has again turned its attention to screen doors. This is so far, the only indication of warm weather to be found here.

There will be a lecture at the church to-morrow, Friday, evening, by the Rev. Mr. Pardington of Tecumseh.—The occasion will be sweetened with warm sugar, &c.

E. W. Rappleye and Rufus Raymond have exchanged places of residence. Rufus becomes a Ridgewayite and "Rast" goes to Tecumseh township.

Wm. Barrett, Sen., 'takes the cake,' for big trees. He recently cut and had sawed at West & Gahan's mill, a white wood tree which made six thousand, nine hundred and twenty-eight feet of lumber. The tree cut 5 twelve and 1 ten feet logs, without knot or limb.

Election day passed without a horse race, dog fight, man fight, or other exciting incident. The wire pullers got down to hard work. The vote polled was not a full one. The two or three old line prohibitionists feel highly elated over the result on State ticket. The Republican legislature certainly got a 'black eye' in Ridgeway.

The funeral of the late Stephen V. Miller took place at the M. E. church on Tuesday, the 5th inst. Mr. Miller was 77 years of age, and one of the pioneers of Lenawee county.

RAISIN.

In this township Horace Holdredge, democrat, was elected Supervisor by 17 majority. The balance of the republican ticket was elected by the following majorities:

Clerk—Woolston Comfort, 17.
Treasurer—Orlando Westgate, 15.

ADDISON.

Jack Frost hasn't closed up his business for the season yet in these parts.

The religious revival meetings at the M. E. church were closed Thursday of last week. Numerous conversions are among the results of the effort.

A lantern hung over a pit in the center of Main street has done the work of street illumination here of late.

The village schools opened for the Spring term Monday of this week with Mr. Fuller and Miss Lombard as teachers.

Subscriber J. D. Sanders received a severe cut on the foot, by an ax, while splitting wood some days since and is now laid up for repairs.

Miss Ada A. Hodges and mother, both old residents of this place, but late of Athens, Ohio, will return in a few days with a view to making Addison their home henceforth.

All efforts to identify the Roberts' store burglars have proved futile as yet.

BROOKLYN.

The visit of Rev. Pardington and Dr. House rekindled the temperance and alliance discussion. I believe temperance is defined a reasonable use of what people require, and while some insist that liquors may be drank moderately at home, but public dram-drinking is disgraceful, others think that the only rational use one can make of what is almost sure to injure is to let it alone.

An alliance of the last named party has already been formed and all are invited to All Saints' church next Tuesday evening to make further arrangements.

It is expected that what one party fails to accomplish the other can have a chance to undertake, and some good result. Both wings will be Christian associations if I understand right. I will leave them both to fate till next week.

At present the men are as nervous about officers to be as a Cambridge greenback lecturer was when he visited a Dover settlement once on a time. A shimmer of moonlight was an alarming flash, and the twitter of a bird sounded louder than thunder, all because he did not know what might happen.

Yet pleasant things happen sometimes. A memorial evergreen of friendship was brought me the other day by that veteran pioneer the Hon. F. A. Dewey. It is christened "A Spray of Northern Pine," and is a birth-day poem, dedicated to him by his son Frank. It is a book no larger than its namesake, and the story of a long life is told in a style befitting the graceful title. I thank both the giver and the one who gathered the spray, and have no doubt the next will be flung broadcast among his friends.

Among the new advertisements in this issue will be found one from RATHBONE, SARD & CO., manufacturers of the celebrated "Acorn Stoves and Ranges." The distinct lead which "Acorn" stoves have taken in all the markets of the world, is being emphasized each year by the fact that no live stove merchant who carefully studies his best interests considers his stock complete unless it embraces some numbers of these renowned goods. Every stove is fully warranted; and a special feature of the best grades of "Acorns" is their patent Asbestos lined oven doors for retaining the heat in the oven and economizing in fuel. The "Acorn Oil Stove," embracing many new features, has been added to the Acorn line for the season of 1881. For a fuller description of "Acorn" stoves, send for a sample copy of The Acorn Times, published by Rathbone, Sard & Co., Detroit, Mich. See their advertisement in another column.

It tells them what to buy and how to get it; what styles have gone out of fashion, and what are coming into vogue; and its copious descriptions and price lists will enable its readers to practice a wise economy, by foreseeing and providing for, every item of the season's necessities. The Fashion Quarterly is published by Ehrich Brothers, Eighth Avenue, New York, at 50 cents a year, or 15 cents a copy.

THE WAY OF THE WORLD.

MAN.

If he wears a good coat,
Lift him up, lift him up;
Though he be a blout
Lift him up.
If he has not common sense,
And can boast a few pence,
Lift him up.

Though his face shows no shame,
Lift him up, lift him up;
Though crime is in his name,
Lift him up.
Though their disgrace be his spurn,
Let your daughters him court—
Lift him up.

WOMAN.

If a woman's open eye,
Kick her down, kick her down;
If ruin fortune he hope,
Kick her down.
If with the tears fall like rain,
Kick her down.
If a maid break her heart,
Kick her down, kick her down;
Legislate the state—
Kick her down;
And if in low condition
Go on in prostitution,
Kick her down.

MORTALITY.

"See! the roses die!
Do their leaves fall together
Thrown down and scattered by the sky
Of angry weather?
No, they are not ruined by strife
Overwrought their lovely power;
The storm that tramples on the vale
Exhausts above the flower.

No violence makes them grieve.
No wrath hath done them wrong;
When with sad secrecy they leave
The branch to which they clung.
They yield them, one by one,
To the light breeze and shower,
To the soft dew, cool shade, bright sun,
Time and the hour.

Women as Carpenters.

It is no doubt a refreshing sight to the male sex to see a woman assert herself as a carpenter.

If anything will establish the superiority of man over woman, an exhibition of her skill in "using tools" will do it.

There are various little jobs around a house which would come within a carpenter's province, and no head of a family likes to do them. He is never willing to take hold. And his wife wants them done right up. The door sags, or a window sticks, or the screws work out of the curtain fixtures, or the castors break on the dinning-room table, or the cellar stairs get broken, or somebody tips back in a rocking-chair and splits the concern into two chairs, or some other breakage or damage occurs.

The husband and father is busy reading about the last murder, or smoking a cigar not paid for, and he cannot attend to it. And the woman gets her indignation up, and says: "Well, she can do it herself." And generally adds something to the effect that men are not worth their salt, and she wishes she'd never been fool enough to tie herself to one. So there.

Then she prepares to do the job herself.

It is a curtain fixture to be put up this time. Curtain fixtures, you have probably noticed, never come the right length for any window that was ever constructed.

She gets a chair, and arms herself with a screwdriver, and puts six screws in her mouth, and climbs on the chair with the fixtures in her hand, and finds she can't reach the top of the window by three or four inches.

She gets down, and in doing so her dress gets entangled in the chair back and tears off a little fringe and a little knife pleating, and upsets a pot of geranium on the window sill, and in attempting to save that she strikes her head against a bracket by the side of the window which holds a pot of oxalis, and down comes the oxalis aforesaid, and the pot breaks, and the earth is spilled all over the carpet, and the plant is demoralized for life.

Of course she opens her mouth to scream, and the screws fly out, and in jumping after them she drops the rest of the things and has to begin anew. This she does when she has picked up the pot and plant, and swept away the dirt, and put some camphor on her head where it struck the bracket.

If the husband and father should offer to do the job for her now she would scorn his proposal. Her blood was up, and she will do it herself or perish in the attempt.

She gathers together her implements again, and puts an ottoman in the chair, and climbs into another chair, and from that gets on the ottoman, and stands full a minute swaying backward and forward trying to get her balance just right, for a woman standing upon anything more than two feet from the ground is always dizzy-headed and expects to fall the next minute.

She tries the screw driver on the screws, but there never was any wood so hard as that window-casing. The screws turn round lively, but they do not take hold. She has got to have a gimlet to start them. So she has got to get down again. The ottoman comes with her, want for company, and falls with a bounce on that sore joint in her foot which has bothered her so long. Being a woman, she cannot relieve her feelings by swearing, but she does the next best thing—she kicks the ottoman with the other foot, and stirs up her next sotest joint in doing so.

Husband and father looks innocent, and wants to know what she has done, and she is a true christian if she can refrain from telling him it is none of his business.

A third time she mounts that chair, and now she means business.

You can see it by the way she compresses her lips over those screws, and plants her foot on that shaky ottoman, and jabs that dull gimlet into the window molding.

At last the sockets for the roller to turn in are up, a little "skewing" perhaps; but never mind—they are up. And if the curtain does roll one-sided, whose business is it?

Husband and father takes time enough from his occupation to mildly inform her that in his judgment, one of the sockets is put up an inch higher than the other. Did you ever hear a woman's reply on such an occasion? It could not well be recorded in words. You would want to see her face in order to get the full meaning of her answer.

She tries the roller. It is about a foot too long. It must be sawed off. She stops and considers. Where is the saw? The head of the family had it last to cut off an apple-tree limb with, she thinks; but she will not ask him any thing about it. Not she. She scorns to hammer him so much. She will hunt it up.

So she gets down again and searches in the wood-shed, and in the stable, and under the kitchen sink, and up in the open attic, and finds it at last down cellar on the meat barrel, with about half an inch of rust on it and the handle loose.

She takes the roller and lays it on two chairs, and begins to saw. The saw is just like the screws—it doesn't take hold. She gives a vigorous dig with it and cuts a groove a couple of inches long in one of her best walnut chair frames, but does not so much as scar the roller.

Another attempt. The saw takes hold in one place—cuts a little, then slips over two or three inches of the length of the roller, cutting its way all along, and sending the sawdust every which way.

Husband and father tells her she doesn't hold her saw right. "Mad clear through," as she afterward tells her confidential next-door neighbor, she makes a desperate effort, and the thing is sawed in two. "Yes, sir!" it is done!

No words will describe the triumph which fills her soul as she once more climbs on the ottoman and tries it in the sockets. At least two inches too long!

Depressed in mind but not in manner, she gets down again and determines it shall be short enough this time.

The same thing is gone through with as regards the saw, and again the roller is cut. Half an inch too short this time.

Well, she has got another fixture; she will try that. She won't be beat out. She will have that curtain up.

So she gets the other fixture, and be ing of being extra careful it is sawed to just the right length. Then she gets the tack hammer, and tacks the curtain to the roller, and pounds on one finger and both thumbs, and drives two tacks through the curtain where they ought not to be, and crooks up about twenty more, and then she rises, curtain in hand, to put it up. She finds one socket must be moved a little. It "sets in" too much at the bottom.

She has put the screw-driver and gimlet away, woman like. A man now would have left them right there on the floor till he wanted them again, so's to have them handy. There is a great difference in the way a man does things compared with a woman's way.

She brings them back, and gets out the screws, and starts them right, and then the handle of the screw-driver comes off. It always does when a woman is using it. She drives it on with the tack hammer, and proceeds. At last the curtain is up and it rolls if you hold on the bottom of it and sort of coax it along; but no unpracticed hand should ever touch it.

And the woman who fixes it will brag next day to her friends about the way she can handle tools, and point to that curtain as an example of what she can do; and they will compare notes on their husbands, and decide that one smart woman is worth two men.

How Millstones are Made of Glass.—The Manufacturer and Builder calls the attention of manufacturers who can cast heavy pieces of glass, and also of millers, to a recent German discovery, that the finest flour is produced by those millstones which have the most glassy texture and composition, and the consequent discovery that pieces of glass combined in the same way as the French burr, and similarly grooved on their surfaces, will grind better than the burr mills ones. The consequence of this discovery has been the invention of the glass millstones now made by Messrs. Thom, and used in Germany and Borkendorf with great satisfaction, as it is found they grind more easily, and do not heat the flour as much as is the case with the French Burr stone. In grinding grist, they run perfectly cold.

In order to make such stones, blocks of glass of from 6 to 12 inches wide are cast in a shape similar to the French Burrs, but more regular and uniform. They are connected with cement in the same way, and dressed and furrow-cut with picks and pointed hammers: but we believe that diamond-dressing machines might be profitably applied. It is said that these millstones, made of lumps of hard glass, do not wear away faster than the burr stones. Stones of four and a half feet in diameter, driven by six-horse power, ground 220 pounds of flour per hour, and did it while remaining cold. The grist is drier, looser, and the hull more thoroughly separated from the kernel than is the case with other stones.

If all this turns out to be correct, it is a valuable discovey, especially when we consider the expensiveness of good blocks of burr.

Etiquette in Bygone Days.

Greenville Murry, in discussing the transfer of the seat of the government from Versailles to Paris, speaks of the rigor of etiquette in bygone days. Louis Quatorze, strolling one day in the park on the arm of Mme. de Maintenon, and followed by his court, of about 500 persons, came unexpectedly upon a servant girl armed with a broom, pail and duster, who had been scrubbing in one of the pavilions, she ought by rights to have made her way back to the offices of the palaces by a roundabout road, but, being late, she had taken a short cut, and this had brought her in view of the king. His majesty removed his feathered hat and made her a low bow, and as etiquette required that a person saluted by the king should be bowed to by the whole court, the poor girl, as she stood trembling and ashamed, received enough homage to make her well-nigh mad. First the princes and princesses, then the secretaries of the state, the dukes and peers, the knights of his majesty's orders, the bishop, the chaplains, the lesser nobility, all had to make a profound obeisance while the ladies stopped and courtesied to the earth; finally the king's guards had to carry arms, and a whole tribe of lackeys, bearing lap-dogs, cloaks, fans, and smelling bottles, had to do their duty in the same humble fashion to their colleague—the blushing girl with the broom and pail.

Why Lace is so Costly.—The finest specimen of Brussels lace is so complicated as to require the labor of seven persons on one piece, and each operative is employed at distinct features of the work. The thread used is of exquisite fineness, which is spun in dark underground rooms, where it is sufficiently moist to keep the threads from separating. It is so delicate as scarcely to be seen, and the room is so arranged that all the light admitted falls upon the work. It is [illegible] that renders the pending [illegible] ly. On a piece of Valenciennes [illegible] inches wide, [illegible] are [illegible] many as eight [illegible]

About Men's Beards.

M. M. T., in Cincinnati Commercial: "There is that in the way some men stroke their beards which is irritating to some women. It is done with such a self-satisfied, complaisant air. Such as 'Yes, you can talk, my dear; it is the privilege of yoursex to talk; but we men know all about it. Your talk does not disturb our equanimity. It is a drain upon our patience, but we can stand that; so pray away.'

Just such a man I had to deal with the other day. He bowed and smiled, and said 'Ah' and 'Yes,' to what I was suggesting. I knew a great deal more about the subject in question than he did, and when he bade me good morning, and turned to go into his office, his hand was still passing up and down the length of his beard, and there was a broad smile of satisfaction on his face, which said, 'I have dismissed her in good humor with herself and me. My management, you see.' When he had succeeded in getting me in such a temper, if I had been in possession of a pair of scissors I could hardly have restrained myself from making an effort to despoil him of his cherished appendage.

There is much character expressed in beards, and in the way men treat and wear them. There is beauty, also. The shaven face is more outspoken—hides less. One can more quickly and clearly read it than they can the bearded visage, but it does not wear the ineffaceable stamp of manhood.

One man's lower face and jaws are armed with a short, bristling, pugnacious growth, which has aggression in every hair. Aggressive he is, always meeting you at swords' points with a pick or a thrust.

Another, who is perchance stout and broad, has a short, stiff, compact, unyielding growth, like stubble. You know at a glance he is stubborn. You avoid contact with him, for you feel he would prove as inflexible as a rock.

A third's chin is decorated with soft, smooth hair, well brushed, worn in a point, or fringing the face. They are so pliant you would like to stroke them. You feel he is benevolent, and it is of him you would ask a favor.

Then comes he with his hirsute appendage jagged, uneven, ill kept, he tosses it with a motion of his hand as he talks. He is good natured, and don't care, and takes the world easy.

The man with a barb as long and silken and wavy as a woman's hair, beware of. He is specious, weak and cajoling. This type is mostly blonde. The wearer talks low, flatteringly and insinuatingly, caressing his beard with his hand the while—he does not stroke it—and lets his fingers rest lovingly amid it.

There are the men, with small tufts under their chin, a nondescript class belonging to all sorts. Then those with crinkled, red beards, telling of temper and vim. Those, too, whose beards are utterly unkempt, who are too immersed in literature or science or business to attend to this crowning glory of their sex.

The very precise men with no beards but neat mutton-chop whiskers—English fashion. The would-be dandies ape foreigners and decorate their upper lips with the moustache, which gives one the idea of some horrid live thing struggling to get free.

There was a time—and that not very long ago—when to wear a long beard or moustache was to be suspected of at least not being a gentleman. Fathers and mothers looked askance at the visitor to their daughter who came barbed. Ministers of the Gospel wore no beards. It would have been a great scandal for such to have appeared bearded in the pulpit. A close-shaven chin and a white cravat was an indispensible part of the clerical livery.

The English, as a general thing, have been a close-shaven race, although there is much greater latitude in that respect at the present day.

When Admiral Keppel was sent to Algiers, to demand satisfaction for injuries done to British subjects by the Corsairs, his Deyship was so enraged by the demands and the independent bearing of the Briton, he said to him:

'I wonder at the insolence of your Monarch in sending a foolish, beardless boy as Ambassador to me.'

His reply nearly cost the Admiral his head:

'If,' said he, 'my master supposed wisdom was measured by the beard, he would have sent a he goat with his message to your Deyship.'

Hearing which, the Moslem in a rage ordered him to be immediately bowstringed.

'Work your pleasure,' said the Admiral, 'I am ready to die, but,' and he pointed to the English fleet lying in the harbor, visible from the window, 'there are Englishmen enough there to make me a glorious funeral pile.'

The Dey quieted down, released the Briton and adjusted the business.

To a Moslem the beard is sacred; an oath sworn by it is rarely broken. To pull his beard is an insult which can not be wiped out. He is stoical, rendered so by his religion, which teaches him all things are foreordained and must be met. Much of the stoicism of his manner may possibly be due to his beard, which while covering his face permits of no betrayal of expression, save that which comes through the lips.

There is no greater addition to a man's appearance than a handsome beard. If it hides expression it also hides defects. Men disguise themselves with beards. Those bent on villainy wear or leave them off at pleasure."

How to See the Wind.

Take a polished metallic surface of two feet or more, with a straight edge—a large hand-saw will answer the purpose. Take a windy day, whether hot or cold, clear or cloudy, only let it not rain or the air be murkey; in other words let the air be dry and clear, but this is not essential. Hold your metallic surface at right angles to the direction of the wind—i. e., if the wind is north, hold your surface east and west, but instead of holding the surface vertical, incline it about forty-five degrees to the horizon, so that the wind striking glances and flows over the edge (keeping it straight) as water over a dam. Now sight carefully over the edge at some minute and sharply defined object, and you will see the air flow over as water flows over a dam. Make your observations carefully, and you will hardly fail to see the air, no matter how cold; the result is even better when the sun is obscured.

[The above is doubtless a very interesting experiment, but most people, especially newspaper men, would prefer to know how to raise the wind.]

It is a sad mistake to suppose that a widow's veil is always a vale of tears.

Home, Sweet Home.

Best of all things to us is home. In hours of ambition and pleasure we may sometimes forget its exquisite sweetness, but let sickness or sadness come, and we return to it at once. Let the hollow hearts that feign a friendship which they do not feel stand revealed before us—let us know, as we all must at moments, that however important we may be in our own estimation, our places would be filled at an hour's notice should we die to-morrow; then we whisper to ourselves the magic word home, and are comforted.

"Home, sweet home!" It does not matter how humble it is, nor is it less a home for being a palace. It is where those we love dwell—whatever that may be—where we are valued for ourselves and are held in esteem because of what we are in ourselves and not because of power, or wealth, or what we can do for other people.

Who would be without a home? Who would take the world's applause and honor in place of the few true hearts and the cozy fireside meetings where the truth may be spoken without disguise, and envious carpings are unknown? In life's great battle even the hero finds many enemies, and much slander and abuse and detraction; but into a home, if it is what it ought to be, these things never find way. There to his wife the plainest man becomes a wonderful thing—a sage, a man who ought to become President of the United States, and would were his worth known.

THE GREATEST MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.

Kellogg's Columbian Oil is a powerful remedy, which can be taken internally as well as externally by the tenderest infant. It cures almost instantly, is pleasant, acting directly upon the nervous system, causing sudden buoyancy of the mind. In short the wonderful effects of this most wonderful remedy cannot be explained in written language. A single dose inhaled and taken according to directions will convince any one that it is all that is claimed for it. Warranted to cure the following diseases: Rheumatism or Kidney Disease in any form, Headache, Toothache, Neuralgia, Sprains, Bruises, Flesh Wounds, Bunions, Burns, Corns, Spinal Affection, Colic, Cramping Pains, Cholera Morbus, Flux, Diarrhoea, Coughs, Colds, Bronchial affection, Catarrh, and all aches and pains, external and internal. Full directions with each bottle. For sale by C. A. Wright & Co., Tecumseh.

Catholic Shrines and Emblems.

Scattered along the road at very frequent intervals are the shrines and stations and crucifixes with which this whole land is disfigured. To the South German mind the tears of the Virgin and the cruel bodily suffering on the Cross seem to be the only effecting emblems of Christianity. Generally absurd, often painful, and always coarse, these tokens are too frequent to excite reverence, and can have little other effect than to maintain the routine of the formal observances of the Church. The Madonna often wears hoops of enormous dimensions; she frequently weeps behind a painted handkerchief; and in one instance, where she was of wood and life size, she held the fresh-ironed linen with printed border of our own time. So little does the real character of the Crucifixion impress itself upon the popular mind that it is by no means uncommon for the bleeding wound of the wooden Christ to be decked with flowers or ribbons on festive days. In one case a bunch of cat-tails was stuck between the knees. It is perhaps well for the tourist that these shrines occur so frequently, for their shock is weakened by familiarity, and one comes to pay little heed to them.

A Wonderful Discovery.

For the speedy cure of Consumption and all diseases that lead to it, such as stubborn Coughs, neglected Colds, Bronchitis, Hay Fever, Asthma, pain in the side and chest, dry hacking cough, tickling in the throat, Hoarseness, Sore Throat, and all chronic or lingering diseases of the throat and lungs. Dr King's New Discovery has no equal and has established for itself a world-wide reputation. Many leading physicians recommend and use it in their practice. The formula from which it is prepared is highly recommended by all medical journals. The clergy and the press have complimented it in the most glowing terms. Go to your druggist and get a trial bottle free of cost, or regular size for $1.00. For sale by M. Wright & Son, Tecumseh, Mich.

Graham Bread Historically.

During the administration of William Pitt, in England, there was a great scarcity of wheat, and in order to make it go as far as possible, Parliament passed a law that all the bread for the army should be made out of unbolted wheat meal. History states that the result was such an improved condition of health among the soldiers as surprised them, and also their officers and the surgeons. The latter declared that never before were the soldiers so healthy and robust, and that disease had nearly disappeared from the army. For a long time this kind of bread was used almost exclusively, but when wheat became once more abundant, its use was discontinued.

Cards or Croquet.

While we were on our trip to the "Sunny South" a year ago, we often observed some of the party gathering in groups of two or four and playing with those awful things of the devil—cards. Sometimes they played euchre until they were tired of it. Other times they played seven-up, pedro, and occasionally a little of poker. Yet on all that long trip to Texas, we never heard them dispute, or quarrel, or call each other pet names, or swear, or get mad at each other, while their frequent bursts of merriment at some unexpected turn in the play, broke the monotony of the continuous traveling of a trip of over 3500 miles in 12 days, and all eyes would be directed to them; yea, even preachers and "deacons" as well as editors looked on the merry-makers with approving appreciation. Yet, just the other day we were watching a party of young men and maidens playing croquet. In five minutes we saw two persons cheat successfully. We heard the one player that did not cheat, accused of cheating six times. We saw three distinct quarrels. We heard a beautiful looking young lass tell seven lies in as many minutes, and a meek-looking young man eight, and finally we saw the pretty creature get mad, throwing her mallet against the fence with such violence that it frightened a horse. Another pretty Miss pounded her mallet on the ground so hard that it shook the buds off of a cherry tree near by. Next they both shot into the house at different doors, and the two young men looked so sheepish that they went off to get a drink. Now, why is this thusly? Is not croquet a good, moral game?

TO THE AFFLICTED.

Since the introduction of Kellogg's Columbian Oil it has made more permanent cures and given better satisfaction on Kidney complaints and Rheumatism than any known remedy. Its continued series of wonderful cures in all climates has made it known as a safe and reliable agent to employ against all aches and pains, which are the forerunners of more serious disorders. It acts speedily and surely, always relieving suffering and often saving life. The protection it affords by its timely use on Rheumatism, kidney affection, and all aches and pains, wounds, cramping pains, cholera morbus, diarrhœa, coughs, colds, catarrh, and disorders among children, makes it an invaluable remedy to be kept always on hand in every home. No person can afford to be without it, and those who have once used it never will. It is absolutely certain in its remedial effects and will always cure when cures are possible. Call at C. A. Wright & Co's. and get a memorandum book giving more full details of the curative properties of this wonderful medicine.

Preserving Seeds and Fruits.

A correspondent of the Southern Cultivator, who claims to have "boxed the compass," as it were, in testing every plan or preventive heard or read of for preventing decay in fruits, gives the following as in every way successful, in the keeping of fruits, for a long time. He says:

"Take good perfect sand, (a very cheap material in my locality), free it from trash etc., by sieving it. Put it in a large metallic vessel (I use a large syrup boiler), mixing flour of sulphur through the whole, enough to fumigate it well, then heat to a temperature that will volatilize the sulphur. After maintaining this heat till the sand is impalpably dry, let the mass cool to a moderate warmth, and putting your sweet corn, or other grain difficult to keep, into barrels or boxes, pour the sand in, filling the same well, and packing down closely. In heating the sand, the vessel should be covered, to retain as much as possible the sulphurous fumes. I put in the corn stripped of the shuck, and thus the sand sieves well through the barrel. This certainly balks the weevil, and even rats do not burrow in it. It is applicable to any grain—even seed wheat, so difficult to preserve in this latitude. This sand keeps perfectly all such fruits as oranges, apples and lemons, putting them away in shallow boxes in a cold place. I've kept these fruites for months perfect and plump when if exposed to atmospheric heat and moisture they would have decayed in a few days."

Man's Noblest Work.

This is an age of great works and wonderful inventions. Steam, electricity, water, air, all are made to serve man, but unquestionably the greatest inventions are those which preserve man's health and prolong his life, and among the greatest of these is Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Its effects are truly wonderful and hundreds are happy to day, who looked forward to an early grave. For Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, loss of Voice, Hay Fever, Hoarseness, Croup, or any affection whatever of the Throat, Chest or Lungs, Dr. King's New Discovery will positively cure. We can cheerfully recommend it to all, and can unhesitatingly say it is the only sure cure for Throat and Lung affections. Trial bottles ten cents; regular size $1. For sale by C. A. Wright & Co., Tecumseh.

Succession of Garden Vegetables.

Many persons plant all their garden seeds at one time. It is not the right way. It gives one "a feast or a famine." Take green peas. There should be enough planted to give the family a supply while they are in season for eating, which is about two weeks. When that supply is over, a new supply should be coming on, fresh and tender, to last two weeks longer; and when they are gone, another supply should be coming on; and thus continuing all summer. The same should be the case with green corn and many other table vegetables. By planting garden seeds every two weeks all summer, nice, fresh vegetables may be put on the table every day. It is true, it takes a little more work, care and watchfulness to do all this, but it pays. Farmers and their wives and their boys and girls work hard, have hearty appetites, deserve good things to eat, and they can have them and enjoy them, if they wish to. But it takes a little more work.

TO ADVERTISERS.

GEO. P. ROWELL & CO'S SELECT LIST OF LOCAL NEWSPAPERS.

An advertiser who spends upwards of $5,000 a year, and who invested less than $350 of it in this List, writes: "Your Select Local List paid me better last year THAN ALL THE OTHER ADVERTISING I DID."

IT IS NOT A CO-OPERATIVE LIST.

IT IS NOT A CHEAP LIST.

IT IS AN HONEST LIST.

The catalogue states exactly what the papers are. When the name of a paper is printed in FULL FACE TYPE it is so in every instance the BEST.—When printed in CAPITALS it is the ONLY paper in the place. The list gives the population of every town and the circulation of every paper.

The rates charged for advertising are barely one-fifth the publishers' schedule. The price for single States ranges from $2 to $80. The price for one inch one month in the entire list is $625. The regular rates of the papers for the same space and time are $2,980.14. The list includes 1952 newspapers of which 187 are issued DAILY and 765 WEEKLY. They are located in 788 different cities and towns, of which 26 are State Capitals, 363 places of over 5,000 population, and 468 County Seats. For copy of List and other information, address GEO. P. ROWELL & CO., 10 Spruce St., New York.

COLORED COLONIZATION.

A number of gentlemen interested in the proposed New Mexico colored colonization scheme called on President Garfield. Dr. Harvey, secretary of Howard University, stated that the university was interested in a large tract of land in New Mexico, and it was proposed to have it examined, with a view to its settlement by colored emigrants from the South. For this purpose it was deemed necessary to have a delegation visit the territory to inspect the land, and the President was requested to aid them by furnishing a small escort of soldiers to insure the safety of the exploring party. Compliance with this request was not objected to by the President, provided the army rules would allow it.

THE CURRENCY.

The Treasury now holds the following bonds to secure national bank circulation: Currency, 6's, $9,830,000; 6's, $46,381,850; 5's, $183,300,800; 4½'s, $34,463,050; 4's, $105,392,300; total, $351,418,000. THE HEAVY MEN.

Governor Ordway, Judges Kidder and Bennett, and Colonels Campbell and Lounsberry met casually at the Interior Department yesterday, and some one suggested that they were fine specimens, physically, of Western men, and requested their height and weight, which proved to be as follows: Ordway, height 6 feet 4 inches, weight 267; Kidder, height, 5 feet 9 inches, weight 234; Bennett, height, 6 feet 1 inch, weight 196; Campbell, height 6 feet, weight 241; Lounsberry, height 5 feet 10 inches, weight 249. Average height, 6 feet, weight, 234.

TRADE WITH MEXICO.

Dr. Julius A. Skilton, for eight years Consul General at the City of Mexico, says that American trade with Mexico has increased 60 per cent. as the direct result of the excursion of the Chicago merchants to Mexico in 1879. The goods sold most are machinery and manufactured hardware of all kinds. So much preference is shown for this latter class of American goods that the European merchants have begun to bring counterfeit articles of English and German manufacture bearing American trade marks. He says that the chief want felt heretofore—the want of fuel to work iron—is about to be obviated by the discovery of extensive coal deposits on the San Juan del Rio River, on the projected line of the Mexican Central Railroad, not over 100 miles from the capital, which promises to supply an abundance of a good article of hard coal. The matter is being brought to the attention of New York capitalists, and it is expected that a company will be formed for their development.

THE JEANNETTE EXPEDITION.

Lieut. R. M. Berry, U. S. N., has been ordered to command the Artic expedition steamer Mary and Helen. The complement of the vessel will be eight officers and thirty-five men. The detail of officers has not yet been made. One of them will be Master H. K. Hunt. The board which has been in session at the navy department for some time has recommended that a certain cruise to be taken by the Mary and Helen in their voyage, which the navy department will adopt in its orders to Lieut. Berry. The board also provides in its report for the details of the equipment of the vessel in the manner experience has demonstrated to be most perfect. The Mary and Helen will be fitted out at the Mare Island navy yard upon plans recommended by the board. Lieut. Berry expects to leave Washington shortly for San Francisco, to superintend the preparation of his vessel.

THE MORMON QUESTION.

Delegate Campbell, of Utah, in a letter to President Garfield discussing the Mormon question, says:

Very vigorous and direct legislation is needed to correct this great evil. Now is the time to strike. It will not do to nurse and protect this giant wrong until, like slavery, it threatens the overthrow of the government, and requires the best blood of the country to wash it out. Those who now plead that polygamy is a divine institution are perhaps as sincere as those who in times past pleaded the divine origin of slavery, but they are none the less dangerous enemies to free government and Republican institutions. Your message has raised hopes in Utah that should not be blighted. There are thousands of young men and women there who long for deliverance from the baleful shadow of polygamy, and who are ready to come to the front as soon as they are assured that Congress and the administration are determined to free them. Give them this assurance, Mr. President, and as Abraham Lincoln lives in history as the liberator of the slaves, your administration will be memorable as that which gave the death-blow to that twin relic of barbarism—polygamy.

THE VIRGINIA DEBT QUESTION.

The difference between the position of the readjusters and their opponents in Virginia on the debt question, which is made so prominent now by the contest in the Senate, is about as follows: McCullough's (or the debt-payers') bill fixed with the consent of the creditors the debt at $32,000,000, made the coupons receivable for taxes and other dues to the State and the bonds non taxable. It fixed the rate of interest at an average of 4 per cent. Riddleberger's bill, which the re-adjuster's stand by, fixed the debt at less than $20,000,000, made the coupons not receivable for taxes, made the bonds taxable, and the rate of interest 3 per cent. It was proposed to make this bill a law, without the consent of the State's creditors, on the ground that it was just to both the creditors and the State. The re-adjusters' bill excludes from the State debt the interest accumulated during the war and the reconstruction period. McCullough's bill includes this.

TENURE OF ARMY AND NAVAL OFFICERS.

A decision was rendered by the Supreme court of the United States in a case which has a good deal of importance for officers of the army and navy, and which settles the question of the right of the President, by and with the consent of the Senate, to dismiss an army or navy officer from service without a court-martial. Charles M. Blake was, in 1868, post chaplain at Camp McDowell, Arizona, and forwarded to the President, during a temporary fit of insanity, what was construed as a resignation. The resignation was accepted, and shortly thereafter Alexander Gilmore nominated and confirmed as Blake's successor. In 1878 President Hayes, upon reconsideration of the circumstances of Blake's resignation, set aside its acceptance and restored him to service, whereupon the latter brought suit for back pay. The conclusion of the court is that whatever view be taken of Blake's resignation, the appointment and confirmation of another man in his place had the effect of discharging him from service. Gilmore's appointment superseded Blake and discharged him from service without any reference to the latter's mental capacity to understand what was a resignation. Blake could not thereafter have been restored to service without a new nomination and confirmation.

THE CUTICURA REMEDIES.

Some Facts Regarding Them—Who Makes Them and what is thought of them by the Drug Trade—Interview of a Times Reporter with Peter Van Schaack, Esq.

From the Chicago Times: To enable the TIMES to furnish its readers with some reliable information regarding the Cuticura remedies, which are now attracting so much public attention, a reporter called yesterday upon Mr. Peter Van Schaack, of Van Schaack, Stevenson & Co., wholesale and retail druggists, corner Lake and Dearborn streets, when the following facts were elicited:

R.—Will you oblige the readers of the TIMES by answering a few questions regarding the Cuticura remedies?

Mr. Van S.—Certainly; fire away.

R.—Do they sell well?

Mr. Van S.—The sale of the Cuticura, Cuticura Resolvent, and Cuticura Soap have been unprecedented.

R.—What reasons do you give for so large a sale?

Mr. Van S.—I give four reasons. First, they are original and revolutionary in their composition and mode of treatment. Second, they undoubtedly possess great curative properties. Third, there are thousands upon thousands of sick and suffering who have tried and found wanting the usual remedies and modes of treatment, and who are ready to welcome a really great and successful medicine. Fourth, the price of them is within the reach of every invalid.

R.—Are your large sales of these medicines through your agents?

Mr. Van S.—No; they are legitimate mail orders. We employ no travelers on the road—are fundamentally opposed to that way of selling goods—the retailer has to stand such expenses and such staple goods as these require no one to force them off.

R.—Do you class them as patent medicines?

Mr. Van S.—I do not. They are proprietary only so far as their names are concerned, these being held as trade-marks.

R.—Can you tell us something about this firm?

Mr. Van S.—Weeks & Potter are importers, wholesale druggists and chemists, and for twenty-five years have been the foremost house in the trade in New England.

R.—It is popularly supposed that advertising will sell most anything, regardless of merit. Is it true?

Mr. Van S.—No. A remedy falsely claiming to possess virtues of which it is in fact destitute, will surely fail. No reputable firm—and druggists are the most competent judges—would think of risking fame and fortune on any medicine unless it had, under the most trying circumstances, proved itself to possess extraordinary medicinal value. The expense attending the introduction of such remedies is enormous. A fortune must be spent before any return can be expected. If, after a wide distribution, they are found to possess the virtues claimed for them, those who have been cured will recommend them one to another, and thus make them remunerative. When a man backs his statements with his own money, you may generally rely upon them. This Weeks & Potter are doing.

R.—Have they ever before prepared medicines for popular use?

Mr. Van S.—I believe not. They are, like ourselves, agents for a great many, but we think these are the first that they prepare themselves. It is but once in a lifetime that a discovery is made of a remedy that such a firm as Weeks & Potter are willing to stake reputation and fortune on.

R.—Are their prospects flattering or otherwise?

Mr. Van S.—Very flattering. As I said before, the remedies undoubtedly possess great merit. And besides, they treat blood and skin diseases according to a new and thoroughly rational plan, that must take a firm hold on the confidence of those who suffer from chronic diseases of the blood, skin and scalp.

A GOOD MEDICINE.—Mr. J. Wyatt of Rockingham, N.C., has a little boy, five years old, who has been suffering with a skin disease, breaking out all over, ever since he was born. He informs us, he saw the advertisement of Dr. J. C. Ayer's Sarsaparilla in the Danville Times, and bought a bottle of it. He administered it to the boy, and states there has been a wonderful improvement. The breaking out is rapidly disappearing, and the boy's appetite is good for the first time.—Danville, Va., Times.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla is sold by all druggists, and is a positive remedy for impurities of the blood.

SOUND ADVICE.—Don't wreck the constitution by taking quinine, arsenic and other powerful medicines, when the Lion Malaria and Liver Pad and Body and Foot plasters will positively cure the worst case of Chills and Malarial Fever. The cheapest treatment ever offered. The whole combined remedy for one dollar. For sale by Druggists.

Eaton & Co's spring opening, Wednesday and Thursday, April 13th and 14th, with a grand reception Tuesday evening, April 12th, at which time the new electric and calcium light will be used. The Toledo papers spoke very highly of the reception last season, the store being crowded with the elite of the city from 7 to 10 o'clock, P. M. Many of our readers we presume will accept their invitation and be present.

MAYOR STACY'S CONDITION.

Mayor James A. Stacy of Adrian has, as our readers are aware, been quite sick for some time past. He has been having the best medical attention and nursing however, and his friends have entertained no special fears for him until last Tuesday, when his symptoms became alarming. Judge Stacy, who was in Lansing on business, and the members of the family in Tecumseh were telegraphed for, and they have been in Adrian ever since. His condition on Tuesday night and Wednesday was extremely critical. A change for the better took place this morning, and at noon today he was resting quietly. His friends have taken fresh courage, and feel that the chances for his recovery are now quite favorable.

THIS morning at two o'clock Miss Adele Whitenack, in the prime of her life, passed into the realms of eternal peace and joy.

ORRIN A. GILMAN, who, four or five months ago purchased the grocery business of William Gaston, made an assignment the first of the week, to Frank Baxter.

THE electors decided last Monday to offer a bounty of twenty cents for every woodchuck killed in this township. The farmers might have better taken their shot-guns and cleaned the woodchucks from their farms, than to have the township pay for it, and their farms over-run with hunters.

Adrian Times: Mrs. VanCamp, an inmate of the county house, died Sunday morning. She came from Deerfield, where she has relatives living. Five ten penny nails, one hair pin, twenty-three five-penny nails, two large screws, a part of a spoon handle, twenty carpet tacks, ten window tacks, three pebbles, two pieces of solder and a pin.

WE understand that our old friend S. P. Rounds of Chicago, is favorably mentioned in some quarters as a fit person for public printer at Washington under the new administration. We have been acquainted with Mr. Rounds for several years and we firmly believe that no better man could be found in the entire west for that position. He has seen service as a printer, publisher, manufacturer of printing presses and dealer of printing material of all kinds, and withall has proven himself to be a remarkably successful business man. He would be fully at home in all the details of the government printing office from the basement to the garret. Put S. P. Rounds at the head of that office and the right man would certainly be in the right place.

Last Saturday morning deputy sheriff Merritt apprehended William Carroll and Joseph Kessler at Clinton and took them in charge. They are the same young men that were arrested the next morning after the stabbing of Dr. Hause, and afterwards released there being no evidence that they did the deed. But the officers in the course of their work found out that these two fellows lived near Deerfield and had shown a knife to parties there that was the same as the knife which the villain dropped after stabbing the Doctor. Further the same men were known to have purchased tickets from Deerfield to Tecumseh the night of the burglarizing. These facts led to the rearrest and will undoubtedly lead to their conviction. Their examination takes place before Justice Burridge next Tuesday.

ELECTION.

The Democrats Elect Their Supervisor, Treasurer, and one Constable. The Rest of the Ticket Republican.

The township election passed off very smoothly, and at the same time there was considerable electioneering. There were four tickets in the field and all made up of good men. The Democrats did some good work and succeeded in electing their Supervisor, Treasurer, and one Constable. The rest of the ticket was carried by the Republicans. The Greenbackers and Prohibitionists polled a good vote, and were well pleased. There was an unusual number of split tickets. There were sixteen men who wanted to be constables and it was the greatest trouble that the voters had to contend with, to select four men from sixteen. But as far as John Smyth was concerned, there was no difficulty, he making the largest run of any of the candidates.

A REPORT to the effect that Prof. Fairfield's mother committed suicide was current, but such is not the case. The Professor's father, Rev. E. B. Fairfield, in a letter states that the report is without foundation, arising probably from the fact that she placed a bandage about her neck on account of a sore throat, and died immediately afterwards, and fell upon a couch in such a manner as to suggest that she had strangled herself. The true cause of her death, he says, was apoplexy, to which disease she had a hereditary tendency. The holding of an inquest was, he thinks, uncalled for, and gave rise to suspicions very unjust to the dead. Mrs Fairfield had many relatives and friends in Michigan, who will be gratified at this explanation of the circumstances of her death.

Deerfield Record: Robert Buck, fireman at Jesse Chamberlin's stave mill three miles west of this village, met with a serious accident about one one o'clock on Thursday morning, the 24th ult. He was fixing the mud-valve of the boiler when the valve turned, and the hot mud was blown into his face and eyes. His left eye was badly hurt and caused much pain Mr. Buck not having it dressed for nine hours afterwards. He will be laid up for about ten days by the accident.

REV. R. S. PARDINGTON will preach on Sabbath evening, at 7:30, in M. E. church, on "The Philosophy of Responsibility."

MICHIGAN IN THE WAR.

The "Soldiers and Sailors of Southwestern Michigan" have petitioned the legislature to print enough copies of "Michigan in the War," so that every surviving soldier, or the children of those who have been finally mustered, can have a copy. The petition to the legislature is signed, "officially" by the officers of the organization, which numbered 1,346 veterans at its last annual encampment. The conclusion of the petition is as follows:

"We respectfully submit that we have not hitherto claimed inordinate privileges or exemptions on account of our services, nor do we ask for anything not enjoyed by the fruit grower, the farmer, the physician and the educator, from all of which, and many other honorable occupations we went to the defense of the flag, and to which we have now returned. The publications for their instructions are annual, while our petition is for a single outlay.

"Should this, our reasonable request, be granted, we would respectfully suggest—for reasons which must be obvious to you—that the distribution be made through the office of the adjutant general."

This request is a reasonable one, and ought to be granted.

Adrian Press: A ludicrous scene was enacted on North Main street on Monday evening. Mr. J. F. Baker brought a barrel of cider to town, which he offered to dispose of to John Tynan. John had no idea of buying a pig in the poke, and, resolving to test the fluid, seized a hammer and a glass and mounting the wagon gave the barrel a couple of stout raps. The result more than filled his expectations. There was business in that cider. The bung flew "sky high," and in an instant John was being bombarded in the eyes, in the ribs, under the coat-tails and everywhere, and cider was deluging the streets like water from a sprinkling wagon. The team got excited and pulled out, and had not help arrived no one can tell what would have been the result. The horses were caught, and what was left of the infernal contents of the barrel was carefully hauged up again. Bystanders remark they never enjoyed more fun to the square foot than on the occasion above described.

Hudson Post: As Mr. Edwin Mills was on his way to Hudson last Monday afternoon, when a little over a mile south of Rollin he met two men with a team, and some distance behind them saw a runaway team coming. He requested the men to take care of their team, and he would try and stop the runaway—the result was a collision between his own team and the runaways, in which one of his horses received a wound in the side, piercing to the lungs, from which he will probably die, and also wrecking his buggy quite badly. It is reported that the cause of the runaway was that the owner of the team had taken a little too much of the fluid retailed by certain business houses in Hudson, and in consequence dropped off from his seat into the road, and left his team to go as they pleased, and they did.

Hudson Post: Jonas Hatfield was the owner of a very valuable colt, coming three years old next June, and which weighed 1350 lbs. While leading this young gelding out to water last Saturday, the colt stepped upon a barn scraper in such a manner that one end of it flew up, and with such force as to enter the body between the thighs a distance of twenty inches, striking the backbone. Dr. Gay was sent for, but the wound was of such a nature that no skill of the veterinary surgeon could save the life of the colt, and he died on Tuesday following.—Mr. Hatfield valued the colt at $200 and had refused an offer of nearly that sum for him.

SIR JULIUS BENEDICT, the famous London composer who, as pianist and director, accompanied Jenny Lind in her American tour in 1850, has written a biographical and critical paper on "The Swedish nightengale" for the May SCRIBNER'S. The article is said to contain interesting comparisons of her with Malibran and other contemporary artists. The accompanying portrait of Jenny Lind, engraved by Closson from an old daguerreotype, taken while she was in America, will be a striking feature of the number. At the end of his article, Sir Julius hints that he may follow this paper with another, upon the subject of musical conservatories in this country.

Adrian Times: Luther VanZandt, a boy of fourteen living in Ridgeway, was before Justice Lamb for assaulting his grandmother. The boy is a hard case, having often found diversion in creating a rumpus in the household. Justice Lamb sentenced the kid to the reform school till he is eighteen.

"My life," said a grateful lady, "has been one of intense suffering and misery until cured of a disfiguring scrofulous humor by the Cuticura Remedies." Ask your druggists about them if troubled with itching and scaly humors.

Now, Mr. Venator, please let up a little.

Fighting the Devil With Fire.

It is a fine thing that now and then a good wife, who is nervously sensitive to all that is gross and ill-timed, [illegible] the habit that some husbands have of using profane language in their houses. In many cases this is mere thoughtlessness on the part of the good man, who never gives a thought to the inner sensibilities of his better half, and even should she mildly remonstrate, he pays no attention to the rebuke.

We have just heard of a case in point which happened in one of the thriving Missouri cities on the banks of the Mississippi, which the ladies should know something about.

A lady whose husband was addicted to the bad practice we have alluded to, came to her family physician, laid her grievances before him, and said:

"Now, Doctor N., won't you remonstrate with him, and try to break him of this habit. I know he will listen to you."

"Why, madam," said the Doctor, "he would pay no attention to anything I could say to him, but as you have come to me, although somewhat out of my line, I will recommend a prescription, to be administered by you, that will surely cure him. It is an infallible remedy."

"Oh, what is it, Doctor?"

"Well, when John comes home again and swears, do you swear back at him. Of course, I don't want you to take the name of the Lord in vain, but do anything else for his benefit."

"Do tell me, [illegible] of the most [illegible]? I'll do it."

And she did.

The next day John came in and inquired whether dinner was ready, and was told that it was not.

"Well, why the d—l isn't it?" said he.

"Because," she coolly replied, "the wood was so d—d wet that the fire wouldn't burn."

"Why, Mary, what's the matter with you? Are you crazy, or have you been drinking?"

"Neither," she said, and quietly proceeded to set up the dinner.

The beef didn't melt like butter between the teeth—it rather resisted all efforts at its mastication, like so much India rubber, and Uncle John blurted out:

"What makes this d—d beef so infernally tough?"

Mary looked up quickly, and replied, "Well, John, I presume you went down to the butchers and further knowing the difference, picked out a piece of meat that had lived and died of old age."

John pondered a moment, and then said, "Mary, I'd like to know what you mean by that remark."

"Why, John, I only wished to show you that a d—d old bachelor

The Dexter Leader says, the ice on the mill pond has broken up remarkable well this spring and is fast disappearing without causing the least danger to mill property or bridges, much to the contrary of what it did previous years.

Probably the largest pile of saw logs ever seen on one rollway may now be seen at Averill, on the Tittabawassa river. They are the property of six Saginaw firms and will be floated down the stream as soon as the ice breaks up.

David Murray has lately presented the site of the old church, in the center of which the remains of Father Marquette were found, to Regent Higgins, of St. Louis, Mo., at the head of an order of Jesuit Friars, the deed calling for 40 feet square. It is not known what the regent proposes to do with the lot, whether to rebuild in its antique style and original size the historic church, erect a monument, or found a monastery—if the latter, more ground would be needed: but that, no doubt could easily be obtained from Mr. Murray. It is said one of the order is to come here this summer to attend to the premises.—St. Ignace Republican.

Samuel J. Platt, a University literary student, who was last seen on his way to church Sunday forenoon, and whose absence was the occasion of so much grief upon the part of his mother and comment by the public, wrote a letter from Calhoun county, which was received by his afflicted parent on Wednesday, informing her that he had concluded to go forth into the world and try to earn his living. It appears he has occasionally remarked that his college expenses were more than his mother ought to bear. Mrs. Platt, conscious of what might overtake her in the hour of anxiety, had perfected arrangements for her care, provided she became insane, as she fully expected. Young Platt is a highly respectable young man, but deserves a severe reprimand, if nothing more, for causing his fond mother to weep tears of distress over his sudden and uncalled for disappearance.

Theodore Walters, a German resident of North Lansing, suicided in a horrible manner last week. Walters and his wife had separated some time ago and were not living together. Saturday night about 12 o'clock, having previously drank heavily, he proceeded to her house with a double barreled shot gun, with the intention, it is supposed, of killing her and then putting an end to his own life. Arriving at the house he broke in the door and ordered to light a lamp which she refused to do. Either this refusal or a change in his intention saved her; but Walters, bidding her good bye, placed the muzzle of the gun in his mouth and discharged it, blowing nearly the whole of his head off and spattering his brains all over the room. Mrs. Walters attempted to end her life two years ago by jumping into the river. Walters was a hide and fur dealer, and was quite noted as a pyrotechnic manufacturer.

Hiram T. Merrill, of Johnstown, Barry county, has presented through Mayor Nichols, to the museum of the High School in Battle Creek, a number of interesting Indian relics, including some very fine specimens of flint arrow heads of the pattern generally in use by the American aborigines, and a copper spear head, which for size, style of construction and perfection of finish is really remarkable, and cannot fail to attract the attention of antiquarians. It is six and a half inches in length, and shaped like the barb end of an arrow, with an acute point and sharp edges, which made it a very effective instrument of death. It is tempered with wonderful skill, and in this regard shows a perfection of art which surpasses that of our artisans in copper at the present day. The blade has an elasticity almost like that of steel, while its edges show that they have been finished by an overlay of copper of superior temper to that of which the remainder of the weapon is composed.

How to Get Rich.

The great secret of obtaining riches, is first to practice economy, and as good old "Deacon Snyder," says, "It used to worry the life out of me to pay enormous doctor's bills, but now I have 'struck it rich.'" Health and happiness reign supreme in our little household, and all simply because we use no other medicine but Electric Bitters and only costs fifty cents a bottle. Sold by C. A. Wright & Co., Tecumseh.

Nickel Plating Without a Battery.

Professor Slatha has devised and made public a process of nickel plating without the use of the battery, which is said to give good results, and which is not patented. The process is described as follows: To a dilute solution of chloride of zinc, (5 to 10 per cent.) enough nickel sulphate to be added to impart a decidedly green color to it, and the solution is then to be heated to boiling in a porcelain vessel. The clouding of the liquid, from the separation of a basic zinc salt, need not be heeded, as it will not interfere with the effectiveness of the bath. The articles to be nickel-coated—first carefully cleaned of oxide or grease—are to be suspended in the solution from thirty to sixty minutes, the bath being kept at a boiling temperature. When the articles are observed to be uniformly coated, they may be removed, washed in water in which a little chalk is suspended, dried, and finally polished with chalk, or other suitable material. By the substitution of a cobalt salt in place of the nickel, objects may be similarly coated with cobalt.

Chicago Ahead.

All the world now looks up to Chicago as the great western metropolis of America, being far ahead of all competing cities; but none the less so, in its line, is Electric Bitters. From their real intrinsic value they have advanced to the front, and are now far ahead of all other remedies positively curing where everything else fails. To try them is to be convinced. For sale by C. A. Wright & Co. at fifty cents per bottle.

The Horse Chestnut.

The common horse chestnut is capable of furnishing several useful products which are regularly manufactured in several localities in Europe. The seeds contain over 36 per cent. of starch, which is easily obtained in the same manner as that made from cereals. Two hundred and forty to two hundred and fifty pounds of the seeds yield one hundred pounds of dry starch. Paste made from it is extremely adhesive, and is not attacked by insects; it is therefore particularly well adapted for the use of bookbinders. This starch is also used for producing certain kinds of distilled liquors. For this purpose, fifty pounds of starch are heated for six hours with two pounds of sulphuric acid and one hundred and fifty pounds of water, whereby the starch is converted into sugar; the acid is then neutralized by lime, the liquid decanted, mixed with yeast and fermented, and finally distilled. One hundred pounds of starch yield twenty-four pounds of 95 per cent. spirit.

A Janesville, Wisconsin, man claims to have found a sure cure for potatoe bugs, and, by ten years' experience in Colorado, to have demonstrated that it is something which every farmer ought to know. His plan is simply to plant one or two flax-seeds in each hill of potatoes. He says that the bugs will shun it every time, and that for ten years he has been successful in raising potatoes while others have failed. The alleged remedy is simple, and as the cost is next to nothing it would seem to be worthy of a trial.

Plant tansy at the roots of your plum trees, or hang branches of the plant on the limbs of your trees, and you will not be annoyed with curculio. An old successful fruit grower furnishes the above, and says it is the most successful curculio preventative he has ever tried.

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

MARCH 28.—Mahone's speech was the feature of the day, but nothing like as sensational as his first. The Senate was crowded, all expecting a sharp war of words, but the Democrats did not interrupt it, the feeling apparently being among them to let him alone. About 3:30 p. m. Mahone thoroughly warmed up and frequently left his manuscript to speak extemporaneously. He defended Riddleberger, and said he is made of sterger stuff than the Democrats think. Mahone attacked Senator Johnston pretty severely, saying Johnston was elected to the Senate because he had no record, and could again be elected on the same ground, as he had done nothing. Toward 5 o'clock, the attention first paid Mahone became distracted, and conversation on the floor and galleries caused confusion. Mahone's speech has surprisingly had the effect of strengthening the determination of the Democrats in the fight. They consider it an assault on the entire Democracy, and especially on the South, and say they will never yield and allow the election of Mahone's friend, Riddleberger. The feeling has grown so bitter that even if Riddleberger should be withdrawn, it is doubtful if the Democrats would cease filibustering.

Messrs. Voorhees, Brown, and other Democratic Senators attacked by Mahone will reply. Voorhees has been collecting Mahone's speeches for years, and will make [illegible]

MARCH 31.—In the Senate chamber at Washington, Mr. Kellogg found a handsome bouquet on his desk, while Mr. Hill was the recipient of a magnificent floral object, a ship of state sailing upon a sea of violets and roses, accompanied by a imitation letter from ladies of Alexandria, Va.

A resolution was passed to pay the expenses of the fisheries of Matt. H. Carpenter.

A motion by Mr. Harris to adjourn to the first Monday of December was lost.

Messrs. Hill and Dawes then entered into a wordy debate. Mr. Hill regretted the revival of dead issues seeming they worked more injury to the South than the war itself.

Gen. Logan interrupted by saying that the men who went into secession were responsible for all the ravages that followed.

Mr. Hill said that perhaps the men who went into secession would not have gone had it not been that words of encouragement from such northern Democrats as Logan were quoted upon every southern stump. Gen. Logan at this took a very decided stand and said that such insinuations must stop. He said in his most emphatic manner that he had never at any time sympathized even in most remote degree with secession, and that his conduct showed whoever said that he had ever expressed disloyal sentiments stated what was false. Senator Hill said that he did not question Gen. Logan's loyalty, but it was a matter of history that he had been quoted in the South as he had said. Gen. Logan could nothing about that. He simply reasserted in the most positive manner that he would not submit to any insinuations upon his loyalty, not the slightest in mark.

March 1.—The Day [illegible]

A motion to go into executive session was made by Mr. Pendleton, which was defeated—yeas, 22; nays, 26.

The debate that followed was made up of personal encounters. Mr. Lamar, for the first time in many months made a speech. He was very weak and spoke with evident effort.

Hoar, of Massachusetts, replied. George, the new Senator from Mississippi asserted that the murders in his State were not all attributable to political reasons.

Hill, of Georgia, and Logan, next had a wordy dispute.

Mr. Voorhees then took the floor and sent to the clerk's desk and had read an extract from the Evening Telegraph, of Philadelphia, a Republican paper, which alluded to Mahone as a "renegade Democrat," and charging that his acting with the Republicans was in consequence of a disgraceful bargain—

Mr. Hoar objected to its being read, and Mr. Voorhees stated that he would endorse it and make it his speech.

An angry altercation between Voorhees and Mahone, capped the climax, and brought the proceedings to a close. Voorhees adopted the language of the Evening Telegraph, and applied the epithet "renegade Democrat" to Mahone, and accused him of being a party to a disgraceful bargain. Mahone replied that no brave and honorable man would make use of such language. Both spoke of settling the difficulty "hereafter," which led to wild rumors of a coming duel. This ended the controversy in the Senate chamber, and, on motion of Mr. Dawes, the Senate adjourned until Monday.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

BROOKLYN.

Brooklyn is thawing out rapidly.—Election, sunshine, concerts and revival meetings have combined their influence to melt frigidity, and the new temperance scheme has put forth a blossom on the edge of a chasm.

It is an uncommon occurrence for a clergyman to call for a public unsectarian church business meeting in an Episcopal church, and odder yet to see a Presbyterian minister advocating adverse Doxy from the pulpit platform, yet we had these and an earthquake did not follow, though a thorough shaking up of long established customs may develop uneasiness.

The determination to harmonize forces is not wanting among any of the societies represented, but we all dread being misunderstood. That is a sort of honest injustice people often inflict on each other in good faith, and unfortunately, the only court of appeals that can benefit their case holds its sessions beyond the river.

Rev. E. differs from Rev. P. in refusing to sign the usual abstinence pledge, and in asserting that such a pledge is necessary for those who are not church members, but that professors of religion have registered a promise to do right in joining themselves to a church, and any other obligation to uphold morality is superfluous. He objects to the liquor traffic as much as any one can; will work energetically to suppress saloons and gambling, but as I understand him, thinks cider and wine may be drank occasionally at home, provided no one drinks to excess, planting his belief in the groundwork that a christian has sufficient grace to choose with reason, and resist the encroachment of appetite. If I misinterpret his theory it is not intentionally, and he is at liberty to turn my pen right end up double quick.

I am often told that women cannot talk reasonably on temperance: that we are natural fanatics, always stickling for petty trifles like cider or some other squeezed thing, that alienates the more liberal minded and disgusts even the best friends of that cause. I never contradict facts, but this church trifle concerns women and is broad enough to admit of narrowing just a little. No matter how nicely that is sugared with gospel twaddle no true hearted mother will ever befog her common sense with it.

Where is the woman with wit enough to spank a baby that dares to endorse a home license? Their happiness swings on too frail hinges to admit of trying that experiment. Men of the Crosby brand of grace may have been swamped by surrounding themselves with too good influences, in those much revered days of Paul and Timothy, but there is less danger to face of that kind in the regime of Garfield and Arthur. Can any man with so much grace in his heart make his home a cold-frame for propagating possible and probable bad habits.—Will he respect the wife that will consent to risk the demoralization of her children?

He will get fooled if he does, and no amount of distrust afterwards can put his constitution in good order. Such a doctrine as that, bolstered up with scriptural quotations of Christ's tipling examples, makes the bible a present to Bob Ingersoll, and he cannot make a worse use of it.

If a man's church membership is such an all sufficient moral safeguard why is he not exempted from a pledge when he gets married, or hires money or any business transaction. It don't count for much in such cases. I am so glad about the two sections of Rev. E's. constitution that I don't care what name he calls it: it reads this fashion: No member of this association shall loan money, endorse bonds, or render aid in any way, directly or indirectly, to any one engaged in the liquor traffic, gambling or any immorality.

Any communicant in good standing may become a member by signing the constitution.

You will see this is no pledge, but its an awful good constitution. There need be no quibbling about none but church members being admitted for it is pledged, no constitutioned, to cooperate with the other division where all are welcome to join.

I cannot find fault with Rev. E's. work, and now that our word account is balanced, we are good friends, and he is going to utilize my paganism by giving me work to do till he gets organized and slams the front door.

Rev. P. wishes to admit all. I am glad they cannot get in; then glory will shine where it belongs. Now do not misunderstand me; I don't accuse church members of helping saloon keepers in this. No, it is their way. When they sign that constitution, and keep it both in spirit and letter their withdrawing to one side will be a formidable picture for the opposition to contemplate. They cannot help feeling lonesome. There will be the same chance for them to upset as there is for the family pet when he gallops the rocking chair in the middle of the floor.

ROME.

This place still exists although no doubt you have long since ceased to think so, providing you depend upon the correspondent for your conclusiones. All right, we propose to give you a few items this week just the same.

The town meeting resulted in a majority of from 10 to 46 for the Republicans against three tickets, viz: Prohibition, Greenback and Democrat. The last named being almost wholly made up of selections from the other two, therefore the term Democrat is we think, a misnomer. It should have been called Prohibito-Greenback ticket of Rome. It makes no difference, anyway the scheme was a total failure.

Mrs. Newell, an old lady of this place met with a sad accident last week, while going from the well to the house she slipped and fell, producing a fracture of the hip. She and her family have our entire sympathy. The fracture was reduced by Dr. Ross, of this place.

Messrs. Higgins & Warren, the bed renovaters, are doing an extensive business in that line for the people of this place and environs.

The yard at the saw-mill is uncommonly full this spring.

Fred Desermie is having the hotel repaired on the interior. Already it looks much better.

The hop at the brick hall last week was a decided success as far as enjoyment was concerned.

The temperance society of North Rome held an exhibition at the Free Will church, Friday evening.

The relatives and a few personal friends of C. A. Linn, of Ridgeway, gathered at his residence on Tuesday last, on the anniversary of his fifty-eighth birth-day. It was a genuine surprise. One of the guests went with him to a distant barn on pretext of seeing some fine sheep of which he is possessor, and during their absence the company came and took possession, and on his return he found himself a guest in his own house. After hand shaking and congratulations he was presented with a handsome chair and many other articles with a few well-timed remarks by Mr. Samuel Holden. The company, over thirty in number, then repaired to the tables where they enjoyed the many delicacies and substantials with which the tables were loaded, returning to their homes with heartfelt wishes for good health and many returns of this anniversary day.

THE FAMILY CIRCLE.

There is in every human heart,
Some not completely barren part,
Where seeds of love and truth might grow,
And flowers of generous virtue blow;
To plant, to watch, to water there—
This be our duty—this our care!

MAX ADELER ON BURGLARS.

Of late several burglaries have been committed in the neighborhood in which Mr. James Simpson lives, and, of course, the folks are not a little alarmed. In Simpson's row alone, enough fire-arms and ammunition have been collected to conduct a very fair sized war with Mexico, and Simpson, particularly, has bought a whole armory of weapons and loaded them to the muzzle. Simpson's brother-in-law, George Washington Budd, commonly known as "Wash," lives with him, and for weeks past, Wash, upon going to bed, has made such a preparation and display of various kinds of engines of destruction that a looker-on might have included that his purpose was to conduct a kind of battle of Gettysburg on his own responsibility.

The other night Wash, after recapping all his revolvers, running his thumb along the edge of his broad sword, half cocking his gun, and laying his bowie-knife on the chair, thought he heard a burglar prowling about down stairs. Buckling on his artillery, Wash, in his stocking feet, crept down the back stairs, determined to annihilate the thief.

Simpson heard the noise at the same moment. They stopped and listened. Wash thought he heard the burglar in the parlor. Simpson felt sure the rascal was in the dinning room pocketing the spoons. So, while Wash trod noiselessly front-wards, Simpson stepped stealthily to the rear. Midway in the hall they came into collision. Each felt perfectly certain that the other was the burglar.

Wash grappled with his antagonist instantly. Simpson knew that a death struggle had begun, so he took hold with all his might. Neither had a chance to draw their weapons.

Wash strove to throw his burglar down, and Simpson, perceiving the game, made a huge effort to prostrate Wash. They pushed, and pulled, and jerked, and shoved, and panted, bumping up against the wall, and making such a hubbub that Mrs. Simpson in her room, and afraid to come out lifted up her voice and screamed with awful vehemence.

After a fearful and desperate struggle, during which Wash had his coat torn to rags and a couple of handfuls of hair pulled out, and Simpson had his nose jammed against a chair until it felt as if it had swelled to the size of a watermelon, Wash let go a moment to get his breath. Thereupon Simpson made a run for the front stairs quietly, in the dark, and Wash, pretty well scared and tired of war, dashed off up the back stairs, resolved to go and see why Simpson didn't come down and help wipe the burglar out.

As Simpson got to the landing he saw Wash's form by the dim light from the back room in the entry.

"Who's that?" shouted Simpson, nervously, feeling for his his revolver.

"Me—Wash," replied the brother-in-

Simpson went up to him and said:

"Thunder and lightning, Wash! Why didn't you come down sooner?"

"Sooner! why, where have you been? I've had the most awful time you ever heard of."

"So've I," replied Simpson. "There's a burglar in the house and I've been tearing him to pieces."

"You don't say so? Why my gracious, I've had a fight with one, too, and I think I laid him out."

"You did? Where?"

"Why down stairs, there in the front entry."

"Not in the entry, you don't mean?"

"Yes," said Wash, "in the entry; nearly banged the head off of him. Where was your man?"

"Why in the entry, too. Queer I didn't hear you!"

"It is queer," replied Wash; because I hammered his nose against a chair until it must be mashed flat."

"Whose nose?"

"The burglar's; and he tore my coat to rags and pretty nearly scalped me."

"Who did?"

"The burglar."

Simpson was silent a moment and then he said:

"Come here to the light."

They entered the bathroom, and Wash looked at Simpson and Simpson looked at Wash.

"Wash!"

"What?"

"Wash you are one of the biggest idiots in the state. Hang me if I don't believe you have been fighting with me! Look at my nose."

"No! you don't say? Did you pull out your burglar's hair and splinter up his coat?"

"I'm afraid I did," said Simpson.

Mr. Simpson," said Wash, calmly, "if there is a bigger ass on the continent than I am, I think I can lay my hand on the man; a party by the name of Jim Simpson."

"Save me James! oh, save me, Washington, save me! Don't let me be murdered! Don't! don't, oh, don't."

Simpson looked sheepishly at Wash; then without saying a word, he seized Mrs. Simpson by the arm, ran her over to the bed-room, and slammed the door. Then George Washington Budd went up stairs disgorging his murderous apparatus, locked his bowie-knife in his trunk, and went to bed.

Both combatants swore secrecy; but Simpson couldn't help telling his wife, and she spread it, of course, so here it is.

Salt in the Ocean.

The proportion of salt in the ocean is generally about three or four per cent. although it varies in different seas and in the same sea at different seasons and at various depths. The Atlantic ocean is more saline than the Pacific; the Antarctic than the Arctic. The saltest part of the Pacific is in latitude 22° N. and 17° S. of the equator. The least saline water is in the polar seas, where the ice freshens the water. The surface is very often less salt than the depths of the sea, owing to the flowing into the ocean of large quantities of fresh water from rivers. Deep seas are generally much more saline than shallow ones, and inland seas than the ocean; but this depends on the proportion that the river water, flowing into the sea, bears to the evaporation from its surface, and also partly to the influx of salt water. The Mediterranean, for instance, in its deeper parts, is much more salt than the open sea, but the Baltic much less so.

Joseph Cook on High Schools.

My opinion is that primary education merely is not enough to prepare citizens for the duties of their career in the United States. President Eliot said in New York, not long ago, that merely primary education never has saved a people from the political dangers of universal suffrage, and probably never will. When George Combe was in Boston, he said that the education of its schools given to the average citizens was only about enough to prepare them for the amount of political power the masses of the people have in Prussia and Austria. We must in some way give large numbers of the population an education such that they can intelligently direct their own training. I hold that a man who has not been through more than the primary school does not know how to select his own reading profitably. Seven times out of ten he may mistake bad reading for good, and may easily be misled by plausible demagogues, not only in politics but religion. He may be misled in science itself if he has not education enough to enable him to sift books and turn to the best leadership with the confidence that he has chosen right.

The rich do not depend on the high schools. They can take advantage of our best-endowed academies; they can pay for the very best instruction in private schools. But our great middle class are molded by the high school system into sympathy with the best thought of the age, and the best public leaders. If you break the link of good secondary education, there will be no connection between your best thought and the masses of the people. It will be exceedingly hard to make your best thinkers sympathize with the people, and yet more hard to make the people sympathize with your best thinkers. It is the glory of the American civilization that her secondary education brings into sympathy with each other the masses and the best trained minds, and when the sympathy ceases you will have opened a dyke, and through the gap God only knows what surges of salt and bitterness may burst across the land. I regard the high school, next to the church, as the chief barrier against communistic and socialistic inroads from the howling sea of an ignorant and unprincipled population. Give me the high school under generally Christian influences; give me good secondary education in the United States; give me developed thoughtfulness in the masses, and I have little fears from the inroads of socialism and communism. The church will then be able to grapple with the difficulties that surround the theme. But if you allow the people to petrify under merely parochial schools, nobody can reach the masses of the population except the ecclesiastic, and he only the part of the mass that lies nearest to him. Give New England only the parochial Romanish schools in her manufacturing populations, and in a century her manufacturing towns will become a New Ireland. She is a New Ireland already in some city wards.

No organ [illegible] so liable to be overw[illegible] heart. When every other part [illegible] is asleep, it keeps on its perpe[illegible] motion. Every increased effort of [illegible] demands from the heart more [illegible]. A man runs to catch a train and his heart beats audibly. He drinks wine and his blood rushes through its reservoir faster than ever intended by nature. His pulse rises after each course of dinner. A telegram arrives and his heart knocks at his side. And when any one of these "excitements" is over, he is conscious of a depression—a sinking, or emptiness, as it is called. The healthy action of all the members of our frame depends upon the supply of blood received from this central fountain. When the heart's action is arrested, the stomach, which requires from it a large supply of blood, becomes enfeebled. The brain, also, waiting for the blood, is inactive. The heart is a very willing member, but if it be made to fetch and carry incessantly, if it be "put upon," as the unselfish member of a family often is, it undergoes a disorganization which is equivalent to its rupture. And this disorganization begins too often nowadays in the hearts of very young children. Parents know that if their sons are to succeed in any of those competitive examinations which have now become so exigent, high pressure is employed. Hence, young persons are stimulated to overwork by rewards and punishments. The sight of a clever boy who is being trained for competition is truly a sad one. The precocious, coached-up children are never well. Their mental excitement keeps a flush, which, like the excitement caused by strong drink in older children, looks like health, but has no relation to it; in a word, the intemperance of education is overstraining and breaking their young hearts. If in the school room some hearts are broken from mental strain, in the playground and in the gymnasium, others succumb to physical strain. "It is no object of mine," says Dr. Richardson, "to underrate the advantages of physical exercise for the young; but I can scarcely overrate the dangers of those fierce competitive exercises which the world in general seem to applaud. I had the opportunity once in my life of living near a great trainer, himself being a champion rower. He was a patient of mine, suffering from the very form of induced heart disease, of which I now speak, and gave me ample means of studying the conditions of those whom he trained both for running and rowing. I found occasion, certainly, to admire the physique to which his trained men were brought; the strength of muscle they obtained; the force of their hearts; but the admiration was qualified by the stern fact of the results." But, indeed, it is not by overwork so much as by worry and anxiety that our hearts are disorganized. "Laborious mental exercise is healthy, unless it be made anxious by necessary or unnecessary difficulties. Regular mental labor is best carried on by introducing into it some variety." Business and professional men wear out their hearts by acquiring habits of express train haste, which a little attention to method would render unnecessary.

How to Kill Trees.—Good nurserymen say that the practice of burning grass and rubbish in yards where trees are growing is very liable to kill them, even though the fire seems not to approach them near enough to do damage. Evergreens especially are very sensitive to the heat and smoke, and may be killed or stunted by a fire at a considerable distance. Better carry the rubbish away to burn, rather than risk the loss of valuable trees.

Culinary Uses for Leaves.

A writer in the London Iron Trade Exchange, calling attention to a neglected source of culinary flavors, says that with the exception of sweet and bitter herbs, grown chiefly for the purpose, and parsley, which is neither bitter nor sweet, but the most popular of all flavoring plants, comparatively few other leaves are used. Perhaps I ought not to except the sweet bay, which is popular in rice and other puddings, and certainly imparts one of the most pleasant and exquisite flavors; but, on the other hand, what a waste there is of the flavoring properties of peach, almond and laurel leaves, so richly charged with the essence of bitter almonds, so much used in most kitchens. Of course, such leaves must be used with caution, but so must the spirit as well. An infusion of these could readily be made, either green or dry, and a tea or table-spoonful of the flavoring liquid used. One of the most useful and harmless of all leaves for flavoring is the common syringa. When cucumbers are scarce these are a perfect substitute in salads or anything in which the flavor is desired. The taste is not only like that of cucumbers, but identical—a curious instance of the correlation of flavors in widely different families. Again, the young leaves of cucumbers have a striking likeness in the way of flavor to that of the fruit. The same may be affirmed of carrot tops, while in most gardens there is a prodigious waste of celery flavor in the sacrifice of external leaves and their partially blanched foot-stalks. Scores of celery are cut up into soups, when the outside would flavor it equally well or better. The young leaves of gooseberries added to bottled fruit gives a fresher flavor and a greener color to pies and tarts. The leaves of the flowering currant give a sort of intermediate flavor between black currants and red. Orange, citron, and lemon leaves impart a flavoring nearly equal to that of the fruit and rind combined, and somewhat different from both. A few leaves added to pies, or boiled in milk used to bake with rice, or formed into crusts or paste, impart an admirable and almost inimitable bouquet. In short, leaves are not half so much used for seasoning purposes as they might be.

The Shot that Floored Rufus Choate.

Rufus Choate, in an important marine assault and battery at sea case, had Dick Barton, chief mate of the clipper ship Challenge, on the stand, and badgered him so, for about an hour, that at last Dick got his salt-water temper started, and hauled by the wind to bring the keen Boston lawyer under his batteries.

At the beginning of his testimony, Dick had said that the night was "dark as the devil, and raining like seven belis."

Suddenly Mr. Choate asked him:

"Was there a moon that night?"

"A moon?"

"Yes, a moon."

"There was—a full moon."

"Did you see it?"

"Not a mite."

"Then how do you know that there was a moon?"

"Nautical almanac said so, and I'll believe that sooner than any lawyer in the world."

"What was the principal luminary on that night, sir?"

"Binnacle lamp on board of the Challenge."

"Ah, you are growing sharp, Mr. Barton."

"What in blazes have you been grinding me this hour for—to make me dull?"

"Be civil, sir. And now tell me in what latitude and what longitude you crossed the equator."

"Sho, you're joking."

"No, sir, I am in earnest, and I desire you to answer me."

"I shan't."

"Ah! you refuse to answer, do you?"

"Yes—I can't."

"Indeed! You are chief mate of a clipper ship, and unable to answer so simple a question!"

"Tis the simplest question I was ever asked in my life. Why, I thought that every fool of a lawyer knew there ain't any latitude on the equator."

That shot floored Rufus Choate.

Starting in Life.

The first lesson a young man should learn is, that he knows nothing. The easier and more thoroughly this lesson is learned the better. A home-bred youth, grown up in the light of parental admiration, with every thing to foster his vanity and self-esteem, is surprised to find, and often unwilling to acknowledge, the superiority of other people. But he is compelled to learn his own insignificance; have his arts ridiculed, his blunders exposed, his wishes disregarded, and he is often made to cut a very sorry figure, until his self-conceit is abased, and he feels that he knows nothing.

When a young man has thoroughly comprehended the fact that he knows nothing, and is of very little value, the next lesson is, that the world cares nothing for him. He is a subject of no man's overwhelming admiration; neither petted by the one sex, nor envied by the other, he has to take care of himself. He will not be noticed till he becomes noticeable, till he does something to prove that he is some use to society. No recommendation or introduction will give him this; he must be something to be recognized as somebody. There is plenty of room for men in the world, but there is no room for idlers. Society is not particular as to what a man does, as long as he does something useful, to prove himself to be a man; but it will not take the matter on trust.

Origin of the Names of the Months.

To Roman deities and rites are due the names of the months—March, April, May and June to the gods; July and August the rulers of the Augustian age,—Julius Cæsar, to whom divine honors were accorded during the consulship of Lepidus and Plaurus—and Augustus. The four following months were numerically designated, and remind us of the time when December was the tenth month, January a king and deity. February denoted purification. During this month the Romans were purified, a feast was held in memory of the dead, and the Terminalia closed the year.

How anomalous the date of to-day, Thursday, March A. D. 1879. Thor, the giant deity of the Vikings, Mars, the old Roman god of war and carnage, and Our Lord, the Prince of Peace and Savior of mankind, in whose hand in the fullness of time the years will all be gathered, are here recorded. The days and months may vanish unnoted,—the years are the only real landmarks of time, and their only imperishable chronicle is A. D., "In the year of our Lord."

Some men can never take a joke. There was a doctor, who when asked what was good for mosquitoes, wrote back: "How do you suppose I can tell unless I know what ails the mosquito?"

"It is very well," said a henpecked husband, when told to look after the children; "it's all very well to tell me to mind the youngsters, but it would suit me better if the youngsters would mind me."

"Howdy, this morning?" says an acquaintance to a fat citizen, who is blowing and steaming with great speed along the sidewalk. "Training for a walk?" "No," puffs the fat citizen, turning his bulging eyes neither to the right nor left, "I'm walking for a train."

"But you know, pa," said the farmer's daughter, when he spoke to her about the address of his neighbor's son; "you know, pa, that ma wants me to marry a man of 'culture.'" "So do I, my dear—so do I; and there's no better culture in the country than agriculture.

Wash a baby up, clean and dress him up real pretty, and he will resist all advances with a most superlative crossness; but let him eat molasses gingerbread and fool around the coal-bod for half an hour, and he will nestle his dear little dirty face close up to your clean shirt bosom, and be just the lovingest, cunningest little rascal in the world."

A newly married lady, who, as in duty bound, was very fond of her husband, notwithstanding his extreme ugliness of person, once said to a witty friend, "What do you think? My husband has laid out $10 for a large baboon on purpose to please me." "The dear little man!" cried the other. "Well, it is just like him."

Condensed Essays.

Married life often begins with rosewood and mahogany, and ends with pine.

Some poet prettily describes growing old, as "standing at life's west window."

Habit is the deepest law of our nature. It is our greatest strength and our greatest weakness.

We cannot have fertilizing showers on the earth without a clouded heaven above. It is thus with our trials.

Riches, are the baggage of virtue. They cannot be spared or left behind, but they hinder the march.

Cheerfulness makes the mind clearer, gives tone to thoughts, and adds grace and beauty to the countenance.

There are many people so particular about little things that they ever have their brows furrowed over with care.

Pleasant things to have are pleasant thoughts. The greatest art in life is to have as many of them as possible.

As daylight can be seen through the smallest holes, so do the most trifling things show a person's character.

Often the grand meaning of faces, as well as written words, may be chiefly in the impression of those who look on them.

To think kindly of each other is good, to speak kindly of each other is better, but to act kindly towards another is best of all.

Better be right than conquer in an argument. Better bear the assumptions of ignorant men than waste your dearly bought experience on fools.

Times of general calamity and confusion have ever been productive of the greatest minds. The purest ore comes from the hottest furnace; the brightest flash from the darkest cloud.

Carlyle says that one cannot move a step without meeting a duty, and that the fact of mutual helplessness is proved by the very fact of one's existence. No man liveth to himself and no man dieth to himself.

Points in Etiquette.

Letters should never be crossed.

Letters of introduction should be brief.

Always offer ladies the right arm.

Ladies do not talk across the street.

Never wait over fifteen minutes for a tardy guest.

Walk around a lady's train; don't step over it—or on it.

"Yours, &c.," is a rude ending to letters, as a rule.

Say "Good-bye" on leaving, not "Good morning" or "Good evening."

In bowing, the inclination of the head alone is necessary.

Much underscoring in a letter is vulgar and meaningless.

A gentleman walking with a lady returns a bow made to her.

Nothing is more vulgar than finery and welry out of place.

It is the place of the one introduced make the first remark.

The custom of sending flowers to funerals is growing in disfavor.

Don't keep flowers for your friends' coffins. Give them while living.

Never pass an acquaintance without a salutation of recognition.

Always speak to an acquaintance with a smile in your eye; avoid grinning.

"Yours truly," is the correct form for ending business but not friendly letters.

Upon introduction, enter at once into conversation.

Upon leaving a room, one bow should include all.

A call should not be less than fifteen minutes in length.

A note requires as prompt an answer as a spoken question.

Regrets in reply to invitations should contain the reason therefor.

At table you are not required to thank the one who waits on you.

You should exchange calls with individuals before inviting them to your house.

The custom of leaving a blank margin on the left hand side of each page of a letter is obsolete.

Chicago Ahead.

All the world now looks up to Chicago as the great western metropolis of America, being far ahead of all competing cities; but none the less so, in its line, is Electric Bitters. From their real intrinsic value they have advanced to the front, and are now far ahead of all other remedies, positively curing where everything else fails. To try them is to be convinced. For sale by C. A. Wright & Co. at fifty cents per bottle.

Our Normal Condition.

The Peoria Journal accounts for depravity in this manner:

"Moral reformers teach, and it is popularly believed, that if a young man neither gambles nor drinks liquor, he is necessarily in a normal state of purity and goodness. The idea is that if a man, and especially a young man, is not addicted to either of the twin vices of the age, his moral condition must, of necessity, be that of virtue. The whole theory is an error, and it should be looked upon as one. Vice springs from the heart. It is not a creature of habit but a plant of natural growth. Not a day passes but that something occurs to prove this to be a fact. The most notable one of late is that of Richards, the Nebraska fiend. He was accused of ten murders, and just previous to his execution he confessed six. Yet when he met the death of a felon he was but twenty-three years old, and had never gambled or drank a glass of liquor in his life. How does the case of such a man agree with the theory that without bad habits men are good? The true theory is that the whole human race are naturally vicious, and that those who lead a life of virtue, do so by the practice of the most rigid self-restraint. The man or woman who cannot, or will not, deny themselves, and check and curb their appetites, passions, and desires, will go headlong to destruction, and whether they drink and gamble, or whether they do not, will make no perceptible difference, unless it be that the former will hasten the end."

TO THE AFFLICTED.

Since the introduction of Kellogg's Columbian Oil it has made more permanent cures and given better satisfaction on Kidney complaints and Rheumatism than any known remedy. Its continued series of wonderful cures in all climates has made it known as a safe and reliable agent to employ against all aches and pains, which are the forerunners of more serious disorders. It acts speedily and surely, always relieving suffering and often saving life. The protection it affords by its timely use on Rheumatism, kidney affection, and all aches and pains, wounds, cramping pains, cholera morbus, diarrhœa, coughs, colds, catarrh, and disorders among children, makes it an invaluable remedy to be kept always on hand in every home. No person can afford to be without it, and those who have once used it never will. It is absolutely certain in its remedial effects and will always cure when cures are possible. Call at C. A. Wright & Co's. and get a memorandum book giving more full details of the curative properties of this wonderful medicine.

When Did the Tomato Arrive?

Noticing an article in your paper containing an account of the first eating of the tomato in this country, I desire to correct your correspondent. In 1793, and several years subsequently, Capt. Phineas Eldridge resided on Carpenter street, west of Fourth street, Philadelphia. During 1798, a Frenchman named Nicalo left San Domingo with his family, consisting of wife and two children, and occupied the adjoining property. He brought with him several varieties of vegetable seed, which were planted, and after a lapse of time grew and bore fruit. Among them was a tomato, which he dresssed as a salad, and which was relished by Mr. Eldridge's family. The neighbors procured the seed and raised them as an ornament, having the impression that they were poisonous. Tomatoes were used in New Orleans as an article of food in 1812; they were sold in Philadelphia markets as early as 1829.—Boston Transcript.

Envied Beauty.

What is more handsome than a nice bright, clear complexion, showing the beauties of perfect health? All can enjoy these advantages by using Electric Bitters. Impure blood, and all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Urinary Organs are speedily cured. For nervousness and attendant ailments, they are a never failing remedy, and positively cure where all others fail. Try the Electric Bitters and be convinced of their wonderful merits. For sale by C. A. Wright & Co. at fifty cents a bottle.

KISSING.—My hand to a gentleman, my cheek to a friend, but my lips must be kept for my lover, says the French girl; and surely this rule is a wise one. Pretty girls among the French kiss each other on both cheeks. The German men put their arms about each other, and kiss the lips. The Italians kiss the lips, cheek and tip of the fair one's ear. So do the Spaniards, only more so. The inhabitants of the "awful North" also submit to and understand the osculatory process, as Lord Dufferin testifies, in his travels, of a Lap lady who undressed his chum, Fitzgerald, tucked him in bed, and gave him a hearty smack on the lips before retiring to his own couch. So all of the world believes in kissing.

DRUGGISTS SPEAK.—"When we are asked to recommend something to nourish and strengthen the blood we always say take Malt Bitters."

"Best blood purifier we know of."

"Rapidly displacing all other bitters."

For weakness, nervousness and the fruits of dissipation nothing like Malt Bitters."

"Women and children take them freely."

There is no greater every-day virtue than cheerfulness. This in mankind is like sunshine to the day, or gentle, renewing moisture to parched herbs. The light of a cheerful face diffuses itself, and communicates the happy spirit that inspires it.

SOUND ADVICE.—Don't wreck the constitution by taking quinine, arsenic and other powerful medicines, when the Lion Malaria and Liver Pad and Body and Foot plasters will positively cure the worst case of Chills and Malarial Fever. The cheapest treatment ever offered. The whole combined remedy for one dollar. For sale by Druggists.

Eating Too Much.

Most people eat too much. Thousands of men eat three hearty meals and several lunches a day, and yet wonder why they are lean and dyspeptic. "I have a good appetite, in fact am eating half the time, and still don't gain a pound, and there's Jones, plump as a porpoise on a third of what I eat." Children often eat more than some grown people, and yet look half starved, and indeed are literally so, while their parents, for want of a little knowledge of physiology, or hygiene, encourage them to eat more and oftener, ignorant of the fact that less food well digested would nourish the body and make it round and plump, while in the absence of digestion and assimilation, the more food the less nourishment, like filling a colinder with water, which is a difficult thing to do, and profitless if accomplished. The trouble is, few individuals know when to stop eating. The universal custom is to overeat. With some, as we have noted, the result is a morbid craving for more and more, while in other cases, there is nausea and lack of appetite—the consequence is the same on both—lack of nourishment. One eats too much, the other too little, and of course neither is well sustained. If this is true of adults, what folly to pretend that an infant, or a child at any age, should be a law unto himself as to quantity and frequency. It is the duty of parents not only to restrict their own appetites, but those of the little ones confided to their care.

Care of the Eyes.

In order to preserve the eyesight, some rules concerning light should be observed—particularly when the light is artificial. If a shade is used on the lamp or burner, (it should, by preference, be of ground or "milk" glass, never of colored glass), the light may stand directly in front of the body and the work be allowed to lie under the shade, which will protect the eyes from the glare of the flame. If no shade is used, the back should be turned to the source of light, which ought to fall over the left shoulder. The same rule applies in the management of daylight. In this case the light should come from behind and slightly above, and fall directly on the work, whence it is reflected to the eye. It should never fall directly in the face. Even during sleep, this question of light is of some importance. As a rule, the room during sleeping hours should be dark; and, in particular, care should be taken to avoid sleeping opposite a window where, opening the eyes in the morning, a flood of strong light will fall on them. Even the strongest eyes are, after the repose of the night, more or less sensitive to the impression of intense light. The eyes must have time to accustom themselves to the stimulus. Particularly should this care be observed during convalescence from illness, when the eyes generally lose some power.

Reading with a Purpose.

There is a great deal too much reading at random; of this book to-day and that to-morrow, with no careful method governing the selection, and no high purpose gathering up the results into a definite good. One cannot read all the books that are published; one cannot even know by name the books that have been written; the only possible achievement is to adopt some eclectic system and abide by it rigorously; to do a little reading upon a few choice topics, and do it thoroughly and well. It is an excellent way to fix upon some epoch in history, or some noted figure in biography, or some important department of science or art, and to govern one's reading by its requirements. Concentrate fact, fiction and fancy all upon the theme. Illuminate all parts of it by every aid that can be brought to bear upon it, and make it a life-work to master it in all its aspects and relations. Such a course will give constant interest to a pursuit, which even with those who are fondest of it may sometimes nag. It will economize thought and time; and it will enrich the mind with the best fruits of study.

Utilizing Old Fruit Cans.

Perhaps one of the most appropriate uses of an old fruit-can that can be devised, is to make it contribute to the growth of new fruit to fill new cans. This is done in the following manner: The can is pierced with one or more pin-holes, and then sunk in the earth near the roots of the strawberry or tomato or other plants. The pin-holes are to be of such size that when the can is filled with water the fluid can only escape into the ground very slowly. Thus a quart can, properly arranged, will extend its irrigation to the plant through a period of several days; the can is then refilled. Practical trials of this method of irrigation leave no doubt of its success. Plants thus watered flourish and yield the most bounteous returns throughout the longest droughts. In all warm localities, where water is scarce, the planting of old fruit cans, as here indicated, will be found profitable as a regular gardening operation.

Botel Tobago.

Botel Tobago is an island in the South Seas which has lately been visited by a party of the United States naval officers. They were surveying a rock east of the South Cape of Formosa, and called at this island. They found a curious race of Malay stock. These aborigines did not know what money was good for. Nor had they ever used tobacco or rum. They gave the officers goats and pigs for tin pots and brass buttons, and hung around the vessel all day in their canoes waiting for a chance to dive for something thrown overboard. They wore clouts only, ate taro and yams, and had axes, spears and knives made of common iron. Their canoes were ornamented with geometrical lines. They wore the beards of goats and small shells as ornaments. Such is the account of these strange people by Dr. Siegfried, in a letter read at the last meeting of the Philadelphia Academy of Natural Sciences.

THE CAVE OF CACAHUAMILPA.—Those Americans who visited Mexico on invitation of the Mexican government, probably saw more of the wonders of that country than any previous travelers of recent times. Some of the excursionists left the main party in the city of Mexico, and made a trip into the state of Guerrero, for the purpose of exploring the cave of Cacahuamilpa. They were the first Americans to visit it, and the description by a correspondent who formed one of the party, conveys the impression that it far surpasses the famous Mammoth Cave of Kentucky, the formations being quite as remarkable, and no limit having as yet been found to it.

Is a compound of the virtues of sarsaparilla, stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, with the iodide of potash and iron, all powerful blood-making, blood-cleansing, and life-sustaining elements. It is the purest, safest, and most effectual alterative medicine known or available to the public. The sciences of medicine and chemistry have never produced so valuable a remedy, nor one so potent to cure all diseases resulting from impure blood. It cures Scrofula and all scrofulous diseases, Erysipelas, Rose, or St. Anthony's Fire, Pimples and Face-grubs, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scald-head, Ring-worm, Ulcers, Sores, Rheumatism, Mercurial Disease, Neuralgia, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, and General Debility.

By its searching and cleansing qualities it purges out the foul corruptions which contaminate the blood and cause derangement and decay. It stimulates and enlivens the vital functions, promotes energy and strength, restores and preserves health, and imparts new life and vigor throughout the whole system. No sufferer from any disease which arises from impurity of the blood need despair who will give AYER'S SARSAPARILLA a fair trial.

It is folly to experiment with the numerous low-priced mixtures, of clean materials, and of doubtful medicinal virtues, offered as blood-purifiers, while disease becomes more firmly seated. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA is a concentrate of such concentrated curative power that it is by far the best, cheapest, and most reliable blood-purifier known. Physicians know its composition, and prescribe it. It has been widely used for forty years, and has won the unqualified confidence of millions whom it has benefited.

DEATH OF JAMES A. STACY

When the HERALD went to press on Thursday afternoon of last week, it was thought that Mayor Stacy's condition was improving, but a change for the worse took place that same night and he rapidly failed from that time until 12:45 o'clock on Saturday afternoon, when he quietly and without a struggle crossed over the river into the great Beyond.

He had been ill for several weeks, the disease being somewhat protracted, but owing to his recent constitution and usual good health the friends felt confident of an ultimate recovery, until a few days before his death. On Monday, the 4th of April, he showed signs of great bodily weakness and on Tuesday he was much worse, his mind, having become affected. On Wednesday he failed rapidly, but Thursday forenoon he appeared better, and the family were again hopeful. That night, however, an unfavorable change took place, and he rapidly sank until the hour of his death on Saturday afternoon, April 9th.

James Alonzo Stacy was born in Tecumseh, March 4th, 1851. His boyhood and youth were passed in this village. He and his brother Phon, Phon and Lon as they were familiarly called, were inseparable companions. They went to school together, their playhood trials were borne together, and they shared each other's childish joys. In the summer of 1871 their paths began to diverge. Lon was selected to assist his father in Adrian, and hence it was decided that he should complete his education in that city. He entered the Adrian High school in that year, and graduated in June, 1873. In the following September, he entered the literary department of the University of Michigan, but at the end of two years he abandoned that course and began reading law with his father in Adrian. He afterwards completed a full law course at Ann Arbor, graduating therefrom in March 1876. During his last year in law school he acted as President of his class. Immediately after his return to Adrian he was admitted to the bar, and in April following he received the appointment of City Attorney. In April, 1879, he was re-appointed to the same position. In the spring of 1880 he was elected Mayor, and died only two days before the expiration of his term of office.

By this sad visitation of Providence a brilliant and hopeful life has been blotted out. It does not become us to extol his virtues too highly. Of his standing in his chosen profession of his official record in positions of public trust, of his social qualities and intellectual pre-eminence others have spoken. Their words are a healing balm to the family circle, which has been so ruthlessly broken. But it was within the sacred circle of home that his virtues shone with the brightest luster. None can fully know his filial devotion, his spartan-like tenacity in performing every task allotted to him, his untiring faithfulness to kindred and friends, except the aged father and mother, the stricken sister and the brothers who followed his remains to the tomb. Brother and Son. Hallowed words! In his life he typified the noblest ideal of this relationship. Those who sorrow here must fight on without his manly arm and intellect to aid them. But our loss is his gain. He has gone to meet poor Phon. For a few weary years their paths ran asunder, but they will now journey through the realms of the Hereafter side by side.

The resolutions passed by different organizations of which he was a member, and the account of his funeral obsequies, are hereto appended, condensed from our Adrian exchanges.

THE FUNERAL OBSEQUIES.

The funeral took place last Tuesday afternoon at half past one o'clock, at Judge Stacy's residence, corner of Clinton and Toledo streets, in the city of Adrian. Notwithstanding the inclement weather, there was a large and creditable public display, and a special train from Tecumseh conveyed many friends.

[illegible]

material extended the whole length of each side. A richly carved plate bore the inscription:

Born March 4th, 1851.
JAMES A. STACY.
Died April 9th, 1881.

THE FLORAL DECORATIONS.

Many, and rare, were these tender tributes to the memory of a former friend, brother, and companion. The casket was placed in the front parlor, which from an early hour was thrown open to those who desired to view the remains.

A large array of choice carnations and tea roses was presented by the Masonic Council. A bouquet of white calla lilies with a broad white satin ribbon by Miss Minnie Bundy. A floral star and crescent, by the resident members of the Adrian Delta Phi fraternity. A bouquet filled with flowers and ferns by the J. de V. club. A cross and floral pillow, by the classmates, Hattie Crowell, Florence Tyler and Minnie Van Brunt. A basket of carnations and ivy leaves, by [illegible], carnations and violets, by Miss Lena Whitney. A beautiful floral pillow from your correspondent in Tecumseh. The mantle and fire board were [illegible] with evergreens. Baskets of flowers from A. W. Smith, and Miss Lydia Knapp were among the offerings.

In one of the corners of the room was a massive bank of growing flowers in bloom. Above these upon the walls were hung four pictures, placed there for the occasion. Three of them—that of "Lon," of his mother "Phon," and of his old friend Clem. Eaton, forming a triangular group, and the fourth, that of Will Godfrey, a former schoolmate of the deceased, hung above. All of these gentlemen are now dead. Many other flowers were placed in different parts of the room, such as bouquets and cut flowers in vases, a detailed description of which our space does not permit.

THE SERVICES.

The services began promptly at half past one o'clock, and were conducted by Rev. H. Shepard, pastor of the Universalist church of Tecumseh. A selection of scripture was read, after which the choir of Christ's church of Adrian, composed of Mr. J. E. Everse, Mr. H. M. Coe, Mr. W. Everse, Mrs. W. R. Mumford and Miss Jennie Mills, sang Whittier's beautiful hymn, beginning, "I long for household voices gone." Mr. Shepard then delivered a brief but solemn and impressive address.

At the conclusion the choir sang Wm. Cullen Bryant's hymn, "Blessed are they that mourn."

At the conclusion of the services, the remains were borne forth by T. J. Navin, T. M. Hunter, D. A. Bixby, W. S. Gardner, Thomas MacFarlane, J. H. Goff, A. W. Smith, and R. H. Bowman, of Ann Arbor, and the procession, under command of Marshal Stearns, marched to the solemn strains of "Nearer my God, to Thee," in the following order:

Knights Templar Band.
Jole de Vie Club.
Adrian Light Guard.
Adrian Fire Department.
German Workingmen's Society.
Bohemian Workingmen's Society.
Its Mayor.
Members of the Bar.
Adrian Lodge No. 8, I. O. O. F.
Clergy.
Common Council.
Hearse.
Mourners.
Citizens in Carriages.

At the cemetery a short address was read by Past Grand Stearns, which was followed by prayer by the chaplain of the order, Asa Aldrich, and singing by the choir. The depositing of evergreens ended the ceremonies.

The remains were placed in the receiving vault, and at some convenient time in the future they will be conveyed to Tecumseh and deposited in the family lot in our own cemetery side by side with those of his brother "Phon."

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

The deceased was a member of several societies and organizations, all of which took action showing their appreciation of his manly qualities, and their sympathy for his afflicted friends.

The Lenawee County Bar held a special meeting on Saturday evening last, which was largely attended.—Feeling and appropriate remarks were made by the attorneys present, after which the following resolutions were adopted:

BAR RESOLUTIONS.

Again we are called upon to mourn the death of one of our number taken from us in his early manhood.

James A. Stacy died in the city of Adrian, April 9th, 1881.

Sincerely lamenting his loss, deeply sympathizing with a bereaved family and public, we, his professional associates, desire to place on record a tribute of our esteem, respect and affection.

Young in years, he had proven himself to be a lawyer of large attainments, of a comprehensive mind and of acute perceptions. Industrious and untiring in a profession which he loved and which his natural abilities eminently qualified him for, he was fast attaining a high rank therein. A ready thinker, possessed of a keen, yet genial wit, and a cheerful, sunny disposition, he has been cut off just as his young manhood was promising a career of large usefulness to himself, his friends and the public.

An able, fearless and honorable adversary, an earnest student, a courteous gentleman, a genial companion, a warm and sympathizing friend; in all these characters we remember him, and so remembering him the bar of Lenawee mourns.

Resolved, That it is with feelings of the sincerest sorrow we learn of the death of one of our number, the late James A. Stacy. That we extend to the family and friends of the deceased our most sincere sympathy. That in token thereof we attend his funeral in a body.

That our president is directed to pronounce this tribute of respect to the circuit court for this county at its next session, and request the court to spread the same upon its journal, and that a copy thereof be transmitted to the family of the deceased, and published in each of the county papers.

COUNCIL RESOLUTIONS.

WHEREAS, Death has again invaded at the portals of our city, to claim for his own the chief executive officer of the municipality therein;

Resolved, That in the death of James A. Stacy, our honored and beloved mayor, Adrian sees an upright, able official, an enterprising, active and worthy citizen.

Resolved, That our dead mayor by his uniform courtesy, his genial good nature, his sound judgment, his manly dignity, and his earnest efforts for an honorable, worthy administration of the high office, endeared himself to the citizens of Adrian, and won their confidence and respect; that he was loved by the young, esteemed by the old, and honored by all.

Resolved, That as an official he ever did his duty conscientiously and fearlessly, and without swerving from right; that as a citizen he was ever respected for his integrity, his high sense of honor, his warm generous disposition, and his social good nature.

Resolved, That to the stricken parents and family, thus plunged into grief by their sad affliction, and whose hearts are crushed down with sorrow, we extend our earnest, heartfelt sympathy, and that we will attend his funeral in a body.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the journal of this council, and a copy thereof, engrossed by the recorder, be transmitted, under the seal of the city, to the family of the deceased.

I. O. O. F. RESOLUTIONS.

James A. Stacy, Past Grand of Adrian lodge No. 8, I. O. O. F., died April 9th, 1881.

Although he has gone from among us, he cannot forget us, and all those with whom he associated will ever remember his kind and pleasant manner. He was ever active and faithful to the principles of our beloved order. Ready at all times to give a helping hand to others, he lived not for himself alone, and will ever live in the hearts of those whose hands he has strengthened and whose hearts he has made glad.

Our brother has left behind him the high record of a good lawyer, a patriotic citizen, a true friend and genuine Odd Fellow. In public life he was wise and honest. In private life he was true to his associates. The death of such a man is indeed a great loss.

Our genial, warm-hearted brother having held the high office of Mayor of the city of Adrian for almost a year, which office of honor and trust he had so acceptably filled, was about to surrender to another, when he was called away to a city whose Builder and Maker is God.

Resolved, By Adrian Lodge No. 8, that we tender to the afflicted family of our deceased brother our sincere sympathy in their great bereavement, and assure them that we share in their loss and affliction.

Resolved, That the lodge room be draped for the space of 30 days.

Resolved, That the secretary of this lodge be instructed to furnish a copy of this record and of the action of the lodge, under seal, to the family of the deceased brother, and that a copy be also published in the papers of this city.

G. W. WESTERMAN,
T. N. HAWORTH,
JOHN Q. ADAMS,
Committee.

THE JOLIE DE VIE CLUB.

Resolved, That this club attend the funeral of friend and comrade Mayor J. A. Stacy in a body; that the club room be draped in mourning for the period of thirty days; that a committee of three be appointed to procure an appropriate floral decoration as a token of appreciation and remembrance, the same to be paid for out of the club treasury; that a committee of three be appointed. Mayor Navin to the chairman, to draft suitable resolutions of condolence and respect, the same to be spread upon the journal of this club, to be framed and hung in the club rooms and published in the city papers. Also that a portrait of our deceased member be procured, suitably framed and hung in the club rooms.

To the memory of Hon. James A. Stacy:

We, the members of the Jolie de Vie club, assembled together for the purpose of taking action appropriately indicating the heartfelt sorrow and unfeigned grief of each of the remaining members, occasioned by the death of our late comrade, Hon. James A. Stacy, do place upon our records this testimonial of respect and esteem.

Our brother "Lon" was one of the very first members of this organization. Always interested in fostering the best interests, and the welfare of his brothers. Possessing in a peculiar manner, social qualities of the highest order. High-minded, courteous, with a frank, open countenance, and a generous, kind and loving heart; a charity that knew no bounds; his untimely death will cause a vacant place at our gatherings to which no time or change can reconcile us. By his natural abilities, coupled with a thorough education and unwearied industry, and by those other characteristics we have described, he fitted himself at the early age of twenty-seven years to fill the highest executive office of our city, of which on the 5th day of April, A. D. 1880, he became the mayor, and administered the affairs of our city in a broad and liberal spirit, with good judgment and sound discretion, so that his death filled all classes of our citizens with deep grief and sorrow. In short, he was one to whom the elements were so kindly mixed that nature might stand up and say to all the world, this is a man."

We will drape our club room, for the usual time, in mourning. We will wear the badge of sorrow for our brother. But we can hardly hope, with all this, to express our grief, or to show our sympathy for the stricken and loving parents, whose sorrow is almost too sacred for the expression of sympathy.

THOS. J. NAVIN,
D. A. BIXBY,
W. S. GARDNER,
Committee on Resolutions.

LAKE ST. MEMORIAL.

In memory of James A. Stacy, class of '73, Adrian high school, who departed this life, April 9, 1881.

The class of seventy-three mourns the loss of a faithful friend—one whom we were proud to claim as a classmate. James A. Stacy was true to the good name of the institution while pursuing with us the studies of the Adrian high school. Now graduates, the one with peers of honor among our fellow citizens, it will be pleasant for us, his school and classmates, to remember that he always and every inch a manly gentleman.

We unitedly decorate our dead with tender sorrow, and we tender to the bereaved family our deepest sympathy.

The United States Consul at Basle, Switzerland, has transmitted to Secretary Blaine the results of his investigation in to the circumstances which led to the excitement in France and Switzerland over American pork. It appears that the ostensible cause of the decree of interdiction by the French Government, was the outbreak of trichinosis in a family which it was at first supposed had eaten American pork, but now is officially conceded to have eaten the raw flesh of a home-bred pig. There is no instance on record of any person in Europe being injured in health by eating American hams or pork. From Nov. 1, 1880, to Jan. 16, 1881, 36,351,000 pounds of lard, and 137,987,500 pounds of pork were imported from America into Great Britain, where the inspection is most rigid, and in all this quantity no instance of infection was discovered. At Basle, after two years' experience, the inspection of American pork was discontinued as unnecessary.

THE members of Co. C were very much surprised to hear of the resignation of Al. Lawrence as 1st Lieutenant, but their surprise was overcome by regrets. Al. has been an officer of the company nearly since its organization and has always been a zealous worker for its best interests, sparing neither time nor trouble. The company, by his resignation, loses an excellent drill master; but it is hoped that he may be made to take second thought and retain his commission.—The resignation was as follows:

Tecumseh, April 7, 1881.

To the Adjutant General,
State of Michigan:

SIR:—I hereby tender my resignation as 1st Lieutenant, Co. C, 1st Regiment M. S. T., not feeling able to give my time at present.

Your Obedient Servant,
ALBERT D. LAWRENCE.

DAVE MACHAM has got a fine trotter.

H. E. STOUT'S Knitting Works promise to be a decided success.

WM. MCCOWEN has a new adv. this week announcing his opening.

EASTER services next Sunday morning at the Universalist church at the usual time of service.

MESSRS. AVIS & RANDOLPH have purchased the steam flouring mill and taken possession. The gentlemen are active and energetic business men and we bespeak for them a good patronage.

THE young fellows arrested for stabbing Dr. Hause were brought to Tecumseh last Tuesday by Sheriff Bidwell for their examination. One of the principal witnesses being absent on account of sickness the examination was placed for May 2nd, till which time the young men will abide with our Sheriff. The evidence against them is rather strong and they will probably turn out to be the men whom the officers want.

Vennor's map of the weather for April is not very attractive. It includes a snow fall on the fourth which came on the 3d. But by the 15th he kindly permits us to look for spring to be opened in earnest. About the 20th we are actually to get warm weather, with thunder storms on the 24th and 25th. The month will end wet and cold, but on the whole, as if taking compassion on us, he says it "will be like a May month."

There is not one person in a hundred who is aware of the fact that there is a law against profane swearing. Like many other laws however it is obsolete. No one has the moral courage to enforce it. The statute provides that "any person who has arrived at the age of discretion, who shall profanely curse or damn, or swear by the name of God, Jesus Christ or the Holy Ghost," shall, on conviction, be fined not more than $5, nor less than $1; but prosecution therefor must be commenced within five days after the commission of the offense.

RICHARD CALDWELL and Gideon D. Perry, while driving into Adrian last Thursday morning met with a serious accident. Just as they crossed the White Mill bridge the horse took fright at the pile of ice along the road and upturned the buggy. The buggy rolled over the steep embankment throwing the occupants out; Mr. Caldwell struck upon his head, causing concussion of the brain, so that he was insensible. Mr. Perry was not so seriously hurt but that he was able to catch the horse and obtain aid. Medical assistance was called, and both were found to have a number of injuries. Mr. Caldwell remained insensible for some hours, being removed immediately to his home here. He is now improving and will soon be all right. Mr. Perry was not hurt so badly that he was confined to the house.

M. ADEL WHITENACK.

The death of M. Adel Whitenack, aged 22 yrs, 6 months, and 2 days, as noticed in our last week's issue, occured last Thursday morning, April 7. She had been ill for a number of weeks past. While attending to her school duties in Ypsilanti, she caught a severe cold; this became gradually worse so that finally she was confined to her room. Not recovering from the effects, but growing worse, at the end of two weeks she was removed to her home in Tecumseh. Here the illness soon took the form of quick consumption. No medical treatment could relieve her and slowly until her death, she neared the portals that open into the Elysian life beyond.

Adela was a graduate of the Tecumseh High School, and being impelled by ambition and love for knowledge entered the State Normal school. A student of commendable diligence, she made rapid progress in her course and would have graduated this year. But in addition, she possessed womanly virtues far superior to scholarly diligence, that drew many friends who now mourn her loss from their midst. And it was with many tearful eyes and pensive sobs that the last sad funeral tributes were paid to her memory last Saturday morning.

THE FAIR.

The Art Loan Exhibition, conducted by the ladies of the Presbyterian society was a decided success. The Opera House was very tastily ornamented with the different exhibits, consisting of flowers, pictures, articles of antiquity and curiosity, and fancy work. The collection was large and contained articles of considerable interest. The exhibition commenced last week Thursday, and closed this week Monday. During this time many persons visited the fair, much to their satisfaction. There were some six hundred different articles of interest upon exhibition, every thing being an object of interest, so that we refrain from particularizing. During the afternoon and evening refreshments were served by the society, the tables always being well filled. Each evening a program of interesting exercises well carried out was presented.

The most interesting feature of the exercises was the Broom Brigade, and merited especial attention. The company was made up of four sets of fours, of young ladies, the flag bearer, and drummer, commanded by Mrs. Al. Lawrence. Their armor was that before which few men have the reckless courage to stand, and under which many heroes have fallen, the broom. They went through the manual of arms with a precision that would cause many a line of old veterans to blush for their inferiority. The drill was unique and perfect, consisting of many difficult and fancy movements. The wheeling of the lines showed the superior excellence of their drill. The music was essentially martial, but the drummer decidedly not so, being Allie Gray, who surprised the spectators as much by her drumming as her comrades did by their drilling. Al. Lawrence had the young ladies under his tutelage previous to the exhibition and a share of the praise is due to him and to their commander, Mrs. Al. Lawrence.

The society exerted themselves to make the affair a success and were well pleased with the result. The money will be turned into the fund for refitting their lecture room which they intend to enlarge and build a second story for a parlor.

Deerfield Record: Two young men were arrested last week, near Clinton on suspicion of being the assaulters of Dr. E. Hause, of Tecumseh, on the 29th ult., and afterwards released, no evidence being found against them. It has since been discovered that these two boys were seen to have in their possession a dagger similar to the one used in assaulting the doctor, and they are now under arrest again. These two boys, Will Carroll and Link Kessler—were former residents of this town, and are known as tough cases.

THE FALL OF A BUILDING.

Clinton News: On Thursday evening last, the frame work for Bainbridge & Hause's new store room was nearly all in place, and workmen were loosening the stays to plumb the building, when one stay too many was loosened, and the entire structure trembled, swayed and suddenly fell forward with a crash across the sidewalk. At the time of the accident some seven or eight men were at work on the top and inside of the building. Benjamin Woodward started to run out of the building, but while climbing over a pile of joists, he was caught by the falling timbers and held there until released by by-standers. His nose was broken, his ankle badly wrenched, his back injured, and his body internally and externally so badly bruised and crushed that he will be confined to his bed for some time to come. Edward Coffin stood in front of the building when it began to fall and started to run, but was struck by the falling timbers and thrown violently against a wagon which stood in the road, dislocating his right shoulder and scratching him considerably. He is now doing well and hopes soon to be on our streets again. The other workmen on top and inside of the building escaped serious injury, although a son of Mr. Coffin only escaped by falling down where a space was left between the timbers and the first floor by reason of the timbers being held up by the piled lumber in front. All hands looked pretty pale for a few moments, however, and it was indeed an almost miraculous escape that no one was killed. The team which stood in the street in front of the building, ran away, and were stopped near the old cemetery without doing serious damage. The damage done to the building did not exceed fifty or sixty dollars.

DIED.

KNIGHT—Miss Mary Knight adopted daughter of B. L. & A. F. Baxter died of pneumonia, at the residence of the adopted parents in this village on Wednesday morning, April 13th, 1881, aged 20 years. Funeral at 10½ o'clock, A. M., April 15.

MILLER—On Saturday, April 2nd, in Macon, Stephen V. Miller, in the seventy-seventh year of his age. The deceased was born in Ovid, Seneca Co., N. Y., on the 30th of June, 1804. In the vicinity of his birthplace he remained until his twenty-eighth year. At that time, viz., in 1832, he removed to Michigan, then still a territory, and located first at Ridgeway, Lenawee Co., having bought 160 acres of land there from the government. Four years later he moved to Russell's Corners in the township of Macon, remaining there one year. Then he settled upon the farm on which the present family residence is located.

While living in New York, on the 29th of December, 1825, he was married to Martha Van Vleet, who survives him. They have had ten children, seven sons and three daughters. Of these there are three sons and one daughter still living, viz: Mr. L. Chas Miller, editor of the Howell Republican; Mr. Voorhees Miller, attorney at law, at North Branch; Prof. Romeyn Miller, of Constantine; and Mrs. J. J. Clarkson, of Macon.

The deceased was highly esteemed, as he was endowed with many excellent qualities of mind and heart. Kind at home, useful in the community, generous to the poor, a servant to whom we trust, the Master could say, "Well done, enter thou into the joy of the lord." But during the last years of his life he was almost completely disabled, having been stricken by paralysis fourteen years ago. Of late therefore he has been patiently abiding his release, or as he expressed it, "only waiting for the coming of the Lord." The funeral services took place on Tuesday, the 5th inst., at the late home of the departed, and at the church in Ridgeway village. The discourse was preached by his pastor, Rev. J. A. De Spelder. Many friends and neighbors were present to render their last tribute of esteem to one whom they cannot soon forget, and by the affectionate hands of sons and grandsons, Mr. Miller was laid to rest. "His works do follow him."

Prof. Edward Brigham, who is traveling abroad making scientific collections for Hillsdale and Albion college has sent his father, E. This season, as all Bay Cityans know, has been very backward in breaking up. Last year at this time most of the saw mills on the river were running. Now the prospect are that it will be May before they will be allowed to start. This will place them a month behind last year, and in order to manufacture the necessary amount of lumber to supply the demand, it is thought that a number of mills will be obliged to run night and day.

At 4 o'clock Tuesday morning the residence lately purchased by Phineas Smith at East Tawas was discoverd to be on fire. His family had not yet moved in on account of some repairs he was making. The night before he had placed a stove in the front room, but did not build any fire on account of one length of pipe lacking, to enter the chimney in the second story. The general supposition is that some tramp entered the house, filled the stove with shavings and thus set fire to the upper part of the building. There is another theory, of a boy being the incendiary. A resident of this town has a very unruly boy, whom, it is claimed, he tied up to the fence on a cold night and left him there till morning, at least so says the lad; and Monday night very late he was turned out of one of the stores and told to go home, but refused, and said he could find a place better than that. It is now a question where he slept; some think he went into Mr. Smith's house and kindled the fire.

Sault Ste. Marie News: Two divers are at work in the canal preparing the lower miter sill. Seth Newcome wears one diving suit and Theophile Goodreau the other. Close attention and prompt action on the part of the attendants saved Goodreau from what might have been a serious calamity. As he was down in his suit at the bottom of the canal, boring away in the timber, he suddenly found himself jerked away by the safety rope and drawn up through the water with great rapidity. He kicked and struggled to no good, and when he reached the surface his head struck a cake of ice with such force as to nearly smash in his helmet. He was jerked to the side of the lock, and numerous hands seized him and drew him out while the glass face piece was unscrewed. He had plenty of air, was all right as far as he knew, and was very mad at the boys for handling him in such a sudden, rough, and undignified manner without his consent; but when he discovered that the valve to the air-pump which supplied him had broken and in about a minute more his wind would have been totally cut off, he became somewhat appeased.

THE POSTOFFICE CLERKS.

Postmaster General James has appointed a commission to make a thorough investigation of the organization of the clerical force of the department in order to insure harmonious reappointment at work, an advantageous redistribution of officers and employes, and increased efficiency of the service.

OUTLAWRY IN HAVANA.

Commodore Rhoads, of the United States steamer Yantic, in a letter to the navy department, dated March 30, says: "Havana is healthy, but lawlessness prevails, and noon is restricted. Murder and robberies are of daily and nightly occurrence, and recently the 10th consul was nearly murdered by ruffians."

SENT ORDERS.

Gen. Merritt, who has been on Gen. Sheridan's staff for years, has been ordered to join his regiment at White river, and Chaplain Mullins has been ordered to take charge of education in the army. Army officers say that Secretary Lincoln has expressed an intention to revolutionize staff appointments. He thinks some officers have been enjoying fat and easy berths too long and it is fair to give them a taste of service and let those who have seen hard service perform staff duty a while.

WINDOM'S POLICY.

Secretary Windom says he has concluded what course to pursue relative to maturing bonds, but could not make it public until completed. He added, however, that he would give the matter out for publication at the earliest possible moment. Beyond this nothing official can be learned. Various rumors are afloat as to the nature of this decision, purporting to have originated in official circles; but Secretary Windom says he has not indicated and will not indicate the course he will pursue until ready for publication.

REFORM IN CIVIL SERVICE.

Secretary Kirkwood has made selections for the positions created by the last Congress. Of new appointments eight will be examiners at a salary of $2,000 per annum and the remainder, about one hundred and twenty-five in number, are for positions as clerks, copyists and messengers, at salaries ranging from $720 to $1,800 per annum. The appointments are temporary, or rather probationary, and permanency will depend upon the ability and industry manifested by the appointee during the first three months of service.

THE INTERNATIONAL BANK.

J. B. Hawley and Emery A. Storrs, of Chicago, have made arguments before the commissioner of internal revenue in behalf of the International bank of that city. It appears the report rendered to the department by the bank relative to its capital subject to taxation differs materially from the report made to the Chicago Clearing House association, and makes considerable difference in the taxes which have been paid by the bank, and what Commissioner Raum considers should have been paid. The gentlemen admitted that there was a balance due the government, but the difference which exists between them and the commissioner is with regard to the amount. No conclusion was reached.

SMOCKS OF CORRUPTION.

Considerable excitement is caused here by the discovery of what may prove to be an attempt to defraud the Government by the important omission in the publication of notice for proposals. The matter is laid at the door of Joseph T. Bender, the financial clerk of the Indian Bureau, who has charge of notices for proposals for furnishing beef for the Indians. The usual notices recently appeared in Western papers, without the clause providing for deductions on inferior cattle, and the omission has been reported to Secretary Kirkwood, who ordered the notices withdrawn. It is estimated that, had the omission been unnoticed, the government would have sustained a loss of over $500,000. The Interior Department will thoroughly investigate the matter. The defense that the omission was an oversight scarcely holds, since the error occurs twice in each notice.

MAHONE AND STEPHENS.

The "Little Giant" of the Senate, Mahone, soon after his entrance into the Senate with Hill, of Georgia, called on Representative A. H. Stephens, and the champion light-weights of the two Houses of Congress fell to comparing notes. Mr. Stephens says he turns the scales at 95 pounds, and never was heavier. Mahone claims 109 pounds. The latter remarked that Mr. Stephens looked larger than himself, but the other modestly replied that it was all clothes. While the Representative wears his very loose, the Senator wears his as close-fitting as possible. His coat sleeves are as tight as those of an ultra-fashionable lady of the present day, and his trousers are pleated in at the waist and at the back, while the legs taper down to the ankles, showing a pair of red stockings as their wearer moves. Mr. Stephens expresses great disgust for the corruption which is constantly made manifest in politics, and characterizes the contest between the parties as merely "a battle between the ins and the outs." As for bargaining, he says that it shall a trade, implied, if not expressed, in every election, from that of a constable up to the highest elective office. He predicts that the great contest which is to come in this country is to be that between the tax-payers and the consumers, and he proposes to take the side of the former.

THE FARRAGUT STATUE.

Orders have been issued by the navy department detailing the naval representation at the ceremonies of the unveiling of the statue of Admiral Farragut on the 25th inst. The crews of the following vessels will take part: Vandalia, Alliance, Kearsarge, Portsmouth, Constitution, and Saratoga. The Saratoga is now here, and the others are on their way to this rendezvous. The Vandalia, Alliance, and Kearsarge are of the North Atlantic station; the Portsmouth, Constitution, and Saratoga are training-ships. The crews of all these vessels will be organized into a division for the purpose of the review after the vessels arrive here. The details for officers of the division will also be made at that time. The marines on board each vessel will take part in the ceremonies. They, together with the marines at the barracks here, at Norfolk, and at Annapolis, will form a division in the parade. They will be under the command of the Commander of marines. Mrs. Farragut is in the city, and will remain until after the unveiling, the guest of President Garfield.

RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE.

For the purpose of increasing efficiency of the railway mail service by defining the duties and adjusting the pay of the employes in accordance with the work performed by them, an order has been issued by the Postmaster General, fixing the pay of employes where only one is needed on any line, at a sum not to exceed $1,000; where two are needed, one at $1,300 and one at $1,500; where a third is needed, his pay to be $1,000, and each additional one not to exceed $900 per annum. On lines where papers are worked, salaries will be the same, but there will be two employes at $1,150.

Much dissatisfaction has heretofore been created by the discrepancy in the pay of employes doing the same or similar work. The effect of this order will be to put all employes doing the same work upon an equality. It will necessitate the education of those incompetent to do the work assigned them, and the promotion of deserving employes in lower grades. The order also provides for long-lay assignments of employes by superintendents in cases of emergency, with provisions for readjustment of salary according to the above, and for new appointments on six months' probation at a salary of $900 per annum. No more employes will be detailed for clerical duty than the exigency of the service absolutely requires; no employes will be assigned to assist the chief head clerk except in special cases, and then the grade of the employe so assigned shall not exceed $1,000 per annum.

The new order goes into effect May 1, and it is expected that, under its workings, the railway mail service will be equal to any in the world.

HEAD NOTES.

The compliment paid by gentlemen attending the recent financial conference in New York, namely, to extend the maturity of 6 per cent. bonds at a lower rate of interest, is very generally approved by Treasury officials (with the exception of the Secretary, who will not express an opinion on the subject) as the most feasible plan which the government can pursue. The Secretary is not required to give notice before calling outstanding 6 per cent. bonds for redemption. These bonds amount in the aggregate to $195,620,000, and are redeemable June 30 next, after which date any that may be called will cease to draw interest. The officials in favor of the bonds at a lower rate argue the Secretary might issue a call for the redemption of say $100,000,000 of these bonds, June 30 next and make it optional with the holders of the bonds so called to present them for redemption or have them extended at a rate of interest not exceeding 4.5. A large majority, if not all the holders of the bonds would, it is plausibly, prefer the latter course. The section with regard to the sixes, according to the plan detailed advocating it, should be followed immediately by calls for payment of outstanding 5's. Subjoined to the absence of sixes (which will be the collector's aggest, should be made void bond, so that persons desiring to continue their bonds until Congress passes a funding bill at a lower rate of interest, rather than have them redeemed, may do so by complying with the conditions necessary within a specified time. The aggregate amount of 5 per cents redeemable May 1, is $153,480,850. Should this method prove successful it would not be necessary to sell any bonds whatever. While nothing can be said officially as to the course which will be adopted, there is good authority for stating this plan is receiving thorough consideration, and the indications appear to be in favor of its adoption.

Texts for Sermons or Essays.

When you hear a young man say that "the world owes him a living," you can make up your mind that he owes the world's people enough to balance the debt.

The Bible does not say much about how the men named in its record died, nor what disease caused their death; but it has a good deal to say of the way they lived.

Wisdom by impulse is to be trusted by those only who have habitually used their reason to the full extent of its powers in forming the heart and cultivating the judgment.

A man who has little or nothing to do with other men on terms of open and free equality needs the native sense of five to behave himself only with a fair average of propriety.

Never chide your husband before company, nor prattle abroad of affairs at home. What passes between two people is much easier made up before than after it has taken air.

Beware of drunkeness. It impairs the understanding, wastes the estate, banishes the reputation, consumes the body, and renders a man of the brightest parts the common jest of an insignificant clown.

Some people are very glad to have you pray with them after the doctor has looked seriously at them, but with returning health they smile at their own fears and your expressed desire for them to lead a better life.

If we live rightly here we shall pass into the other world to live happily there. —Hence we need not mourn the absence of friends who have gone, any more than we should mourn the absence of friends who have gone to another country and are enjoying life there.

There are a great many people who would like to be relieved of drudgery. Coleridge's words, or better, the gospel words, would point out the way. The upward path is one of perpetual victory. There is an indirect way of getting the things of this world, and that is by way of the kingdom.

Musical Precocity.

Before he was eight years of age Mendelssohn excited the wonder of his teachers by the accuracy of his ear, the strength of his memory, and above all, by his incredible facility in playing music by sight. Meyerbeer at the tender age of six played at a concert, and three years later was one of the best pianists at Berlin; while the genius of Beethoven showed itself so early that his musical education was commenced by his father at the age of five. When two years younger than this, Sam Wesley, the musician, could play extempore music on the organ; and the distinguished German musical composer, Robert Schumann, also showed at a very early age a strong passion for music and remarkable talents both for playing and composing. Though he lost the use of his right hand at the very outset of his studies, he worked on with a giant's strength, struggling against all obstacles "with uncompromising devotion to what he conceived to be the highest interests of art." Something of the same early development of musical abilities displayed itself in the case of Cipriani Potter, distinguished as a composer and pianist; and Henrietta Sontag, a famous singer of her time, trod the boards when a child, and was prima donna of the Berlin stage and the idol of the capital before she was eighteen. Madame Tietjens is also said to have given indications of promising musical talents from earliest infancy. Before she could speak she would hum the opening notes of Auber's opera, Fra Diavolo. When a toddling child she used to create great amusement by her efforts to sing and play, and was quite content to be allowed to wander among the instruments of a neighboring piano forte manufacturer's warehouse and make music after her own fashion—music which was recognized by one at least of those who heard it as more than the strumming of a child.

HEALTH OR HORSES.—The health and comfort of horses have of late years been greatly improved by the better construction of stables. They are made more roomy and lofty, and provided with means of thorough ventilation. In many new stables lofts are done away with, or the floor of the lofts is kept well above the horses' heads, and ample shafts are introduced to convey away the foul air. By perforated bricks and gratings under the mangers and elsewhere round the walls, and also by windows and ventilators, abundance of pure air is secured for the horses; while being introduced in moderate amount and from various directions, it comes in without draught. Too much draught is almost an unknown stable luxury. To secure a constant supply of pure air horses require more cubic space than they generally enjoy. Even when animals are stabled only at night, a minimum 1,200 cubic feet should be allowed. In England the newer cavalry barracks give a minimum of 1,500 feet, with a ground area of fully ninety square feet per horse, and the best hunting and carriage horses have more room.

PROFESSIONAL TESTIMONY.—Many of the best physicians use Down's Elixir in their daily practice because it is the best cough remedy that can be made.

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

APRIL 4.—The Senate resumed consideration of the pending business—the resolution for the election of Senate officers.

A motion by Mr. Pendleton to go into executive session was lost—yeas, 25; nays, 29.

Mr. Johnston quoted extracts from the Virginia, a newspaper edited by Mr. Riddleberger, to prove the Democracy of that gentleman and his colleague (Mahone), and from the Riddleberger bill to show that the Republicans were now found supporting a plan for office who had announced in that bill that the adoption of the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth amendments was equal in its terrible effects to the war itself.

He went with some minuteness into the question of the debt of the State of Virginia, contending that only failure to pay interest on that debt was not attributable to any desire to repudiate, but to the unfortunate condition of affairs which prevailed immediately after the war.

Mr. Dawes inquired whether the Senator agreed with his colleague in holding that West Virginia ought to pay a part of the debt?

Mr. Johnston replied that he agreed with his colleague and with the Supreme Court of the United States in holding that West Virginia should be responsible for one-third. Leaving the question of the debt, he inquired of Mr. Dawes where and when in Virginia anybody had to wade through blood to the ballot-box, as had been stated by that Senator?

Mr. Dawes replied that the "Mississippi plan" was the general term. Specific names were attached to the different southern states. In one State it took the phase of blood; in another tissue ballots; in another forging returns. In Virginia it was called opposition to vagabond suffrage. The Senator would have to explain that phase of the general plan. Had the Senator forgotten that the army had been called out at Petersburg to put down violence there? Did the Senator pretend to say nobody got hurt at Petersburg in a vain attempt to assert his right as a voter?

Mr. Jones, of Florida, denied the statement made on Friday by Mr. Logan, that political outrages were perpetrated in Florida.

Mr. Harris moved to lay the resolution on the table—yeas, 23; nays, 27.

Roll-call followed roll-call in quick succession, upon dilatory motions, Mr. Dawes' inquiries as to when the Democrats would permit a vote to be taken on the resolution being always met, on the response: "on the first Monday in December."

Finally Mr. Dawes, remarking that it had become evident that the majority of the Senate was opposed to postponing consideration of this resolution, and expressing the hope that the minority would come to-morrow prepared to stay untill the will of the majority was obeyed, moved to adjourn.

Agreed to, and the Senate adjourned.

APRIL 5.—The pending business, the resolution for the election of officers of the Senate, was taken up.

A motion by Mr. Harris to go into executive session was lost—yeas, 26; nays, 30.

Mr. McPherson asked leave to present a petition from certain citizens of New York and New Jersey.

Mr. Hoar objected.

Mr. McPherson thought it a strange proceeding to deny the right of the petition. He had a petition reciting the fact that Michael Boyton, a citizen of the United States, had been arrested and thrown into prison by the British government on vague charges of inciting crime and violence, had been denied the right to a trial before a juror of his peers, and calling upon Congress to demand that the United States government should interfere for his protection. The petition was signed by members of certain Land leagues in New Jersey and New York. Did the Senate still object?

Mr. Hoar—The Senate desires to elect an officer to record all business. As soon as that is done the petition can be received.

Mr. McPherson—I would like to ask the Senator whether we had not a recording officer? Is there any lack of officers in the Senate?

Mr. Hoar—I think that is a thing to be determined by the Senate. The Senator thinks that the thing to be determined is violation of the constitution of the United States by a minority of the Senate.

Mr. McPherson—I do not believe it is done in violation of the constitution. I believe the constitution protects the rights of the minority. I believe the rules of the Senate were agreed to for the purpose of protecting legislation.

The Vice President ruled that, there having been objection, the petition could not be received.

Mr. McPherson gave notice that to-morrow morning he would call up this petition in order that the Senator from Massachusetts might be able to state to the country the reason that actuated him in preventing injustice being done to an Irish-American citizen, held in durance vile in an English prison.

Mr. Hoar suggested that the petition need not go over even until to-morrow, if the Democrats would vote upon the pending resolution. This pretense that the delay was attributable to the Republican side was the merest, sheerest piece of humbug and demagogy, and a succession of roll-calls followed on various motions all of which were voted down.

Adjourned.

MARCH 6.—The Vice President laid before the Senate the unfinished business, being the resolution for the election of Senate officers.

Mr. McPherson inquired why the Vice President had not in compliance with the rules, called for the presentation of petitions and memorials?

The Vice President replied that this being an executive session of the Senate, there was no morning hour.

Mr. Ferry sustained the position of the chair, declaring the rule to which the Senator referred was applicable only to a legislative session of the Senate.

Mr. McPherson then offered, as his right under the rules, a petition from certain citizens of the State of New Jersey respecting the case of one Michael Boyton, alleged to be confined in an English dungeon arbitrarily and unjustly, and asked that it be referred to the committee on foreign relations.

There being no objection, the petition was received, read and referred as indicated.

A motion by Mr. Pendleton to go into executive session was rejected—yeas, 30; nays, 31.

Senator Bayard then spoke for two or three hours in defence of the course now pursued by the Democrats. It was an eloquent statesmanlike speech and Senator Sherman replied in the same strain. Senator McPherson asked a few questions to which Senator Sherman made a brief response, but, which gave Senator Hoar the text for an extended reply.

After a few brief remarks by Mr. Vance, upon the question of the State debt of North Carolina, the Senate adjourned.

APRIL 6.—In the Senate the pending business, the resolution for the election of Senate officers, was taken up, and a motion to go into executive session, made by Mr. Pendleton, was voted down—yeas, 29; nays, 30.

Messrs. Vance, Hoar and Call, then addressed the Senate until 5:30, when the Senate adjourned until Monday.

BROOKLYN.

Instead of 'their way' will you read 'this way' in my last week's letter, or else charge the sentiment to the printer.

There is much sickness near us, and the sudden death of two ladies has startled the entire community.

The Easter sunshine of early morning gave place to cloud before noon, and all varieties of pin-back were stylish during the drenching walk home from church. The flowers and music were beautiful. A vase of ferns belonging to Mrs. A. P. Cook wrought a mirage of green woods, with brakes nodding at tufts of madder and pinks, that absence of snow and presence of a multiplicity of birds seem to render a fact with nothing but time intervening.

Robins are chanting odes to spring that never will be consigned to an editor's waste basket.

The revival is still progressing. Several of the neighboring clergy are lending their voices to awaken interest, and many are inquiring for the path to peace. The singing alone would induce the most careless to attend, and the church is well filled while the Presiding Evangelist preaches doctrine not weakened by mercy. The funeral of the soul, and the unpardonable sin may be cheerful subjects for people of gloomy dispositions, but to those inclined to laugh at the baby's antics, they form a dusky background for its photograph.

Facts are truly stranger than fiction. The ancientness of the Episcopal church is no longer its crowning laurel. Mr. Grayes shows its Apostolic birth to be of modern date compared with universal salvation. Those who have heretofore supposed Old Sam to be the founder of that institution will be pleased to learn that the first Universalist minister preached his first sermon in the garden of Eden with only Mr. and Mrs. Adam for a congregation.

Unless some Cyprus explorer should meet with an accident it is doubtful if any other church can rightfully claim the belt. When people discover how long truth has been kept in the background by historical inaccuracy, they are obliged to shake out every fold in the mantle of charity or risk appearing in a misfit. PEARLIE.

CAMBRIDGE.

The best on record. On Monday, April 11, at two o'clock, P. M., the friends of Mr. & Mrs. Norman Blowers met at their residence and gave them a hearty surprise in celebrating the fifteenth anniversary of their wedded life, and it being understood by the relatives that live on both sides of them that when friends were seen coming that were expected from Jackson and Hanover, the brother that lived on the north began to ring the bells for the delegation to move onward that stood waiting on the south, and Mrs. Blowers heard the bells, she thought the fire company was called upon, but when the company arrived it was not the fire company, and we all assembled in the parlor, Mr. and Mrs. Blowers greeted their company cordially. In the sitting-room spread upon the table was a collection of valuable and useful presents, of which we give a list below. At five o'clock the table was spread with all the bounties of which the company of such a collection can bring together, there being nothing left behind, of which 80 persons partook. At seven o'clock the friends took their leave carrying with them the hearty thanks of both Mr. and Mrs. Blowers. The following is a list of presents given:

A glass set of 20 pieces by George Nearing, Mrs. Jane Nearing, Mrs. Alice Nearing; glass pitcher, Mr. and Mrs. John Monaghan; 6 goblets, Miss Manie Blowers; glass and silver pickle castor, Mr. Daniel Ayers; china molasses cup and pickle dish, Mr. Albert Blower; Majolica tea steeper, Ennis Brothers; glass set of four pieces, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Ritter; silver castor, Mr. & Mrs. Willard Ferguson, Mr. & Mrs. Erastus Ferguson, Mr. & Mrs. Wilber Ferguson, Mr. & Mrs. Edward Blowers, Mrs. Clarisa Blowers; glass cake stand, Mr. & Mrs. George Shuart; glass cake stand, Mr. & Mrs. Walter Ferguson; goblet, Miss Cora Blowers; goblet, Mr. George Blowers; lamp and large glass dish, Mr. & Mrs. R. P. S. McKINNON, Recorder.

Adrian Record: Hollis Woodward, who lives in the First ward, had a narrow escape from footpads when in Chicago this week. While going from the Lake Shore depot to the Milwaukee depot about 5 o'clock in the morning he was sprung upon by three men, one of whom clasped his hands from behind, another placed his hand over his mouth, and his finger nails cutting his face so that the blood spurted over his clothes, while the other ruffian searched his pockets. Not succeeding in finding what he was after, he exclaimed: "D—n him; stick your knife in him, and then he'll tell." At this Mr. Woodward made a violent effort to escape, and succeeded in breaking the hold of the man who held his arms, and started to run. The appearance of three other men so alarmed the roughs that they fled, and no more was heard of them. A policeman informed Mr. W. that the same street had been the scene of a like attempt a few days before.

Adrian Record: We understand that Edwin Hadley has purchased property at St. Ignace, a thriving place on the straits of Mackinaw, and contemplates removing there. He is attorney for the Detroit, Marquette & Mackinaw railroad, with headquarters at St. Ignace. We shall be sorry to lose so good a citizen and genial gentleman as Mr. Hadley.

Adrian Times: It will be remembered that George M. Perkins sued the town of Medina, for damages sustained by falling through a defective bridge, and got a verdict of $4,500. At the recent town meeting an expression of the voters was taken relative to appealing the case, and a majority favored the appeal. So the case will probably go up higher.

The length of a lady's train should never be under a foot.

No matter what rank vegetables attain, the cabbage will always be a head.

"I am like a calendar," said a cheerful old man of four score; "my days are all numbered."

Why are good resolutions like a crying babe at church? Because they should be carried out.

A lady joking about her nose, said: "I had nothing to do in shaping it; it was a birthday present."

Mary had a little lamb with which she used to tussle; she yanked the wool all off its back, and crammed it in her bustle.

A military man pitching into an opponent, said: "Why, his sword was never drawn but once, and that was in a raffle."

The young man who wrote and asked his girl to accept a "bucket" of flowers, became a little pale when she said she wouldn ware it.

"Well, you'll own she's got a pretty foot, won't you?" "Yes, I'll grant you that, but it never made as much of an impression on me as the old man's!"

"At what age were you married?" asked she inquisitively. But the other lady was equal to the occasion, and replied: "At the parsonage."

Milton was asked if he intended to instruct his daughter in the different languages, to which he replied: "No, sir, one tongue is sufficient for a woman."

Mrs. Partington has been reading the health officer's weekly report, and says she thinks 'total' must be an awful malignant disease, since as many die of it as all the rest put together.

"My son," said an American father, "how could you marry an Irish girl?" "Why, father," said the son, "I'm not able to keep two women, and if I'd married a Yankee girl I'd had to hire an Irish girl to take care of her."

"The only real bitter tears are those she sheds in solitude," says some one. You may bet your life that philosopher never saw a ten-year old boy coming out of the wood-shed in company with his father and a skate strap.

"Well, my little lad," said a clergyman, patting a youngster on the head, "what do you expect to be when you grow up?" "Drunk," said the boy, bashfully. "Well, what would you like to be, then?" continued the pastor, expecting the youngster to say he would like to be President of the United States. But the boy's ambition soared higher than that, for he blurted out: "I'd like to be a walker, and wax Weston and the rest of 'em."

A few rubbing posts set up in a pasture will save injury to the fence. Cattle will use these conveniences very often, if provided for them, and it is worth all the trouble to witness the enjoyment of the animals in their use.

Tea is recommended in the following cases: After a full meal, when the system is oppressed; for the corpulent and the old; for hot climates, and especially for those who, living there, eat freely or drink milk or alcohol; in cases of suspended animation; for soldiers and others marching in hot climates; for then, by promoting evaporation and cooling the body, it prevents in a degree the effects of too much food as of too great fatigue.

This is what Robert G. Ingersoll says of woman: "I tell you women are more patient than men. As a rule, women are more truthful than men, and ten times as faithful. I never saw a man pursue his wife into the very ditch and dust of degradation and take her in his arms. I never saw a man stand at the place where woman had been mortally wounded, waiting for the waves to bring back even her corpse to his arms, but I have seen women do it. I have seen women with their white arms lift man from the mire of degradation, and hold him to her bosom as though he were an angel."

Sense and Sentiment.

Self-reliance is quite distinct from self-assertion.

People's intentions can only be decided by their conduct.

Experience is a torch lighted in the ashes of our hopes and delusions.

Mean souls, like poor pictures, are often found in good-looking frames.

It is the lot of genius to be opposed, and to be invigorated by opposition.

It is human nature to love to make experiments at the expense of others.

Hope softens sorrow, brightens plain surroundings, and eases a hard lot.

He who laughs at cruelty sets his heel on the neck of religion and godliness.

It is more honorable to acknowledge our faults than to boast of our merits.

There is nothing that so refines the face and mind as the constant presence of good thoughts.

People seldom improve much when they have no better model than themselves to copy after.

Fortune does not materially change men; it only unmasks them and shows their true character.

It is easy to pick out flaws in other people's work, but far more profitable to do better work yourself.

Harsh words have many a time alienated a child's feelings and crushed out all love of home.

Gratitude is the fairest blossom that springs from the soul, and the heart of man knoweth none more fragrant.

Tears are to be looked at not as proof of very deep sorrow, but as a gracious relief to the killing intensity of such grief.

To think kindly is good, to speak kindly is better, but to act kindly is best. Let warm, loving light shine on all around you, and you will never lack friends.

The arms of wit ought always to be feathered with smiles. When they fail in that, they become sarcasm, and like two-edged swords.

Sober sense, self possession and intelligent self-control are the the safeguards of head and heart, and make a beautiful temple for the soul.

"Ice Wagon Come Nextee."

Some time ago the "Hub of the Universe" was visited by a terrible thunder-storm, accompanied by a well-developed sample of the Kansas tornado. Many lives were lost amongst the shipping along the Massachusetts coast, and especially in Boston harbor. The damage to glass in the city was very heavy. The next day after the storm, one firm on Canal street reported the sale of two thousand panes of glass. The whole performance was without a precedent in the memory of the oldest inhabitant.

The startling appearance of the sky previous to the bursting of the shower warned travelers and pedestrians to seek cover. Among the many careless ones caught out in the storm was Geo. B——, a young reporter. He was caught by the shower on Hanover street, and stepped into a doorway to wait until the heaviest was over.

He had company in the doorway. There were two Chinese "washee-washees" from Howard street, and several less queue-rious looking individuals, all of whom, it would be safe to say, had not for a long time back had any very intimate relations with a laundry.

The rain fell in torrents, and very soon great hail-stones struck the sidewalk and rebounded a few feet in the air. Rushing out in the storm, the enthusiastic reporter got several specimens, drew a tape-line from his pocket, measured them carefully, and recorded the figures in his memorandum book.

Repeating this operation several times, he attracted the attention of some young clerks in the offices up stairs, who broke off large chunks from the block in the ice-cooler, and threw them out, when the reporter measured them carefully, as before, and recorded the result.

Everybody in that doorway was awe-struck at the size of the hail-stones, and the Chinamen were exhibiting eyes of an unusual roundness and prominence. One or the chaps in the office accidentally dropped the balance of the block of ice from which the monstrous hail-stones had been chipped, and it came down and landed on the sidewalk with a great crash. It must have weighed over twenty pounds, and scattered the water right and left.

Just at this instant came that awful crash of thunder that startled every one who heard it, and of which the papers spoke next day. This was too much for John Chinaman. They both ran yelling up the street in the driving storm, the last one saying, as he cleared the doorway: "Whoopee up hellee! Icee wagon come nextee! Good bye, Johnee!"—Correspondence Detroit Free Press.

TO THE AFFLICTED.

Since the introduction of Kellogg's Columbian Oil it has made more permanent cures and given better satisfaction on Kidney complaints and Rheumatism than any known remedy. Its continued series of wonderful cures in all climates has made it known as a safe and reliable agent to employ against all aches and pains, which are the forerunners of more serious disorders. It acts speedily and surely, always relieving suffering and often saving life. The protection it affords by its timely use on Rheumatism, kidney affection, and all aches and pains, wounds, cramping pains, cholera morbus, diarrhœa, coughs, colds, catarrh, and disorders among children, makes it an invaluable remedy to be kept always on hand in every home. No person can afford to be without it, and those who have once used it never will. It is absolutely certain in its remedial effects and will always cure when cures are possible. Call at C. A. Wright & Co's. and get a memorandum book giving more full details of the curative properties of this wonderful medicine.

A Negative Creed Unsatisfactory.

The instinct of skepticism is a little like the instinct of hunting: there is more or less of it in every human being. Many a man enters upon the pursuit, not caring for the game, not wishing to prove that there is no God, not that he would satisfy himself that he is nothing—going nowhere—but for the enjoyment and zest of the pursuit.

To a brave man, the keenest intellectual pleasure comes from what he calls the pursuit of truth—the hunting of of truth to its lair; the attempt to measure the ways, and perhaps the thoughts, of the first cause.

But "My thoughts are not thy thoughts neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord;" and if the man gets bewildered and lost, and at last seems to himself to be nothing, going nowhere, he has arrived at a conclusion or a destination that he did not seek to arrive at in the beginning—a conclusion and destination that is far from being satisfactory.

Lives there a skeptic who, deep down in his own heart, would not believe in the simplest forms of Christianity if he could? The saddest and most pathetic utterances are those of men who, with the farthest and most subtle reach of thought, grasp only negatives. A man can no more live on negatives than on stones; a negative creed is the creed of death.

Man's Noblest Work.

This is an age of great works and wonderful inventions. Steam, electricity, water, air, all are made to serve man, but unquestionably the greatest inventions are those which preserve man's health and prolong his life, and among the greatest of these is Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Its effects are truly wonderful and hundreds are happy to day, who looked forward to an early grave. For Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, loss of voice, Hay Fever, Hoarseness, Croup, or any affection whatever of the Throat, Chest or Lungs, Dr. King's New Discovery will positively cure. We can cheerfully recommend it to all, and can unhesitatingly say it is the only sure cure for Throat and Lung affections. Trial bottles ten cents; regular size $1. For sale by C. A. Wright & Co., Tecumseh.

It was admirable advice which Mr Wesley records as having been given to a preacher by a very old woman: "Preach," said she, "the law first, then the Gospel, then the law again."

The manuscript of Washington's farewell address is in possession of the New Lenox Library in New York. Mr. Lenox purchased it for two thousand dollars, a very small price compared with what it would now sell for. This library contains many other very rare treasures, among which is a superb copy of the Mazarin Bible, printed at Mentz, by Gutenberg, and compiled in 1455, the first book printed with movable type, and still, singular to say, one of the noblest typographical monuments in existence. There are only two copies on this continent, the other now in possession of the executors of the late George Brinley, of Hartford. The last copies sold at the Perkins sale in London, June 6, 1873, brought for the one on vellum, $17,000; that on paper, $13,350.

PRESERVING THE COLORS OF PRESSED PLANTS.—The following process is said by the London Chemist and Druggist to give very excellent results: Dissolve one part of salicylic acid in 600 parts of alcohol, and heat the solution to a boiling point in an evaporating dish. Draw the plant slowly through the liquid, wave gently in the air to get rid of any superfluous moisture, and dry between folds of blotting-paper several times repeated. In this manner the plants dry rapidly, which is a great gain, and thus furnish specimens of superior beauty.

A Wonderful Discovery.

For the speedy cure of Consumption and all diseases that lead to it, such as stubborn Coughs, neglected Colds, Bronchitis, Hay Fever Asthma, pain in the side and chest, dry hacking cough, tickling in the throat, Hoarseness, Sore Throat and all chronic or lingering diseases of the throat and lungs, Dr. King's New Discovery has no equal and has established for itself a world-wide reputation. Many leading physicians recommend and use it in their practice. The formula upon which it is prepared is highly recommended by all medical journals. The clergy and the press have complimented it in the most glowing terms. Go to your druggist and get a trial bottle free of cost, or regular size for $1.00. For sale by C. A. Wright & Son, Tecumseh, Mich.

Did you ever observe that a tidy room is invariably a cheerful one? It is cheerful to come into one's breakfast-room and find it faultlessly tidy; but still more certainly will cheerfulness come if tidiness is the result of our own exertions; and, so I counsel you, if you are ever disheartened, vexed or worried about something that has gone wrong with you in the world, to have resort to the remedy of tidying up. Don't sit brooding and bothering. Go to work and make everything tidy about you, and you cannot fail to recover your cheerfulness.

How to Get Rich.

The great secret of obtaining riches, is first to practice economy, and as good old "Deacon Snyder," says, "It used to worry the life out of me to pay enormous doctor's bills, but now I have "struck it rich." Health and happiness reign supreme in our little household, and all simply because we use no other medicine but Electric Bitters and only costs fifty cents a bottle. Sold by C. A Wright & Co., Tecumseh.

How to grow geranium cuttings: Take coarse, clean sand about three inches in depth, insert the cuttings about one to one and a half inches deep therein; press the sand firmly around them, and water freely at first; afterwards, use it sparingly. One cause of geranium cuttings turning black is the keeping of them too wet. No kind of cuttings are better adapted for sending by mail than geraniums, as the drying of the cut seed is conducive to rooting them easily, and they universally give satisfaction.

DRUGGISTS SPEAK.—"When we are asked to recommend something to nourish and strengthen the blood we always say take Malt Bitters."

"Best blood purifier we know of."

"Rapidly displacing all other bitters."

"For weakness, nervousness and the fruits of dissipation nothing like Malt Bitters."

"Women and children take them freely."

To keep furs and woolen goods from moths, close wrapping in paper is enough, though a little camphor may be put in the package to keep off other insects. Any paper will do if there are no holes in it, and no openings left for the moth to creep in. Of course care must be taken to have the article free from moths when put away.

"My life," said a grateful lady, "has been one of intense suffering and misery until cured of a disfiguring scrofulous humor by the Cuticura Remedies." Ask your druggists about them if troubled with itching and scaly humors.

Turnips are healthful for horses. They should be cut into thin slices, or, what is better, pulped finely and mixed well with a little meal and some salt. Rutabagas are better than white turnips.

PROFESSIONAL TESTIMONY.—Many of the best physicians use Down's Elixir in their daily practice because it is the best cough remedy that can be made.

Salt Rheum for seventeen years.—Helpless for eight years. Unable to walk. Got about on hands and knees. Head, face, neck, arms and legs covered. Cured by Cuticura Remedies. Will McDonald, 2642 Dearborn street, Chicago.

A little dry sand covered over potatoes, when they are first put into the cellar, will destroy any unpleasant odor they may have. A sprinkling of dry air-slacked lime will mitigate a tendency to rot.

DEATH OF MRS. FAIRFIELD.

LINCOLN, April 2nd, 1881.

One of the saddest events that pen has ever been called upon to record occurred in the death of Mrs. Elizabeth B. Fairfield, wife of Chancellor Fairfield, on the 25th of March, at a hotel, among strangers, with not one of the many hundreds who loved her so much, near, to help, if help could be given, or comfort bereaved family with the assurance that everything possible was done, to preserve any precious spark of life that might have lurked within after the first stroke, which proved the last, to her.

Returning, alone, from Battle Creek, Mich., where she had been to place her only daughter, who was suffering from a lingering illness, in a sanitarium, she left the train at Mendota, Ill., sick from weariness and the discomfort of a "sleeper," to rest a few hours, when she purposed to resume her journey; but suddenly a stroke of apoplexy there ended the useful life and crushing, indeed, was the blow to her eager and expectant family and friends.

Mary A. Baldwin was born in Ellington, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., Jan. 2nd, 1837, where she passed her childhood. She spent some time, in her later girlhood, as a student in Hillsdale College, Mich., so nearly finishing her course as to receive her degree in after years. There she became the wife of Rev. E. B. Fairfield, then President of the College, in August, 1859, and though so young, and stepping from the ranks of students, with such dignity and fitness did she ever sustain herself as to challenge criticism. The cheeriness and frankness of her disposition not only won friendship, but kept it all her own till the last, and few there be for whom so many will deeply mourn when they pass away; for she has left large circles of loving and admiring friends both in Ohio and Michigan, as well as in Nebraska, her later home. Her unbounded hospitality, her activity in social life, and her witty and sprightly manner made her a universal favorite wherever her lot was cast. She early learned to love the Saviour, and lived so consistently and faithfully as to recommend Christianity to all who knew her. Her ear was ever open to the call of the sick and needy, and her charity of the kind which blesseth both giver and receiver. To her own family she was uniformly kind, forbearing and tender, interested in every thing pertaining to them, and thinking, to her last breath, more of their needs than her own comfort; and on them falls the weight of the loss, but in due proportion to the brightness which her cheery presence cast upon the world about her is the gloom that follows the sad, sad event of her departure, lighted only by the feeling that our loss is her gain, and the blessed hope that in the hereafter we may meet again. S.

The sudden death of Mrs. Fairfield, wife of the Chancellor of our State University, is lamented wherever she was known. The public testimonials of respect on the day of her funeral in Lincoln, March 30, were many and unmistakable. The services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. Lewis Gregory, of the Congregational church assisted by neighboring pastors. The burial took place in Wyuka cemetery, near the city. During the week following the first announcement of the sad event, the editor of the Notes was in Fairmont, Lincoln, Omaha, and Kearney. In those places and on the railway trains, there were frequent mention of the occurrence as one that was a great loss to the State. Probably no woman was more deeply respected, by young and old, by students and by citizens generally. A letter in this column, written by a loving, discerning, conscientious friend, render further words unnecessary.—EDITOR NOTES.

Rumored, that Hon. W. T. Lawrence, of Adrian, is negotiating for the Biddle House, Detroit. He would no doubt give to the people of the city and state a first-class hostlery, and make this fine house a popular and pleasant stopping place.

It is contemplated put up at the Peninsular car works in Adrian with the electric light.

Southern feuds are well illustrated by the fate of Amos Ellington, an aged bachelor of Crawfordsville, Ga., who was assassinated on the roadway. Twelve years ago he received four shots in a fight on the street, and six years afterward he caught a load of buckshot from some enemy while riding home. He always went fully armed, and lived in a log house, completely barricaded. His father having been butchered in a street fight, Amos had been haunted for fifty years by visions of assassins.

District Attorney Bliss and Detective Perkins, of St. Louis, are in Pittsburgh, consulting with the federal authorities in regard to the Missouri land frauds. Over the ample stores given them they fought like a pack of wolves.

The lost Charlie Ross is called up by a letter to John W. Forney from B. B. Hugman, of London, who seems positive that the kidnapped child was for some months at school at Loughton, Essex. The lad knew his name and said he was brought from America in a ship. He was in charge of a mysterious but ordinary woman, who was not his mother as he often declared to his schoolmates. Mr. Hugman gave the matter less attention than he ought, as he had heard that Charlie Ross had been restored to his father.

WILSON MCCLURE is lying at his home in a critical condition. Last Saturday he was driving home to his dinner and just before he reached the corner where he turns up Killbuck street he struck the horse with the whip so by the time the corner was reached the horse was going at a lively pace. In consequence in rounding the corner, the wagon upset throwing Mr. McClure upon his shoulder. The wagon then struck him in the breast and severely injured him. He was at once cared for and we hope in a short time he may be able to be out.

THE Whist club had a pleasant party last Tuesday evening at Armory Hall. About twenty members of the club were present. Those wishing to dance, did so to the harmonious strains of Weddles and Severance, and those wishing to play cards found everything arranged for them. Everybody did what he chose, and a jovial evening was passed. One of the features of the evening, perhaps the most prominent, was the supper. The young ladies of the club had arranged three tables upon the stage, trimming and decorating them very tastily with flowers, and loading them down with the choicest viands. Miss Lilla Mortimer and Alt. W. James, whose faces have been missed for some months from Tecumseh society, and Mr. Heaton of Toledo, were present. QUITE a number of removals in our business circles this week.

A small article of great efficiency is American Ball-Blue. A favorite in every laundry. Unsurpassed for purity and brilliant effect. All grocers have it.

IT seems to be a current opinion that Dr. Hause is drawing a weekly insurance indemnity by reason of his late misfortune, but such is not the case. His policy expired some time before the accident.

CARL BURTON, of Clinton, was in town yesterday and started a good violin class. We understand he will give our town a call each week, and any one who would wish good instruction on this instrument would do well to give him a call.

A FEW days of this fine weather is not only a pleasure for all of us, but a godsend to many in our midst who are suffering with different ailments, and almost dying for want of strength which can only be obtained by a little of this good fresh air.

FOR a number of seasons it has been our custom to announce to our readers of the new and various styles of fashionable millinery goods kept for sale and made by Mrs. M. A. Freeman, and never have we been more happy to do so than at the present time. Mrs. F. is attending to the business herself this spring, has in stock the latest spring styles of goods in her line, and any lady wishing something tasty for our now late spring, can rely on satisfaction by calling on a person of long experience in the business, Mrs. M. A. Freeman.

Deerfield Record: The large farm house of George Peters, located two miles east of this village on the river road, was totally destroyed by fire on Friday afternoon, the 8th. The fire caught in the roof from sparks flying from a chimney. A part of the household goods were saved. Mrs. Peters was the only person at home at the time of the fire, her husband being absent on business. The total loss is estimated at $2,500; with an insurance of $1,500 on the building and contents.

The Governor, in accordance with the terms of a joint resolution, previously adopted by the Legislature, has appointed Thursday, April 28, as "Arbor Day." On that date the people are expected to plant shade trees along the highways, in front of residences and in school house grounds. It is expected that in many communities the occasion will be made one of ceremony: that the people will turn out in suitable array, and with music, addresses and other solemnities make "Arbor Day" a public festival.

Hudson Post: Calvin Wolcott's fine trotter came up missing one morning last week, and it was at once supposed to have been stolen, which was probably the right theory. A diligent search was at once begun, the country scoured and word sent to adjoining counties, but the horse was not secured until the next day, when they found it about five miles south of this place with a halter on. The fact that a halter was on the horse is pretty conclusive proof that it was an attempt to steal the animal, as it was loose in a box stall when taken. Why the parties left it remains a mystery and probably always will.

Hudson Post: Two of our street produce buyers became somewhat irritated over the purchase of a basket of eggs Monday, and to more amicably settle the matter they resorted to fist work, the smallest of the two coming out second best. At this juncture the marshal proceeded to get in his work, and arrested them. The best man of the two plead guilty and was fined $5 and costs, amounting to $8.80, which he paid with as much dexterity as he handled his fists during the fore part of the day. The second best man plead not guilty, and had a jury trial, and was convicted. His costs and fine amounted to $14.40, but he appealed the case to the circuit court.

NEEDED LEGISLATION.

EDITOR HERALD:

There is an Act of our Legislature which as stated by a correspondent of a Detroit daily, enables any six men to organize a co operative Mutual Benefit Society, and without any money or security, to issue certificates of membership, which are passed off as polices purporting to insure lives. A membership fee of $10 is usually required which is paid for the privilege of being assessed to pay losses, no part of which goes for security, but is for the benefit of agents, and in due time these assessments appear in such numbers and amounts that usually members are convinced that the so called insurance is very expensive, and that they are made victims of deception and fraud. The writer of this article has had in his possession one of those papers of a certain Mutual Benefit Association, which has written on the top conspicuously $2500 and then goes on to state that it does agree to insure the life of the person named in the amount of such sum as will equal 65 cents for each certificate in force and shall remain in force at the time said amount is received at the home office, and not to exceed $2500, and agrees to pay the said amount &c. to him or her if living at the expiration of seventeen years from the date thereof, in conformity with the rules and regulations of the association. We have also seen another of these certificates, which in consideration of ten dollars &c., agrees to pay conditionally the sum of $5,000 at death or to the person if living at the expiration of thirty years. What an opportunity this sort of business offers agents to make money by selling a $5,000 endowment policy for $10.—What a temptation to deception and fraud by imposing on the insuring public who cannot and do not, as a rule, understand the meaning of these contracts only as told usually by those who sell them. What a call there is for needed legislation, of which there is none at present, to bring such societies under proper regulations and subordination to the State insurance department, as under the existing laws they are not recognized as insurance companies and therefore go scot free. We think some such bill has passed the Legislature, and pray it may soon take effect, as this "wild-cat" life insurance is now being carried on to an alarming extent.

WILLIAM DEMOTT.

OBITUARY.

Mary A. Knight was born Feb. 5th, '61. In Oct. '68, the mother died, after which she was adopted into the family of the Hon. B. L. Baxter, of Tecumseh, where she ever after resided.

In early childhood she gave her young heart to God, and never after sought or desired to recall the gift. She united with the Presbyterian church of Tecumseh, of which she always thenceforth remained an unobstrusive but consistent member. She was one of those who practice more than they preach.

Always undemonstrative, but inflexible in adherence to principle, the current of her feelings and affections ran silently and deep, but without ebb or change. Not unlike her blessed master and exemplar, whom she loved, she loved to the end.

Unusually fond of children, she always laid herself out to interest and entertain them, and with a delicate appreciation of the proprieties of deportment, she was in a certain sense a guide, as well as companion to her youthful associates. A favorite alike with her teachers and her schoolmates. She was a diligent and successful student, but was compelled some two years since, by reason of failing health to leave her class in our union school, to which she never after returned, but by reading and home studies, became quite cultured for one of her age.

Of peculiarly fine esthetic tastes, she delighted in the forests, and flowers, and also painting, in which, almost without culture, she quite excelled.

Her last illness was brief, and her immediate dissolution quite unexpected to all.

She was never really confined to her bed, rose out for her health, the Saturday and Sabbath previous to her death, and sat up for a short time on the afternoon of the following Tuesday, and on Wednesday morning, April 13th, 1881, at early sunrise, retaining her consciousness to the last, almost without a struggle, she passed away from this world of suffering and sorrow, to the heaven revealed and heaven endowed mansions of the blest, "For so He giveth his beloved sleep."

"There is no death—what seems so is transition,
This life of mortal breath
Is but a suburb of the life elysian,
Whose portal we call death."

COM.

DIED.

McCAUGHN—On his farm near Tecumseh, on the 11th inst., after a lingering illness, Mr. Dougald McCaughn.

The funeral services were held on the 13th inst., at his late residence, when the remains, followed by a large concourse of friends and neighbors, were brought to the Tecumseh cemetery and committed to the grave.

Mr. McCaughn lived in Tecumseh at a very early day in its history and carried on the business of blacksmithing, but soon bought the farm and moved on to it, where he has lived until his death. He was widely known as an industrious, prosperous farmer, a good neighbor and a kind friend. A widow and four children survive him. His oldest son, William, died in the U. S. Hospital, in Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 24, 1864, being a Union soldier.

The members of the family desire to express their thanks to the friends and neighbors for the many acts of kindness to them during their affliction.

COMFORT—On the 17th inst., at the residence of her son-in-law, Joshua Taylor, in Raisin, Ann Wooston Comfort, aged 86 years and 2 months, "Like a shock of corn fully ripe," so passed away this aged mother, quietly and peacefully; giving the assurance that all would be well. Five of her children were gathered at her bedside to witness the dim light of a long and useful life to fade quietly away; to mingle their tears of deepest affection for one whom they dearly loved, and finally to say: Mother, farewell and farewell.

Prayer for Insane.

I was one day called upon to visit a sick little one in a family residing near my office. The babe I found in apparent good health, but crying and struggling in its mother's arms as though suffering excruciating pains.

The mother informed me that the child seemed desirous of nursing continually; and that, to quiet it, she had given it the breast as often as the crying commenced. When this did not soothe the little one, a dose of Mother Somebody's cordial had been administered.

"My good woman," I inquired, "when did you last give your babe a drink of water?"

"I don't remember," replied the lady, "I seldom let him drink water. Does he need it?"

"Need it? Why should he not need it as much as you? This child is suffering from thirst—nothing more."

I called for cold water, gave the infant a few teaspoonfuls, and it was relieved of all its troubles, stopped crying, and sank peacefully to sleep in its mother's arms.

Let this be a reminder to mothers and nurses. Infants who nurse at the breast may often suffer as much from want of water as adults who eat more solid food. Often when a child cries, it is only thirst which causes it.

Do not, then, dose it with the poisonous 'soothing syrups' or nursing cordials, or press it to the breast, which it will eagerly grasp expecting to satiate its burning thirst; but, filled to the brim with its natural food, it cries on harder than ever.

Use a little discretion. The poor little one cannot tell its wants; if it could, it would often cry: "Water! water!"

The Square and Compass.

The grand master of Masons in Kentucky, on the subject of allowing any but Masons to be present at Masonic funerals, holds these views: He believes it unwarrantable for any but those in good standing in the Masonic fraternity to act as pall-bearers, escort, or in any capacity except as clergyman or mourners. He warns the craft that "No fellowship is possible between the one ancient, universal brotherhood and the thousand and one fig-nats of modern brains. No blending of rites can be permitted for a moment, nor can Masons, as such, even know of the existence of other affiliations. When our lines are formed about the grave, none can be admitted within them save the fraternity, the clergy, and the mourners. The world at large is heartily welcome to witness our solemn rites, but only 'without the gate,' and when our last prayer is said and our last ceremony performed, and we turn away to our lodge-rooms, we know nothing nor care nothing of what is said by those who fall in behind us. The procession, the pall-bearers, the inclosing lines, the last sad rites, must be, one and all, strictly Masonic."

Portland Observer: We are informed that one day recently the prisoners in the county jail at Stanton organized among themselves a court, appointed their jury, lawyers and witnesses, and went through with a mock trial of their fellow prisoner, Frank Upright, who murdered his wife recently, convicted him, sentenced him to be hung, and were about to execute the sentence with a rope made of strips of blankets which they had torn up, when their proceedings were interrupted by the keeper of the prison putting in an appearance. They consider Upright a terribly vile fellow, and unfit to associate with decent prisoners.

Grand Rapids Democrat, April 14: Last evening the Electric Light Company tested the feasibility of lighting Pearl street bridge by electric light. At the west end of the bridge, and distance at least 200 feet therefrom, a light was placed of 2,000 candle power. By means of a reflector the light was thrown lengthwise through the bridge in such a manner as to concentrate the rays of light along the line of travel. The question of throwing a sufficient degree of light upon the bridge is no longer debatable. This was demonstrated to the satisfaction of the most incredulous, for the entire bridge, except upon the foot-paths upon the sides, was sufficiently lighted to read the finest print. There is a difficulty, however, in lighting the bridge, and indeed any covered bridge, which appears insurmountable. In order to concentrate the rays upon and along the bridge lengthwise, the light must be placed lower than the covering of the bridge. This position of the light therefore throws the rays directly into the eyes of the persons going toward the end of the bridge where the light must necessarily be placed. So intense is the light that few persons can bear it.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION.

Secretary Kirkwood has rescinded the appointments to the pension bureau made last week, and ordered 120 applicants for the 138 positions to enter upon a competitive examination. It is said this was done on the advice of the President.

INDIAN WISDOM.

Last fall six Sioux Indians belonging to Spotted Tails tribe were arrested on the charge of murder, and confined in the Dakota Prison. An old chief helped to arrest the offender, but at the same time headed a subscription-list, which he passed around among the Brules, to raise money enough to secure a lawyer to defend his young fellows, who were as he thought falsely accused. A total of $53.25 was raised and forwarded to the "Great Father," who engaged counsel. Intelligence has just been received at the Interior Department that the trial has been had, and the Indians acquitted.

A REFORM ORDER.

Secretary Windom has issued an order which, if strictly enforced, will break up many schemes of office-brokerage. The following is the text of the order:

"Officers, clerks, and other employes of this Department are prohibited from making recommendations for appointment, or giving any information except to the proper officer relative to vacancies that may exist in any branch of the Treasury Department; also from giving certificates of merit to clerks or employes leaving the Department for any cause."

INVITATIONS TO THE PRESIDENT.

The president has received an invitation to attend the laying of the corner-stone of a building for a school for Indian girls at Hampton, Va. The president is also in receipt of an invitation to attend the public ceremonies of the unveiling of the memorial column to the victors of the battle of the Cowpens, erected by the original thirteen states and the state of Tennessee, which will take place at Spartansburg S. C., on May 11, 1881, when addresses will be delivered by representative citizens from the New England, Middle, and Southern states.

ANOTHER LETTER FROM DAVID DAVIS.

Senator David Davis has written a characteristic letter to a friend in Kansas on the political situation. He declares that American politics have become degraded into a shameful scramble for the spoils of office, and cites as evidence of this the facts that the senate of the United States is now engaged in an unseemly struggle for a few small places, and that now, at the very outset of a new administration, the Republican factions are arrayed against each other over the patronage. The Senator refers to the growth of monopolies, and the subjection in which they hold the people by means of purchased legislatures, courts, and officials, and concludes that the best hopes for the republic lie through the organization of a national party, founded on harmony between all parts of the union, real reform of abuses, economy in public expenditures, rigid accountability of officers, honest civil service, free and fair elections, upright observance of all constitutional obligations, and maintenance of the public credit.

EDUCATION OF INDIANS.

In the interview had by a delegation of the Society of Friends with the President on the subject of educating the Indians, Mr. Rhoads, of the delegation, read an address to the President. Mr. Rhoades argued that the policy of appointing officers of the Indian bureau upon recommendation of different religious bodies be continued; that schools for Indians like those at Carlisle and Hampton be established in the Indian country; that the "civilization fund," which will run out in about a year, be continued; that, where practicable in the Indian country, agents employ Indian labor by way of encouragement. Ex-Secretary Schurz stated that it would be a good idea to have schools for Indians in their own country, but that the efforts of those at Carlisle and Hampton were to bring young Indians under all influences of civilization. Secretary Kirkwood thought Indians should be given titles to the reservations which they own, so that they can not be disturbed by strangers.

OLEO-MARGARINE EXPORTS.

For some time past there have been many complaints received by the Treasury department from leading butter dealers in the United States in regard to the export of oleomargarine. In their complaints it is alleged that large quantities of oleomargarine are being exported from New York and other points which is being imported as butter and consigned to certain foreign dealers, to whom it is sold as butter. Under existing English laws to sell oleomargarine by package without its being plainly marked as such subjects the dealer to a heavy fine, but the statute is being evaded by English importers breaking the packages and selling the contents in quantities less than the original package as butter. It is urged that the only practical remedy is that the Collector be empowered to cause such examination to be made of all packages exported as butters as will test its actual value.

The Treasury is fully impressed with the necessity of affording some protection to the dairy interests of the country, but the only authority conferred by existing law in regard to adulterations, either exported or imported, is in the matter of drugs. With a view of reaching some remedy in the premises the Secretary referred the whole matter to the Attorney General, with the request that he be informed whether it will be competent for the Treasury Department to adopt such regulations as will meet the necessities in this particular, or whether legislation will be necessary to effect the desired result.

THE SECRETARY'S CIRCULAR.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON, D. C., April 11, 1881.—By virtue of authority conferred by law upon the Secretary of the Treasury, notice is hereby given that the principal and accrued interest of bonds herein-below designated will be paid at the Treasury of the United States, at the City of Washington, D. C., on the 1st day of July, 1881, and that interest on said bonds will cease on that day; provided, however, that in case any of the holders of said bonds shall request to have the bonds continued during the pleasure of the Government at the rate of 3½ per centum per annum in lieu of payment at the date above specified. Such request will be granted, if the bonds are received by the Secretary of the Treasury for that purpose on or before the 10th day of May, 1881, viz.: 6 per cent bonds of act of July 17 and Aug. 7, 1861, coupon bonds, $80,700,050; registered bonds, $100,838,600; total, $180,514,650; 6 per cent bonds of act of March 3, 1863, coupon bonds, $9,545,500; registered bonds, $45,600,250; total, $55,145,750; aggregating, $235,690,400, and being the entire amount issued under the above mentioned acts, which remain outstanding. The requests above mentioned should be in forms substantially as herewith prescribed, and upon the surrender of bonds with such request, the Secretary of the Treasury will return to the owners registered bonds of the same loan, with the fact that such bonds are continued at the pleasure of the Government, with interest at the rate of 3½ per cent per annum, stamped upon them, in accordance with this notice.

Upon the receipt of bonds to be continued as above, provided the interest thereupon to July 1, 1881, will be prepaid at the rate in the bond now held, and after that date the semi-annual payment of interest on continued bonds will be made by checks from this department, as in case of other registered loans. All bonds, whether intended for payment or to be continued, should be forwarded to the Secretary of the Treasury, Loan Division, with a letter of transmission setting forth the purpose for which they are transmitted, and if to be continued they must be accompanied by the request above referred to.

Registered bonds for redemption or to be continued should be consigned to the Secretary of the Treasury for redemption or continuance, as the case may be, and when parties desire checks in payment of registered bonds to be drawn to the order of any one but the payee they should assign them to. The Secretary for redemption on account of therein desert name or names of persons to whose order the check is to be made payable. The Department will pay no expense for transportation on bonds received under the provisions of this circular, but bonds returned will be sent by prepaid registered mail unless the owners otherwise direct.

(Signed) "WILLIAM WINDOM, Secretary."

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

APRIL 11.—The Vice President laid before the Senate the unfinished business, being the resolution for the election of Senate officers.

A motion by Mr. Davis (W. Va.) to go into executive session was lost—yeas 19, nays 26. After a few remarks exchanged by Mr. Davis (W. Va.) and Mr. Dawes, tending to show that each side of the chamber was determined in its course of action, Mr. Call took the floor in continuance of his speech of Thursday last.

Then followed an extended debate, participated in by Senators Dawes, Camden, Beck, Vest and Allison.

Senator Beck announced that he intended to make some remarks in the morning, and was awarded the floor.

At 4:56 p. m., on motion of Mr. Dawes, the senate adjourned until 12 m. to-morrow.

APRIL 12.—A resolution calling for information regarding the imprisonment of Michael Boylon by the British government was adopted. Mr. Beck, in a speech on the deadlock, intimated that the Democrats might leave the Senate without a quorum. On a motion by Mr. Pendleton to go into executive session, the vote stood 30 to 30.

Adjourned.

APRIL 14.—The Vice-President laid before the Senate the unfinished business, being a resolution for the election of officers of the Senate.

Mr. Pendleton said the course the Republicans followed was without precedent.

The Senator from Massachusetts (Hoar) had charged the action of the Democrats with being revolutionary, but had subsequently, when pressed by the Senator from Georgia (Brown) retracted that charge.

Mr. Hoar said he had not made that charge but the action of the Democratic side warranted him in imputing it.

As the debate proceeded Senator Hill, of Georgia, and Senator Hoar of Massachusetts, exchanged a few words in regard to the position of Senator Mahone.

Senator Mahone had paid close attention to the debate, and when he arose it was evident that he intended to make a speech. He said he would reply to his colleague's speech upon another occasion. He repeated that no one from either party had approached him with improper proposals.

He then addressed himself directly to Mr. Hill in reference to the remarks he made in reference to the purchase of his vote by the Republicans, and said: "That remark is capable of two interpretations—either my vote had been purchased or that it would be purchased. I desire now to ask the Senator from Georgia if he intended to convey any such thing?"

Senator Hill tried to parry and fence the queries of Mahone, who finally said: "Since the Senator will not answer directly, I will give him a problem to solve. If he did mean to say that my vote had been, or could have been bought, he says what is foul, untruthful, and false, and unworthy the utterance of any one short of a coward."

Mr. Hill—Mr. President, I have too much respect for the Senate, too much respect for myself, too much respect for the people, to bandy epithets with the Senator from Virginia or any other Senator here. I would not insult a Senator in this chamber. The Senator can not insult me. He is powerless to insult anybody.

"What do you mean by that?" came a voice and Don Cameron was seen with flushed face and clenched fist glaring at him.

"I was addressing myself to the Senator from Virginia," replied Hill, "and not to the Senator from Pennsylvania."

Senator Hill arose and said he had no idea of insulting any one, particularly any one whom he was powerless to insult.

Mr. Hoar said that he considered that he had fairly answered the question put to him that he was not to be bullied into saying anything more, neither did he desire to be himself considered in any sense a bully. This closed the debate. Different emotions of Senators all over the chamber had a chance to be quieted during the voting on Farley's motion, to proceed to the consideration of executive business, and in a motion taking at 4 o'clock, the Senate adjourned.

APRIL 15.—The Vice President laid before the Senate the unfinished business, being the resolution for the election of officers of the Senate.

A motion to go into executive session was lost—yeas 26, nays 21—and Mr. Morgan addressed the Senate.

Mr. Brown followed, and said at the close of the war he had taken a position for absolute acquiescence in the reconstruction measures, and after adoption of the fifteenth amendment stood in favor of a free ballot and a fair count. He criticised the Republican party for injustice toward the colored race. If all negroes were, as was claimed, Republicans, they constituted one-fourth of the Republican party.

The war had ceased, the bloody shirt has been buried by the Republican party when that part had taken the Senator from Virginia, a confederate brigadier, for its leader, and with that act before the people they would not enter into another crusade to establish Republican power in the South. The South intended to become the equal of the North in wealth and intelligence. Then it would be respected.

Mr. Hoar replied to Mr. Brown's speech, and a good-humored discussion took place between them, which was kept up until Mr. Brown, misunderstanding a statement by Mr. Hoar and mis-quoting, was excitedly interrogated by Mr. Hoar as to whether he implied that he (Mr. Hoar) had said what was not true.

Mr. Brown denied any intention of misstating the Senator's remarks, and good humor was restored by Mr. Beck's simulated fear that the Senate would lose both the Senators from Georgia.

Mr. Hawley also replied to some remarks of Mr. Brown.

After some opposition from the Democratic side, the Senate adjourned until Monday.

Godey's Lady's Book for May is full of good things. The contents comprise a beautiful steel plate designed by Darley, representing a scene in Dickens' "Great Expectations," a double page colored Fashion plate, a Diagram Pattern for a child's walking dress, an intensely interesting complete novel by Estelle Thomson, entitled "A Story of the Sea," the usual number of short stories, poems, and sketches, Frugal Art Letters, Recipes, Games and Puzzles, Work Department, Editor's Comments on Fashions, Book Reviews, etc. And all through this old favorite there runs a pure and elevated tone.

Mrs. Trenholm, of Holyoke, writes us that Arthur's Elixir of Sulphur cured her daughter of a bad cough and great debility, which was incipient consumption if there ever was such, after she had been sick for six months and had tried almost everything. It is sold by C. A. Wright & Co.

How time will change the course of human life. Two years ago a young man might have been seen walking in all his glory past the residences of his married friends as they were hard at work cleaning house, and vowing that he would never help clean house for the best woman living. He has since become a husband, and the other morning he might have been seen pounding the dust out of a carpet with a vim that meant business.—Young man, prepare yourself for the same fate, for it will surely come.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

ROME.

A tidal wave has again visited us, but this time we are pleased to say it is of somewhat different character from the preceding ones. Temperature only 86° in the shade. With this increase of temperature comes a like increase of business. Cleaning house, making garden, etc.

Ralph Taylor is improving his harness shop by extending the rear end of it some fifteen feet. Ralph has gone into the agricultural implement business.

Henry Christman is building a fine wood house for D. P. Bates, proprietor of the brick store.

George Mosher, who is now mail agent, paid his Rome friends a flying visit last week. George, we are glad to see you looking so well.

The friends of Mrs. Newel will be pleased to learn that she is doing well at present.

The regular examination of teachers for summer schools in this town occurred on Saturday. It was satisfactory to all concerned with the exception of one, who was not being examined, but who made himself so numerous, displaying his unlimited cheek and ignorance, as to disgust all who were present.

Lumbard's troupe gave an entertainment here last week. We cannot speak as to its merits.

Wheat is looking much better than was expected.

RIDGEWAY.

Diphtheria disappeared.

The depot nearly completed.

A gang of carpenters at work on the Holloway depot.

Dr. Nelson's new house nearly ready for occupancy.

Everybody wide awake on railroad matters.

Lew Priest has returned and opened shop again. Ridgeway has a shoemaker.

Frank Temple is now acting as private secretary for Irv. Osborn in the lumber business.

Chas. Pocklington and Geo. Dibble had a lively set-to last week. Chas. got the worst of the fight and George paid the fine.

The regular meeting of the "Temperance Alliance" took place at the M. E. Church last Sunday evening, and was a very lively occasion. Lovers of elocution should not fail to attend these monthly meetings.

Hon. G. P. Waring spent last Sunday at home. He predicts the close of the present session, in about 30 days.

Quarterly meeting next Sunday at the M. E. Church.

FRANKLIN.

Most of the schools are in re-session.

Farmers are busy plowing for barley and oats.

E. T. Delapp has returned to Detroit, where he has engaged in the railroad business.

The M. E. Sunday School will reorganize and elect new officers next Sunday.

The sheep shearing association will hold their annual festival at the Center on Friday, April 29. The ladies of the society will bring their good things and prepare a dinner for the society at the Congregational parsonage.

The Congregational Sunday School will celebrate their usual annual anniversary by giving a concert in the evening.

Mr. Thomas Wilson and his mother-in-law, while going to church last Sunday met with quite an accident. Their horse became frightened at something in the road and jumped to one side, overturning the carriage and throwing both of them out, bruising them considerably, but no bones were broken.

CLINTON.

John Ed. McCollum and wife have broken up housekeeping and now occupy a suite of rooms at the Silver's House. Frank keeps a good house and does a lively business. Twenty-three guests of the house ate supper there last Wednesday. Who said, and kept on saying that a properly managed hotel at this place couldn't be made to pay? Ten to one that same "prophet" is at work now trying to vilify some other property in town.

Quite a good deal of sickness around here this spring. Scarlet rash, pneumonia, measles, rheumatism etc. are prevalent. John Ed. McCollum has been confined to the house and part of the time to his bed, for the past three weeks with inflamatory rheumatism. At times he was utterly helpless and suffered the most intense pain. He is somewhat better to-day, so that he staid a small part of the day in the store.

From the immense arrivals of new goods at Silver's for the past ten days, it would seem that though having lost confidence in some of his fellow men, he is not in the least discouraged, and thinks perhaps that the best way to meet a loss is to go ahead and make it up.

Frank Silvers claims to be the owner of two the finest horses in the state of Michigan, and Frank knows pretty well what he is talking about, especially when it comes to horse flesh.

Brainbridge and Hause are getting along nicely with their new furniture store. It will be ready to occupy in a few days.

Afonzo Clark is putting up a fine brick store between the bank and post office, which will add greatly to the appearance of our little village.

BROOKLYN.

Mumps and measles are numbered among things past, and now sensitiveness is the fashionable disease.

People wearing blue cravats and seal rings, of toy fryingpan size, suffer most, and though they persist in saying there is balm ready made to heal their affliction, there is a comical shrinking at the prospect of its application.

The evangelist has departed.

The tention to which the English language has been subjected for a few days, is removed and folks speak in a minor key without danger.

Under the milder persuasion of Mr. L. the work was finished, and those aroused to penitence were enabled to choose their way of life without being further confused by home made thunder.

In response to Prof. Pierce's invitation, Prof. Dickey of Albion gave us a lecture at the Presbyterian church last Friday evening.

There is hope for those who dispair because common sense gets warped away. We are going to invite him again and those curious to know the reason can best find out by asking him to talk at their place. He is a mathametician, and does that little sum called taxation by a different rule than Dr. Duffield. The only symptoms of fanaticism I discovered was his objection to temperance people, and the beer congress, believing alike.

THE first annual sheep show and shearing festival of the Cambridge Sheep Breeders' and Wool Growers' Association will take place at C. W. Greenleaf's on Wednesday, May 4th, 1881. Any person may be a competitor and member of the association for one year by paying into the treasury the sum of fifty cents. Dinner will be furnished to all members free.

Hudson Gazette: The 2nd-nine base ball club that suffered no defeats, and achieved so many victories last year, were re-organized on Tuesday evening, and the following officers chosen: Captain, Rich Deacon; Ass't Capt., Art Vander; Sec'y and Treas., Fred George. Some new men have been added, making a much stronger team than last year's.

Morenci Observer: Some four years since an enterprising farmer of Fairfield purchased of an eastern party 500 pear trees, on a representation that they were the best market varieties. It now turns out that at least 300 of the trees are not true to name and comparatively worthless. The scamp who sold the trees is known in this township, and if he gets his just deserts will ere long go behind the bars. The moral of the case is, however, that fruit trees should only be purchased of well-known, responsible parties.

Morenci Observer: The directors of the agricultural society, together with a number of ladies, had a nearly all day's busy session on Tuesday in making further arrangements for the forthcoming June fair. A fair bulletin will be printed as soon as practicable, containing the many features which are to characterize this unusual exhibition. The farming community will have its interest centered on a sheep-shearing festival, a grand display of farm machinery, etc., and the general public will be attracted in other directions which will be fully announced.

Adrian Record: An old land mark on Front street is being torn down to make room for a beautiful modern edifice. F. J. Hough is tearing down his house and getting ready to put up an elegant new one in its place. The old house was built about 30 years ago by James Field, Esq., and was considered a very "styly" structure and was built after the old fashioned ideas of mechanism, as any one will be convinced upon looking at the solid oak timber and mortise and tenant work. Such a frame would stand the storms of a hundred years. Judge Alexander Tiffany resided there before Mr. Field. That portion of Adrian in the days of the Erie & Kalamazoo railroad was the "aristocratic" quarter of the village. Stores, banks and fine residences were there. Mr. Hough's new house will be one of the finest in the city and will add greatly to the old time prestige of Front street.

LENAWEE COUNTY ITEMS.

Frank Evarts, of Hudson, broke his leg in Hillsdale, Tuesday of last week, while painting the Methodist church, by the scaffolding falling.

Adrian Press: A number of short term residents of Detroit, hailing from Lenawee county, arrived home Wednesday evening from the House of correction, the Supreme Court deciding that disorderly persons can't be imprisoned outside the county. Now enlarge the jails.

Hudson Post: Quite a number of eels are being taken out of the creek at present. James Dickerson caught one about eighteen inches long last Friday, and they kept it in some water at Dwyer's store until it showed signs of dying, when it was taken back to the creek.

Adrian Press: Michael Dailey, of Deerfield, argued a family question with his wife in such a muscular manner, that she fancied h[illegible] committed assault and batter[illegible] was so alleged in the compla[illegible] him, to which Michael pl[illegible] guilty on Wednesday morning, when he casually happened into the office of Justice Lamb. The 'Squire made it $24.-54, or three months with Sheriff Bidwell, allowing him 48 hours in which to decide.

Hudson Post: The other day the hand-car men put a red flag beside the track and a couple of cartridges on the rails just opposite the Baptist church, as a danger signal for the trains. Just as a freight train approached a young man from the country came along, and when within a couple of rods of the cartridges they exploded with a terrific report. The way that young man gathered himself up and ran was a sight to see. He went through town like a flash, and one could have played seven-up on his coat tail with the greatest of ease.

Deerfield Record: There is a report flying loose in the village that Samuel Beverly, a well-to-do citizen of this place, who converted his notes and mortgages into money about three weeks ago and went to the northern part of the State, had been shot and badly wounded by a lot of roughs at Walton Junction, in Wexford county. It appears that the rowdies got into a quarrel among themselves in which pistols were drawn and bullets let fly promiscuously around in a crowd, one of the bullets striking Beverly in the head. It is thought the fight was premeditated for the purpose of robbing him as he was known to have a large sum of money on his person. The extent of the damage done to Beverly or his present condition has as yet not been authoritatively learned.

Hudson Post: A farm wagon was slowly wending its way into town one day last week, when a young man standing on the corner of Grove and Main street bethought himself to take a free ride down town. He accordingly mounted the hind end of the wagon, but just as he was climbing over the end board the horses gave a sudden jerk, and in order to save a fearful fall by tumbling backwards, he gave a lunge forward, landing in a basket of eggs. Quite a sight was then presented to the passers by. The young man began to cuss, the farmer began to swear, and to top the whole thing off, his wife set her talking machine going at a lively rate. The last that our reporter saw of them they were still at it—the farmer saying that the eggs would have to be paid for, and the young man begging off with the plea that it was all an accident.

Hudson Gazette; A narrow escape. Some time since the Ames bridge, north of Hudson, was condemned, and a cautionary notice posted thereon by the highway commissioner. There has been more or less travel over the bridge, nevertheless. On Monday last, Mr. Benj. F. Lamb, of Adams, Hillsdale county, was driving over, with his wife and sister, in a lumber wagon, and seeing the notice on the bridge, requested his wife to read it. Just at that moment the structure gave way, and bridge, team, wagon and occupants, were all precipitated into the river. The water was about three feet deep, and it is marvellous how, under the circumstances, all escaped death by drowning, or serious injury from the planks or timbers in the general wreck. As it was, the worst that happened was, that Mr. L. and sister landed on their heads and shoulders, and got a thorough drenching, while one of the horses fell on his back and was handicapped with plank for a time. It was certainly a very narrow escape.

BEGINNING AGAIN.

When, sometimes, our feet grow weary,
On the rugged hills of life—
The path stretching long and dreary
With trial and labor rife—
We pause on the toilsome journey,
Glancing backward in valley and glen,
And sigh with an infinite longing
To return and begin again.

For behind is the dew of the morning,
In all its freshness and light,
And before are doubts and shadows,
And the chill and gloom of the night.
We remember the sunny places
We passed so carelessly then,
And ask, with a passionate longing,
To return and begin again.

Ah, vain, indeed, is the asking!
Life's duties press all of us on,
And who dare shrink from the labor,
Or sigh for the sunshine that's gone?
And it may be, not far on before us
Will fairer places than them
Life path's may yet lead by still waters,
Though we may not begin again.

For evermore upward and onward
Be our paths on the hills of life.
And soon with a radiant dawning
Transfigure the toil and the strife.
And our Father's hand will lead us
Tenderly upwardthen;
In the joy and peace of a fairer world
He'll let us begin again.

NOTHING.

As he turned with a smile to his smiling bride,
"Blessed be nothing!" an old woman said,
As she scrubbed away for her daily bread,
"I'm better off than my neighbor the squire.
He's afraid of robbers, afraid of fire,
Afraid of flood to wreck his mill,
Afraid of something to cross his will.
I've nothing to burn, and nothing to steal,
But a bit of pork and a barrel of meal.
A house that only keeps off the rain
Is easy burnt up and built again.
Blessed be nothing! My heart is light
I sing at my washing, and sleep all night."

"Blessed be nothing!" the young man cried
As he turned with a smile to his smiling bride.
"Banks are breaking and stocks are down;
There's dread and bitterness all over town;
There are brokers groaning and bankers sad,
And men whose losses have made them mad;
There's silk and satin, but want of bread,
And many a woman would fain be dead,
Whose little children sob and cling
For the daily joy she cannot bring.
Blessed be nothing, for you and me!
We have no riches on wings to flee."

Blessed be nothing! If man might choose,
For he who hath it hath naught to lose.
Nothing to fear from flood or fire,
All things to hope for and desire:
The dream that is better than waking days,
The future that feeds the longing gaze
Better, far better, than aught we hold,
As far as the mining exceedeth gold,
Or hope fruition in earth below,
Or peace that is in yonward show.

A PANTHER'S MORNING CALL.

"I suppose you're wondering why I keep that ugly old chest," said Mrs. R——, "and I must own that it's not very ornamental; but it saved my life once, for all that. I see you think I'm making fun of you, but I'm not, indeed; and when you hear the story, I think you'll agree with me that I have good reason to value it, ugly as it looks.

"This is how it happened: When we first came out to India, my husband was sent to make the survey of Nerbudda valley, one of the wildest bits in all Central India; and we really were, just at first, the only white people within forty or fifty miles. And such a time as we had of it! If my husband hadn't been as strong as he is, and a perfect miracle of patience as well, I don't know how he could have stood what he had to do. It was dreadful work for him, being out sometimes for a whole night together, or having to stand out in the burning sun, when the very ground itself was almost too hot to touch. And as for the native workmen, I never saw such a set—always doing everything wrong, and never liking anybody to put them right. When the railway was being made they used to carry the earth on their heads in baskets; and when Mr. R——, served out wheel-barrows to them, they actually carried them on their heads in the same way. I couldn't help laughing at it, though it was terribly provoking, too. And that was just the way they all were; if there was a wrong way of using anything, they'd be sure to find it out. Even our butler, or khitmutbar, who was much better than most of them, came one day and begged a pair of old decanter-labels that my husband was going to throw away: and when the man came in next morning, he had positively turned them into ear-rings, and went about quite gravely with 'Port' in one ear and 'Sherry' in the other!

However, if the native men worried me, the native beasts were fifty times worse. It was no joke, I can assure you, to be awakened in the middle of the night by the roar of a tiger close under the window, or by an elephant crashing and trumpeting through the jungle with a noise like a mail-coach going full gallop into a hot-house. Well, as soon as that was over, the jackals would set up a squealing and whimpering like so many frightened children; and then a dreadful native bird, whose name I've never found out (I suppose because nobody could invent one bad enough for it,) would break out in a succession of the most horrible cries—just like somebody being murdered—until the noise fairly drove me wild.

And then the ants! but you've seen them for yourself, and I needn't tell you about them. But all this while I'm neglecting my story.

One day (it will be long enough before I forget it) my husband was out as usual at his work, and the nurse had gone down to the other native servants at the end of the 'compound,' as we call this inclosure; and I was left alone in the house with my little Minnie yonder, who was then just about a year old. By this time I had got over my first fears, and didn't mind a bit being left by myself; indeed, all the lower windows having bars across them, I thought that I was safe enough; but I little dreamed of what was coming!

I must have been sitting over my sewing nearly an hour, with the child playing about the door beside me, when suddenly I heard a dull thump overhead, as if something had fallen upon the roof. I didn't think anything of it at the moment, for one soon gets used to all sorts of strange sounds in the India jungle; but, presently, I thought I could hear a heavy breathing in the next room but one, and then I began to feel frightened in earnest. I rose as softly as I could, and crept to the doorway between the rooms. This doorway was only closed by a curtain, and gently pulling aside the folds, I peeped through and found myself within a few paces of the largest panther I had ever seen in my life!

For one moment it was just as if I had been frozen still, and then the thought came to me just as if some body had spoken it: 'The big chest!'

I knew that this chest would hold me and my child easily, and that I could leave a chink of the lid open to let us breathe, for the overlapping edge would save my fingers from the panther. In a second I had it all clear before me; but had the brute not stopped short at sight of the curtain, I should never have had a chance of trying it. Luckily for me, the Indian panther, savage as he is, is a terrible coward, and suspicious as any detective. I've seen one go round and round a trap for more than half an hour before he made up his mind to spring at the bait. So, while my friend was puzzling himself over the curtain, and wondering whether it was meant for a trap or not, I took up Minnie (who, poor little pet, seemed to know there was something wrong and never uttered a sound) and into the chest I crept, making as little noise as I could.

I was hardly settled there when I heard the 'sniff-sniff' of the panther coming right up to where I lay, and, through the chink that I had left open, the hot, foul breath came steaming in upon my face, almost making me sick. It seemed to bring my heart into my mouth when I heard his great claws scraping the edge of the lid, and trying to lift it up; but happily, the chink was too narrow for his paw to enter. But if the paw couldn't, the tongue could; and soon he began to lick my fingers, rasping them so that I hardly knew how to bear it. Still, the touch of Minnie's little arm aronnd my neck seemed to give me courage.

But there was far worse than this to come, for the panther suddenly leaped on top of the chest, and his weight pressed down the heavy lid upon my fingers, until the pain was so terrible that, unable to stand it any longer, I screamed with all my might.

The scream was answered by a shout, from just outside, in which I recognized my husband's voice. The panther heard it too, and it seemed to scare him, for he made a dash for the window, either forgetting or not noticing the iron bars; but just as he reached it, there came the crack of a rifle, and I heard the heavy brute fall suddenly upon the floor. Then all the fright seemed to come back upon me at once, and I fainted outright.

I heard afterward that Mr. R——, had happened to want some instrument which he had left at the house, and, not wishing to trust it in the hands of any of the natives, he came back for it himself—luckily, just in time, for the bullet from his rifle killed the panther. But, as you see, my hand is pretty stiff yet."

Education for the Farmer.

Superficiality, says the Western Rural, is an American fault in the preparation of the individual for the duties of life. Our colleges as a whole are not thorough enough in their courses of instruction; our young men enter upon the practice of the so-called learned professions with a very imperfect preparation. Law schools and medical schools are all the time turning out members of these professions, in armies, who are about as well qualified for their business as they would be for a business they had never even thought of; and as to the farm, no preparation at all is thought to be necessary among a very large class. Our agricultural colleges and schools have done something to correct this error, and so far as they have devoted themselves to the accomplishment of the legitimate object for which they were created—the making of competent farmers—they are worthy of all commendation. By connecting education with labor, and seeking them go hand in hand, they have been of incalculable benefit. But while these institutions have been doing a great deal in this direction, the agricultural press of the country has done much more, and considering them as the real and thorough educator, the farming community owes it to itself to see that agricultural papers are well sustained. But more than anything else, perhaps, necesity in the older portions of the country has been the partial cause of an increase of intelligence in agriculture. The East has, to some extent, felt the needs which the farmers of England feel. The natural fertility of the soil having been exhausted, and the eastern farmer being compelled to compete with those on the vast prairies of the West, it has been found necessary to till the soil more scientifically; or with the lessons which experience has taught, many have come west and have been growing constantly in intelligence. Whatever the causes may have been, or may now be, it matters little so long as it is a fact that our agriculturalists are doing their work more intelligently than formerly, and although our progress is by no means as rapid as we could desire, progress is nevertheless being made, and if we could only cause the fact that agriculture is a science made up of various sciences to be generally recognized, we should have done enough to elevate the farm to its proper position. Then a young man contemplating the business of agriculture as a life-work would first seek to qualify himself, as he would if he had determined to enter upon a professional or mercantile career, and with the generally good common practical sense which characterizes boys and young men who properly appreciate the farm, they would no doubt more thoroughly prepare themselves for their business than young men who enter upon the prosecution of other kinds of business usually prepare themselves.

At Five and Twenty.

The woman who marries at the age of twenty-five is tolerably sure of domestic happiness. At that age she seldom deceives herself, and is seldom deceived. She may not then have her first sentimental experience, but such experience at such an age is more than sentimental, and merely over fleeting.

She looks back at the youths she imagined she was enamoured of between sixteen and eighteen, or even from then to twenty-two, and they are worse than indifferent or repellant to her—they are ridiculous; and in some sort she as she then was is ridiculous to herself.

She cannot but think what she escaped; she cannot but be grateful to her destiny that her sympathies and affections have been reserved for a worthy object and a higher end.

At twenty-five, if ever, a woman knows and estimates herself. She is less liable to emotional or mental mistakes; she is far surer of her future, because she feels that her fate is, to a certain extent, in her own hands. She is more loveable, broader and stronger than she ever has been before.

The Handsomest Foot.

HOW THE FOOT OF A SOUTHERN LADY COMPARES WITH THAT OF A YANKEE LADY.

A reporter dropped into a Bleecker street shoe store on Friday evening, and saw Mr. Charles Wolf, a clerk, selling an exquisite pair of gaiters to a handsome girl.

"What is the largest pair of gaiters that you ever sold to a lady?" we asked.

"The largest was a pair of nines," Mr. Wolf replied. "Two sisters—and very pretty girls they are—live not far from here. One wears eights and the other nines."

"How do their hands compare with their feet?" was the next question.

"Their hands looked as though they required a gentleman's kid glove," said Mr. Wolf. "But they were faultless in shape, and had the sweetest pink nails that I ever saw on a hand." He smiled as he again referred to their feet. "The oldest sister," he continued, "tried hard to squeeze on a pair of eights, but without success. Finally she gave me an order to make a pair of nines, and they really look well on her foot. You wouldn't think they were nines to look at them."

"Are the girls Americans?"

"No," said Mr. Wolf. "They are rosy-cheeked Irish girls."

"What is the smallest size of gaiters sold?" we asked.

"Number ones," Mr. Wolf responded. "They were bought by a lady living in Macdougal street, and they were actually a little too large."

"Do you sell many number ones?"

"More ones than eights," said Mr. Wolf. "I have been in the business over fifteen years, and I find that the majority of those who wear ones are Southern and Spanish ladies."

"What is the difference between the foot of a Southern lady and that of a Yankee woman?" we inquired.

"The difference is the same as the difference between the foot of a Southern man and a Yankee," Mr. Wolf replied. "Southern feet are narrow and bowed in the middle, giving them a very high instep. The Yankee foot is spread at the toes, and has more surface. You, for instance, have a genuine Yankee foot. The difference from bunion to bunion—I peg pardon, from the joint of the big toe to the joint of the little toe—is much greater than that of a Southern foot. There is much grace about the foot of a Yankee lady, but it lacks the suppleness of a Southern foot. Its merits are its exquisite shape, small heel and strength. Compare the walk of a Southern woman with the walk of a Yankee woman. The Yankee lady has a short, springy step. The little heel first catches the sidewalk, and the gaiters sound like the click of a telegraph instrument. The Southern woman walks languidly and makes long steps. The feet make the difference. Let a Yankee girl attempt the step of a Southern lady, and she would turn her ankle. There is only one woman in the North whose foot will compare with the Southern foot."

"Name her," said the reporter.

"The Jersey woman" said Mr. Wolf. "The true Jersey woman has a foot on a par with that of a Kentucky belle. I can't imagine where she gets it, but she has it. One would think that the descendants of the Aquackenonck Dutch ought to have splay feet, but it is not so."

"Numbers of the Aquackenonck Dutch married among the French Huguenot families of Staten Island," the reporter remarked. "Isn't it possible that a mixture of the blood may have something to do with the size of the feet?"

"That's so," replied Mr. Wolf; I never thought of that. One thing is certain, I never saw a prettier foot than the foot of the blue-blooded Jersey woman. They would go into a salt cellar. It is worth a trip to Jersey just to see the feet of the women."

"How do the feet of the Jersey men compare with them?

"Good Lord!" exclaimed Mr. Wolf. "Don't talk about it. The real Jersey man has a foot like a griddle. Put a brick in a glove-box and it will lay clean over the foot of the Jersey man. If there is any one man in this world whose foot is uglier than any other one man in the world, that man is a Jersey man."

Here a customer entered the store, and Mr. Wolf turned his back upon the reporter and concentrated his powerful mind upon a new subject.

PROUD OF HIS FATHER.—"There were two men got into a fight in front of the store to-day," said a North-end man at the supper table, "and I tell you it looked pretty hard for one of them. The biggest one grabbed a cart-stake and drew it back. I thought sure he was going to knock the other's brains out, and I jumped in between them."

The family had listened with wrapt attention, and as the head paused in his narrative, the young heir, whose respect for his father's bravery was immeasurable, proudly remarked:

"He couldn't knock any brains out of you, could he father?"

The head of the family gazed long and earnestly at the heir, as if to detect evidence of a dawning humorist; but as the youth continued with great innocence to munch his fourth tart, he gasped, and resumed his supper.

STUFFED STEAK.—Select a good round-steak; pound well; season with pepper and salt; have prepared a nice dressing; spread over the steak; roll up and tie closely with twine; place in a dripping-pan, add a very little water, and bake in a well-heated oven, basting frequently with butter and water. Make a gravy of the drippings and serve at once, or it makes a delicious dish when cold for lunch or tea.

Also 160 acre farm and 80 acre farm, and 20 acre farm in Riga, any of which are decided bargains, and good reasons given for naming low prices.

Every purchaser of Lands should insist on being furnished an abstract of title, for our experience of more than 20 years shows that not more than one title in ten is perfect of record, and every week purchasers agreed upon are abandoned owing to imperfections of title. I have a good carriage or farm horse, 1300 lbs. in weight for sale at a bargain.

A few thousand dollars now on hand to loan at six per cent and on long time if desired.

Crows in Caucus.

A gentleman tells us of a marvelous sight which he saw one day in the early part of March, while he was journeying from Harper's Ferry to Washington. It was about an hour before sunset, and looking down the Potomac river toward the sea, as far as the eye could reach was a continuous flight of crows, moving in a belt about a third of a mile wide, and finally dropping out of sight over a ridge on the north side of a mountain lying to the eastward. A resident of the neighborhood who was familiar with the movement said the crows are going to their roosting place, and this phenomena had occured every night for years. The flight lasted for full an hour in a steady flowing stream which ended in a circling eddy, as the birds settled down to their roosts, resembling a great black funnel or whirlpool. It was a most amazing sight, and vastly more engaging than flights of pigeons roosting, which are intermittent; whereas this was continuous. The birds had doubtless scattered for forage during the day along the shores of the many estuaries and tributaries of the Chesapeake, and when darkness came winged their dusky flight back to their appointed rendezvous. The last bird home must have arrived late to bed.

FELINE AFFECTION.—A lover of animals writes that he has seen a cat give evidence of being in love with a terrier, and that the "spooning" going on between them was very comical. On one occasion, the dog, which was seated on a lady's lap, feeling dissatisfied or aggrieved at something or other that was taking place, vented his feelings in a low whining or howl. The cat, which was on the hearth-rug, turned her head and gazed with a wistful, sympathetic expression at her suffering friend for some seconds; at last, unable to listen to his weeping any longer, she sprang upon the lady's knee, put her paws around the dog's neck, and kissed his cheek with her lips. This occurred twice, the dog responding to her caresses by licking her back in the tenderest manner conceivable. To human lookers-on, the little scene was both touching and amusing.

Peculiarities of Speech.

Every one has some peculiarity of speech. The Yorkshire man is known all over England by his curious accent, and the Cockney has for centuries been the butt of ridicule for his unkind treatment of his "aitches" and his transpositions of V and W. Our Southerners call us all "Yankees" above Mason and Dixon's line, and accuse us of saying "I guess and calculate," and we retaliate by saying "I reckon that's so!" I have a lady friend who has a weakness for saying "I say!" and begins most of her sentences in that manner. One day some person was asking a mutual friend what Mrs. "I say" called her husband when she addressed him familiarly. His Christian name happened to be Hezekiah, or Ebenezer or Jehosaphat, or some other biblical name, hard to shorten into a pet name, as for example "Ebby," or "Hosey," or "Phattie." The friend made answer, "Oh, she merely calls him 'I say.'"

OUR CHIP BASKET

The amity that reason knits not, folly may easily untie.

Presents which our love for the donor has rendered precious are ever the most acceptable.

Good temper is like a sunny day; it sheds brightness over every thing; it is the sweetener of toil and the soother of disquietude.

Sydney Smith thus defines marriage: "It resembles a pair of shears, so joined that they cannot be separated, often moving in opposite directions, yet always punishing whoever may come between them."

It is lucky to pick up a horse-shoe, unless, of course, it happens to be attached to a mule's hind leg.

It is a great shock to a man's nervous system to have a suspender button fly off just when he is making a profound bow to a lady on the street.

"No pushee, no shovee, no pullee, allee samee go likee hellee," was the Chinaman's first exclamation upon seeing an automatic steam elevator.

"Bill," said one apprentice to another, "my boss is a better man to work for than your'n. My boss ain't always 'round his shop, interfering with his own business."

A distressed mother writes to a country newspaper for advice, which she gets thusly: "The only way to cure your son of staying out late o'nights is to break his legs or get the girl he runs after to do your housework."

Miss Prue—"There must be some one devoted to me, for I have received a beautiful valentine every year." Malicious little puss—"Oh, Pruey, dear, what a collection you must have."

"Have you damp sheets in your house?" asked a guest of a manager of a fashionable hotel, as he registered his name. "No," replied the manager but I'll have a pair dampened for you if you wish." The stranger retired.

A lady in Indiana called a certain rum-shop a murder-mill. She was prosecuted for slander; but being able to prove that her allegation was true, she won the suit. Murder-mills are to be found, not only in Indiana, but in every state and in every city of the Union.

The life of drudgery which many a woman leads who does her own housework was forcibly suggested by the innocent little girl, who, when asked if her mothers hair was gray, replied: "I don't know; she's too tall for me to see the top of her head, and she never sits down."

How to See a Seed Grow.

Many little folks wonder how a seed grows. Some boys and girls have taken up the seed after planting it in the ground, thereby preventing it from taking root.

We may, however, see the roots shooting out from the hyacinths and other bulbs that we grow in glasses in our our windows. And in this way we may see other seeds sprout and shoot:

A gentleman, to satisfy his children, took a glass tumbler, around which he tied a bit of common lace, allowing it to hang or drop down in the center of the glass. He then put enough water in the glass to cover the lower part of the lace; and in this hollow he dropped two sweet peas. The children were told to look at them every day, and they would learn what was going on under ground with similar seeds.

Next morning the children hurried from the breakfast-room to look at the glass with the peas, in the south window. They found that while they were asleep the little brown skins had burst, and a tiny white sprout was seen on the side of each pea. The little sprouts soon grew long enough to reach through the holes in the lace, and on the top of the peas two little green leaves were seen.

In time the children saw the white, thread-like roots reach almost to the bottom of the glass, while the green leaves grew large, and gave way to a stalk or stem.

In this way most all seeds may be seen to grow.

How Lincoln Told a Secret.

The following story about President Lincoln, which may not be new to all of our readers, was recently repeated by Bishop Simpson: I was informed one day that a committee from New York, composed of leading citizens, went to see him in reference to the conduct of the war. After they had transacted their general business, and the committee were making their way to the door—he was standing in the other part of the room—one of the gentlemen, who presumed on his acquaintance with Mr. Lincoln to ask particularly searching questions, stepped up to him, and in the lowest tone of voice said: "Mr. President, I would like to know where Burnside's fleet is going." Burnside had just sailed with a fleet, but the destination was unknown. "Well," said Mr. Lincoln, in a low tone of voice, "would you very much like to know?" "Yes," he said he would. "Well, now," said Mr. Lincoln, "if I would tell you, perhaps you would tell some one else." "No," said he, "I would not." Then Mr. Lincoln, putting up his hand to his face, and as if to whisper, said loud enough for all to hear, "He's gone to sea!"

Rose Culture.

One of the first secrets of success with the rose in guarding it against its several persistent enemies, such as the rose-bug, green fly, rose-slug, etc., is to keep the plant healthy and in vigorous growth. To insure this a rich soil is indispensable. Let it be composed of old decomposed sods or thoroughly-rotten manure. This earth should never be permitted to bake, but should be kept friable by frequent stirring. The aphis, or green fly, first attacks the young, tender shoots, feeding upon their juices. The pests may be killed by placing a barrel over the infested plant and burning tobacco in a flower pot or other vessel underneath. The rose-slug, that green-bodied, jelly-like pest, that feeds upon the surface of the leaves, leaving only the veins and ribs, may be kept in severe check, if not destroyed. As much as has been written about the culture of the rose, and about its insect enemies and their destruction, the above in our experience, embodies the whole story.

PROFESSIONAL TESTIMONY.—Many of the best physicians use Down's Elixir in their daily practice because it is the best cough remedy that can be made.

Business Talent.

A man entering upon business for himself needs skill, judgment, and perseverence as well as capital. If capital lie dormant it will produce nothing. It is the skill and energy with which capital is employed and made useful that in the end gives profit. Men of experience have made a start in mercantile life with little or no material wealth of their own. They did business with borrowed money, but they were men who possessed the requisite abilities within themselves to push their way up in this world. A tradesman's resources consist of his manner of turning mere trifles to a permanent advantage. His manner of transacting his affairs speaks well or ill of his future success. Twice as much money as is necessary to conduct a business would, in some hands, be squandered by bad management, and the person or persons conducting it find themselves bankrupts when they should have gained a competency. To be highly successful, a man of business should have an intimate knowledge of the exact wants of his customers, and the proper time to buy and sell. In this case knowledge is power, for no business venture should be trusted to chance.

TO THE AFFLICTED.

Since the introduction of Kellogg's Columbian Oil it has made more permanent cures and given better satisfaction on Kidney complaints and Rheumatism than any known remedy. Its continued series of wonderful cures in all climates has made it known as a safe and reliable agent to employ against all aches and pains, which are the forerunners of more serious disorders. It acts speedily and surely, always relieving suffering and often saving life. The protection it affords by its timely use on Rheumatism, kidney affection, and all aches and pains, wounds, cramping pains, cholera morbus, diarrhœa, coughs, colds, catarrh, and disorders among children, makes it an invaluable remedy to be kept always on hand in every home. No person can afford to be without it, and those who have once used it never will. It is absolutely certain in its remedial effects and will always cure when cures are possible. Call at C.A. Wright & Co's. and get a memorandum book giving more full details of the curative properties of this wonderful medicine.

Watch the Reading for Children.

Parents should give their children the advantage of a good healthy library, and furnish them with papers that respect the morals. Select the matter for your children. Take time, since the whole future of your son or daughter may lie directly in the literature which you place before them. The writer knows of cases that came under his own observation which resulted in great harm and all the result of reading filth. You are interested in the future of your child; take care of the reading matter. There is nothing more injurious to the development of the mind and the formation of character in young people than for them to form the habit of reading corrupt literature. It is in such books that the false side of life is given to the young, and they will get the idea that life is not the great, earnest battle which each must fight for himself. It is from what we read that we derive many of our thoughts and ideas, which influence many of our deeds and actions in after life. If our reading is pure, the thoughts obtained will likewise be pure; but if it is degrading in its nature, it will pull us down to a level with itself.

Man's Noblest Work.

This is an age of great works and wonderful inventions. Steam, electricity, water, air, all are made to serve man, but unquestionably the greatest inventions are those which preserve man's health and prolong his life, and among the greatest of these is Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Its effects are truly wonderful and hundreds are happy to day, who looked forward to an early grave. For Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, loss of voice, Hay Fever, Hoarseness, Croup, or any affection whatever of the Throat, Chest or Lungs, Dr. King's New Discovery will positively cure. We can cheerfully recommend it to all, and can unhesitatingly say it is the only sure cure for Throat and Lung affections. Trial bottles ten cents; regular size $1. For sale by C. A. Wright & Co., Tecumseh.

How to Make Beef Tea.

We find in the Boston Journal of Chemistry, (most excellent authority, by the way) the following directions:

"Beef tea is too well known to need any special recommendation. But it is too often spoiled in the making. One ounce of beef to six tablespoonfuls of water is a fair proportion for a good article. Cut the meat into dice, put it into a stewpan and add the water cold. Certain components of the beef are soluble in cold water; therefore let it stand ten minutes, then put it to heat very gradually, and at last boil it for ten minutes. Chicken for broth should be boiled six hours in a covered stone jar set into a pan of boiling water. Gelatine, which was for a long time considered so absolutely innutritious, but is now recognized by the best authorities as valuable food, renders beef tea or chicken broth more nourishing, and, as a change, more acceptible to the patient. Soak a quarter of an ounce of gelatine into a quarter of a pint of cold water, add to it a cupful of the tea or broth, and stir it over the fire till the gelatine is dissolved; when cold it will be a firm jelly."

DRUGGISTS SPEAK.—"When we are asked to recommend something to nourish and strengthen the blood we always say take Malt Biters."

"Best blood purifier we know of."

"Rapidly displacing all other bitters."

For weakness, nervousness and the fruits of dissipation nothing like Malt Bitters."

"Women and children take them freely."

Ammonia in the Kitchen.

The pantry shelves are getting grimy, or finger marks around the door-latches and knobs are looking dark and unsightly. For lack of time they are left, day after day, for it is hard work to scour all the time, and it wears off the paint, too. The husband keeps his bottle of oil, or perhaps a large can holds it, for he never stints in that. Now, suppose his wife has her bottle of spirits of ammonia to use; she takes her basin of water and a clean cloth, just puts on a few drops of the fluid and wipes off all the dirt; it is worth more than a half day's labor, and does not hurt the paint either. She could put a few drops in her dish-water, and see how easily the dishes could be cleaned; a few drops on a sponge would clean all the windows in the sitting-room, making them shine like crystal. It would take the stains off the teaspoons, too, and a spoonful in the mop-pail would do more toward washing up the kitchen floor than ten pounds of elbow grease applied to the mop-handle. A housewife has just as much right to make her work easy and expeditious as her husband has. If she does not do it, the fault is her own in a great measure.

A Wonderful Discovery.

For the speedy cure of Consumption and all diseases that lead to it, such as stubborn Coughs, neglected Colds, Bronchitis, Hay Fever, Asthma, pain in the side and chest, dry hacking cough, tickling in the throat, Hoarseness, Sore Throat, and all chronic or lingering diseases of the throat and lungs, Dr. King's New Discovery has no equal and has established for itself a world-wide reputation. Many leading physicians recommend and use it in their practice. The formula from which it is prepared is highly recommended by all medical journals. The clergy and the press have complimented it in the most glowing terms. Go to your druggist and get a trial bottle free of cost, or regular size for $1.00. For sale by M. THE ASSAGIA.—The shaft of this instrument of warfare is about five feet long and about as thick as a man's little finger. It is made of wood known to botanists as the curtissa of Joginea, not unlike mahogany, brittle and elastic, the latter quality giving the spear a vibratory motion, on which its accuracy of flight depends. The blade of the weapon is generally blade-shaped, with a raised edge along the center, concave on one side and convex on the other, being like the feathers of an arrow. The tange of the head is made red hot, and so burns its way into the wood, around which wet rawhide is bound; that contracting as it dries holds the head as firmly as an iron ring. The Zulus fling these weapons with great accuracy, and they carry oval rawhide shields impervious to these darts to cover their entire bodies. Besides three or four missile assagias, a Zulu soldier carries a shorter and stronger stabbing assagai.

Facts About Flour.

Flour is peculiarly sensitive to atmospheric influences, hence it should never be stored in a room with sour liquids, nor where onions or fish are kept, nor any article that taints the air of the room in which it is stored. Any smell perceptible to the sense will be absorbed by flour. Avoid damp cellars or lofts where a free circulation of air cannot be obtained. Keep in a cool, dry, airy room, and not exposed to a freezing temperature nor to intense summer or artificial heat for any length of time above 70° to 75° Fahr. It should not come in contact with grain or other substances which are liable to heat. Flour should be sifted and the particles thoroughly disintegrated, and then warmed before baking. This treatment improves the color and baking properties of the dough. The sponge should be prepared for the oven as soon as the yeast has performed its mission, otherwise fermentation sets in and acidity results.

MARRY TOO YOUNG.—A lady says: "We read a great deal about the extravagance of wives, and of girls marrying, without knowing how to cook or take care of a family. I should like to ask who is to blame for this state of affairs? Girls will be girls, and it will be useless to try to make women of them until they are old enough. If young men insist upon marrying girls before they are old enough to assume the responsibility of motherhood, they must abide by the consequences. The girls don't propose to the young men, neither do they urge an early marriage; it is the young men that do this; and many a young girl has been coaxed into marriage when she felt she was too young, by the same young man who will after marriage fret because his child-wife can't cook as mother did"

Ague Cure

Is a purely vegetable bitter and powerful tonic, and is warranted a speedy and certain cure for Fever and Ague, Chills and Fever, Intermittent or Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, and all malarial disorders. In miasmatic districts, the rapid pulse, coated tongue, thirst, lassitude, loss of appetite, pain in the back and loins, and coldness of the spine and extremities, are only premonitions of severer symptoms, which terminate in the ague paroxysm, succeeded by high fever and profuse perspiration.

It is a startling fact, that quinine, arsenic and other poisonous minerals, form the basis of most of the "Fever and Ague Preparations," "Specifics," "Syrups," and "Tonics," in the market. The preparations made from these mineral poisons, although they are palatable, and may break the chill, do not cure, but leave the malarial and their own drug poison in the system, producing quinism, dizziness, ringing in the ears, headache, vertigo, and other disorders more formidable than the disease they were intended to cure. AYER'S AGUE CURE thoroughly eradicates these noxious poisons from the system, and always cures the severest cases. It contains no quinine, mineral, or any thing that could injure the most delicate patient; and its crowning excellence, above its certainty to cure, is that it leaves the system as free from disease as before the attack.

For Liver Complaints, AYER'S AGUE CURE, by direct action on the liver and biliary apparatus, drives out the poisons which produce these complaints, and stimulates the system to a vigorous, healthy condition.

We warrant it when taken according to directions.

THE NEW RAILROAD ASSURED.

Developments have recently taken place which render it certain that the T. & M. railroad will be built and that the Tecumseh line has been fixed upon. The following article from the Adrian Times of last Thursday contains the gist of the matter, and the extracts taken from the Detroit Free Press confirm the report as contained in the Times in every particular.

Adrian Times, April 21: The facts are that a syndicate has been formed to build a new line that shall be an extension of the Columbus & Toledo. Hon. John S. Newberry, of Detroit, is a member of that syndicate, and in that gentleman's office, on yesterday, a representative of the Times had a look at a map on which the proposed line was marked out, and also received some valuable information in regard to the line which is now, we believe, for the first time given to the public.

The line of road, as at present marked out, will be by no means a new line over the whole distance from Toledo to Detroit. A new line will be constructed from Toledo to the line of the Detroit & Butler railroad, in the town of Ridgeway, this county, and thence traffic will pass over the D. & B. line into Detroit. But this is not all. In Ridgeway, after crossing the D. & B. road, the new line takes a turn to the west, runs through Tecumseh and thence to Marshall, following in fact one of the many lines surveyed for the Toledo & Milwaukee road. The extension of the C. & T. road will enter upon and possess all the rights and privileges of the T. & M. company, which has been swallowed. The notes given as bonus to the T. & M. road will be taken by its successor, and our Tecumseh friends might as well be drawing their wallets, for the road will be certainly built this year, and will as certainly go through their village. We congratulate them.

Beyond Marshall the route of the road is undetermined. It may push from there directly north, to penetrate the lumber region, or it may continue on the T. & M. survey to the shores of Lake Michigan.

The business of the road will be principally coal and lumber. It is to be constructed in order that the vast deposits of coal in Ohio can be pushed to market. The coal regions are great consumers of lumber, and this road will carry out coal and bring back lumber, and other products. Of course the road will be in shape to do other business, but the principal freightage will be coal and lumber. It is in the interests of the Columbus & Toledo, and Columbus & Hocking Valley roads.

The advantages of this road, both to Adrian and Tecumseh, will be very great. The company will run their cars over the Butler line to this city, and will put down coal here as cheap, if not cheaper, than it will be done by the Lake Shore company. We shall get fuel cheaply, we shall have competing freights, for the new line will be in the Pennsylvania interest. And under the stimulus of a new road Tecumseh will blossom out with new life.

Detroit Free Press, April 23: Knowing that Hon. John S. Newberry was interested in the scheme, a representative of this paper called upon him yesterday and asked what was the exact status of affairs, and was courteously given the following information:

The Hocking Valley road controls the best coal fields in Ohio, and it built the Columbus & Toledo railroad to enable it to find an outlet at Toledo for this coal. It now finds that the present arrangements at Toledo and the existing railways do not afford sufficient facilities for it to meet the demand from Michigan for coal, and therefore it was some time since determined to run an independent line into Michigan, as indispensable for the prosperity of the company; accordingly a syndicate of Columbus and Toledo capitalists, with Mr. Newberry as the only Michigan member (though he will soon be joined by James McMillan, and perhaps others), was formed, and matters were pushed in a quiet, business-like way, until now all uncertainty has been eliminated. This line has been surveyed and the right of way entirely secured as far as Marshall; maps have been made and everything is in readiness to push the work with dispatch.

The new road starting from Toledo will cross the Detroit, Butler & St. Louis railroad, between Milan and Ridgeway, and will run through to Marshall via Tecumseh and Homer. From Marshall the route is not fully determined, but will take one of three directions according to the amount of bonus offered. One route, if adopted, will make Saugatuck the terminus, another will go to Grand Rapids and Grand Haven, and the third will run almost due north.

The Detroit business of the road will be transacted through the Butler road, and its magnitude may be comprehended when it is known that 100 carloads of coal are now brought daily from the Hocking Valley road to Detroit by the Butler over its Toledo and Ann Arbor connection, and that this amount will be doubled as soon as this extension is built and the Butler has secured proper terminal facilities at Detroit.

The road will be a coal and lumber road, carrying the coal of the Hocking Valley up into the heart of Michigan and in return carrying back the lumber products of our vast forests. It will be in operation as far as Marshall probably in September and certainly in October, and will probably prove one of the most beneficial enterprises for the state at large which has been undertaken for years. To Detroit it will prove of benefit in many ways, not the least of which will be in affording a new route to Cincinnati and the South. The road will cross every railroad in the southern part of the State, and being on good terms with them all it will start under bright auspices.

A letter to the Free Press was received yesterday from a prominent officer of the Columbus & Toledo railroad, in answer to a request for information in regard to the extension, and is as follows:

TOLEDO, O., April 21, 1881.

Free Press Co., Detroit, Mich:

Gentlemen—Yours of the 19th at hand. In reference to the article in the Cincinnati Enquirer of the 18th inst., relative to the "Detroit extension of the Columbus & Toledo railroad," would say, I am unable to learn that our company have arrived at any definite decision as to an extension to Detroit. Our business the past season has suffered severely from the fact that our connecting lines, over which our business passes, have not the adequate terminal accommodations in Detroit, all of which has caused a good deal of talk, and it is possible that the statements referred to have arisen from the discussion of this subject. I understand, however, that the Lake Shore company intend to largely increase their terminal facilities this year at Detroit with a view of directly accommodating this trade.

Free Press, April 25: The Free Press Saturday, in reply to a request for information, received a letter from F. H. Medary, secretary and treasurer of the Columbus & Toledo railroad company, saying: "The extension of the Columbus & Toledo railroad to Detroit has not been decided upon." This statement is in perfect harmony with that which Mr. Newberry made to a representative of this paper and which was published on Saturday morning. The same thing has been published by various papers, but as many misapprehend its force, and take it to mean that the Michigan extension is not decided upon, it is thought best to give the whole thing in the most condensed form. The extension to Marshall and beyond will certainly be built at once. There will be no distinct and independent line to Detroit, but the connection with the Butler at Ridgeway gives to the city all the advantages of an independent line. The road is on good terms with the Lake Shore and the Butler, and will antagonize neither, but will run in connection with both of them.

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

APRIL 18.—After the reading of the journal Senator Harris asked permission to read a statement made at his request by Mr. Robert P. Porter, of the Census Bureau, in regard to the State debt of Tennessee. Mr. Porter's communication gave a complete history of the debt of that State, from the issue of the first bonds in 1835 to the passage of the funding act of three weeks ago refunding the principal of the debt at 3 per cent. He showed that while the State creditors had lost half their interest, and the interest on eleven coupons and a large amount in the depreciation of the bonds the State had not repudiated any of its debt. The communication also gave a detail of the dates of the sales of the different railroads by the State and the amounts for which they were sold; also the purposes for which all the bonds had been issued.

The debate in the senate was continued by Messrs. Dawes, Saulsbury, Burnside, and Beck. The latter argued against the right of a majority to elect officers at an extra session, and declared that in December next they would be willing to consider the resolution, but in his judgment Riddleberger would not in December be made sergeant-at-arms. The Virginia election would then be over, and if the republicans did not tender, somebody else would tender, for sergeant-at-arms, one who was a conservative republican, who had fought through the war in the federal army, who would be here with his wounds upon him, and then the republicans could choose between the confederate repudiating Riddleberger and that man who would be tendered to them, he thought, by a republican senator. It might as well be understood that in December next the republicans would not put Riddleberger in. Any promises which he might make in Virginia would prove fallacious.

Senator Brown spoke for a half-hour in defense of the claim that the Constitution was framed not so much for the elevation of majorities as for the protection of the rights of minorities.

A great deal of time was then consumed in petty debate and roll-calls after which the Senate adjourned.

April 19.—The unfinished business was laid before the Senate. A motion to go into executive session was lost. Petitions relative to the case of Boyton were referred to the Foreign Relations Committee.

Mr. Blair offered the following:

"Resolved. In the judgment of the Senate, public interests require Congress to be convened in public session immediately."

Mr. Blair, in support of the resolution, read a letter asserting that a recent decision of the Supreme Court meant ruin to the hosiery and knit goods industry of New England, and suggested an extra session of Congress as a relief.

He called the attention of the Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations to the fact that DeLesseps was digging his canal to-day, and it was becoming a vested right. There could be no remedy for this if immediate action were not taken unless it be by war. The Senate was booked until December. The Senators on the other side had taken their position and it would be cowardly for them to retract from it. The Republican Senators had taken their position and it would be cowardly for them to retreat. He offered the resolution without any consultation with his colleagues. Let the deadlock be broken in a way which the Democrats would consent to have it broken.

Mr. Logan spoke in refutation of the charges made, and which he characterized as slanders, that he at any time sympathized with secession. He read, in support of his denial of the charges, a letter which he had received from Senators Lamar and Pugh, who served with him in Congress at the outbreak of the war, bearing testimony to his (Logan's) loyalty to the Union at that time. He also quoted from speeches made by him to show his opposition to secession, and challenges anybody to show any speech in which he had upheld rebellion. He denied explicitly the various charges that he had raised a company to join the Rebels, and read letters to prove these charges to be absolutely false.

Senator Brown (Ga.) and many other Democratic Senators expressed themselves as thoroughly satisfied with Mr. Logan's statement.

Don Cameron followed, reading a set speech, in which he characterized the proceedings of the Democracy of the Senate as revolutionary and of piece with that which plunged the country into four years war. He appealed to the Democrats to pause in their mad career. This country could not be made great and good unless all parties buried such hindrances as jealousy and ostracism. Cameron's allusion to their "mad career," was received by the Democrats with laughter, but no reply was made.

At 4:10 the Senate adjourned.

APRIL 20.—The Vice-President laid before the Senate, as unfinished business, the resolution of officers, and the debate immediately began. Messrs. Dawes, Jonas, Brown and Frye participating therein.

Mr. Dawes corrected the statement made by him several days ago concerning the outrage on a Massachusetts man in Mississippi. The circumstances transpired in Louisiana, and Mr. Dawes expressed regret that he should have attributed it to Mississippi through misinformation.

Mr. Frye (Me.) made a speech, charging the Democrats with the knowledge of being in the wrong, and acting contrary to the Constitution, and admitting that they displayed remarkable bravery in their position. The Senator from Georgia was particularly brave in attacking the great Goliath of Massachusetts, since, unlike David of Holy Writ, he knew the Lord was not on his side. He laid the great evils of the half century before the war at the door of Democratic barbarism; also the war itself, and traced its continuance in the suffrage farce of the Solid South. Civilization now again asserted itself, and declared that every man, black or white, in this country, should have his full rights, and with God's help, the Republicans would see that they had them.

After remarks by Senators Brown and Hampton, Butler (S. C.) arose to say that he did not think any one would be blinded by the ruse of the Senator from Maine to divert attention from the real issue of the hour, which was whether a corrupt bargain had or had not been entered upon in the Senate.

A bitter debate ensued between Burnside and Butler, the former becoming greatly excited saying that any charge of a corrupt bargain was false. Said he: "I have heard this thing long enough, and I am not going to stand it. I repeat it: Any one who charges such a bargain tells a falsehood."

Butler declined to be betrayed into any unparliamentary language, and expressed surprise at the Senator from Rhode Island losing his temper.

"I am not at all excited," replied Mr. Burnside, "but I say that any one charging a corrupt bargain charges what is false."

Butler continued that if the Senator from Rhode Island hoped by any such manner to deter him from a full and free discussion of any subject, he was greatly mistaken.

Hoar and Hill resumed the discussion of the suffrage laws, and occupied their time until 4:50 when the Senate adjourned.

APRIL 21.—The Vice-President laid before the Senate the unfinished business—the resolution for the election of officers.

By unanimous consent, the papers on file in the Senate relating to the subject of bankruptcy were referred to the committee on Judiciary.

The only interesting feature of the Senate proceedings was a heated and rather amusing colloquy between Senators Don Cameron and Dawes. The former had organized a party to visit the Hon. Simon Cameron, at Harrisburg, Pa., and he wanted the Senate to adjourn until Monday. Dawes objected, and Cameron accused him of inconsistency, saying that it was to accommodate him that the Senate adjourned two weeks ago. Dawes denied the impeachment, and entered his protest. Cameron insisted on his motion, and it received a majority of one vote. Dawes intimated that he would regard an affirmative vote as an instruction to abandon the policy heretofore pursued by the Republican side. A Democratic Senator at once changed his vote to "aye," whereupon the Republicans who had voted in the affirmative stampeded, with Cameron at their head, and the motion was lost by 25 to 18. The debate of the day was flat and uninteresting.

Adjourned.

APRIL 22.—The unfinished business came up and a motion to go into executive session was lost.

THE Butler road will not build a grain elevator at Adrian.

LAST Thursday Geo. Dibble and William Pocklington had an unfriendly encounter upon our streets. It seems that they own a road scraper in partnership and both wanted to use it at the same time. Both insisted on using it and finally to solve the perplexity they took recourse to blows. Dibble pounded Pocklington considerably on his head so that one eye was no use to him for some time. Pocklington had a warrant taken out for Dibble's arrest for assault and battery, and officers Merritt, Anderson and Smyth went after him. They found Dibble at his home in Ridgeway and Deputy Sheriff Merritt remained with him while Anderson and Smyth went on to obtain a man to go his bail. But before they reached the bondsman a serious accident befell our newly elected marshall and constable. It was about twelve o'clock at night when they were crossing the Butler railroad track near Linn's in Ridgeway, which is about ten feet above the level of the road and steep embankments on both sides. They had ascended the embankment and on account of the darkness could not see where to drive in order to descend. They drove ahead but the place was so steep that the buggy was thrown forward precipitating the occupants to the ground. John struck all right, but Berf hit his shoulder upon the ground dislocating the joint. They finally reached the bottom, and after taking their bearings went on. Dibble procured bail and at his examination Monday plead guilty and was released by paying the costs. Berf had his shoulder attended to and is now wearing his arm in a sling.

LETTER FROM KANSAS.

LAWRENCE, April 13, 1881.

Old citizens of Tecumseh having gathered in this vicinity of late years we occasionally have a reunion of an informal character. Such an one occurred last Saturday evening at "Burr Oak Farm," the delightful residence of Mr. Charles Strong, Sr., where he and his estimable wife delight to extend hospitality to their friends and those friends delight to gather. At that time A. B. Ward and wife, Walter Cheever, wife and child and T. D. Griffith and wife spent an evening in happy reminiscences of old times and people in Lenawee county. Thinking some items as to the present whereabouts and circumstances of some of those we discussed may be of interest to old timers caused the resolve to furnish them to you. Mr. Strong is pleasantly located, six miles from this city, on a beautiful farm of 320 acres, where he is growing in years and wealth, retaining as of yore the confidence and respect of all with whom he comes in contact. His son Charles owns 320 acres across the road south of the senior "Charlie," and seems to be in many respects "a chip off the old block," especially as regards thrift. His family consists of a wife and four children, all bright fine appearing children. Fred, a younger son, lives in Leavenworth county, is farming and married; is I think doing well. His daughter, Mrs. Strickland, lives at Valley Falls. Mr. Strickland is at present traveling in Utah. A. B. Ward owns a fine quarter section adjoining Chas. Strong, Jr., on the west; is improving his place so that it is beginning to look like a Michiganders home. His son-in-law, Mr. Cheever, makes his home with him at present and we hope that he will determine to locate permanently among us. A little more than three years ago T. D. Griffith met at Mr. Strong's house, Mrs. N. C. Drew, a daughter of Dudley Cheeney, and effected an arrangement which resulted in her removing from Indiana to Kansas, and now they go to Mr. Strong's together. Edward H. Hoag is located at Newton, engaged in banking business, is doing well and surrounded by a pleasant family. His brother-in-law, Will M. McConnell, is farming but not married. I hope he may yet conclude that "it is not well for man to be alone." Wm. Van Camp, with his brother-in-law J. H. Wheeler, assisted by his son Fred and wife, are doing a good business in dry goods at Sedalia, Mo., where they are neighbors of Mrs. Noah Tindall's daughters, granddaughters and son-in-law Wheeler. Both the Wheelers mentioned are sons of Sol Wheeler. There is one sad item to mention in connection with these notes. When this writer was a boy there came a young man of good appearance and ability to Tecumseh to clerk in Latimer's store. In the course of time he married one of the favorite young ladies of the village, political honors were conferred upon him and fortune seemed smiling, but in an evil hour a base and unfounded suspicion against his wife took possession of his mind, and he abandoned his home, his wife and his child to become a wanderer. After years of varied experience he was brought in a freighter's wagon from Denver to Leavenworth county in this State, a bruised and broken body covering a broken spirit. Here he has spent in an aimless, harmless manner the years since until a few months ago, when what was mortal of Lucius G. Sholes was placed in the cold grave by stranger's hands. A few weeks before his death he made inquiry through Mrs. Strong after his wife and child, desiring to know whether they were yet alive. Let us hope that repentance came before the change.

HENRY STEVENS is preparing to build a storing cellar under his building at the depot.

WHAT is Tecumseh doing with the liberal offer of Mr. Lewis to establish a woolen mill here?

THE Clinton News has commenced its third volume. We are a little tardy in announcing the fact, but congratulate neighbor Clough upon his success nevertheless.

LAST Thursday a deputy sheriff of this county arrested one of the business men of Pittsford for forgery. He came to the town a number of months ago, from Ohio, and the citizens thought him to be a good and honorable business man.

—On account of increasing trade, and consequently lack of room to show the elegant stock of New Goods daily arriving, Miss M. C. Dingman has been obliged to remove her millinery rooms to the store formerly occupied by D. Jones as a clothing house. She has the entire front of this store, and has made arrangements for the largest and most complete line of millinery goods for spring and summer trade ever brought to Tecumseh.

—This spring everything seems to be on the "boom," new buildings are under way of construction, our street commissioner is digging round the streets, the trees are beginning to bud out, and it seems as if everything was breaking forth at once. Our merchants even are trying to follow the spirit of rushing things. We stepped into Jas. A. Eaton & Co's. store last Tuesday and saw as splendid a supply of dress goods, dress trimmings and ladies' furnishing goods as ever come to this market. They also keep on hand, and are getting every day new designs in lace curtains, carpets, oil cloths, and everything that a person would wish in this line, to make a home tasty and comfortable. This establishment has the advantage of immense stocks of dry goods in Toledo and Adrian to select from besides the best of Eastern markets.

See J. W. Wooden before you make your contract for ice.

—Those desiring choice plants for window gardening or out-door culture, cut flowers for funeral and wedding purposes, go to Mrs. D. P. Spalding's conservatory of rare and beautiful plants, two doors north of the Episcopal church, Tecumseh, Mich. Orders by mail promptly attended to. Wire designs of all styles constantly on hand.

—Now is the best time to paint.—Remember Baker & Hall have a full line of white and colored paints, varnishes, etc.

—Bananas for Saturday at Davidson's.

—Everybody contemplating building should be sure and get Ralph Jewel's prices on Sash, Doors, and Blinds. He is underselling all competitors in that line and also on Locks, Latches, Hinges, &c. Call on him at Adrian, Mich.

—Anybody who wants to get the worth of their money in Hardware, should call on Ralph Jewel, Adrian.

—See what a fine line of Carriages and Platform Spring Wagons Kennedy & Co. have.

—Ralph Jewel still continues to lead the Hardware trade of the county and is selling Sash, Doors and Blinds way down. Call and see him at Adrain.

—Don't buy your nails for building until you have seen Ralph Jewel at Adrian. You will save money by buying your building material of him.

—If you wish to secure Photographs, taken by Brown, the Photographer, call soon. Children's pictures a specialty. We go to Clinton every Friday.

—One of the best blood purifiers ever made is "King of the Blood." Sold by Druggists generally. Manufactured by D. Ransom Son & Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Jackson Citizen: Burt Wicks, while duck hunting, Saturday afternoon last, in the Michigan Center mill-pond, had a narrow escape from drowning. After falling in the water from out his boat, which was accidentally capsized, he came to the surface four times, and had it not been for some gentlemen, who were hunting on the pond at the same time, coming to the rescue, he would have been drowned.

The last meeting of the farmers' union, of Hillsdale and Lenawee counties, was held at Pratville, Hillsdale county, on Saturday, April 16. Of Wm. Hill, who died at Buchanan the other day, aged 79, it is said he never drank a cup of coffee or tea, never smoked a pipe or cigar, never took a chew of tobacco nor a drink of anything intoxicating, and never uttered an oath in his life. If true, this is indeed an extraordinary record.

Jackson Patriot: There seems to be greater activity in building this spring in Jackson than for many years heretofore, and there is plenty of employment for mechanics of all kinds. The lumber yards, report an unusual demand for building material, both in city and country.

The St. Joseph Advertiser gives a summary of a very peculiar criminal case, in which defendant having waived examination, and not being able to procure bail, has been committed for trial at the circuit court. The case is that of the People, on the complaint of Elizabeth Benner, against William E. Snowden, and the charge made by Mrs. Benner, who is a divorced woman about thirty-two years old, is that Snowden, who is about thirty-five years old, compelled her to marry him against her consent and wishes. The circumstances she states in substance as follows: She is engaged in the millinery business at Goshen Ind. Defendant has worked as journeyman blacksmith at Goshen for some time. Complainant and defendant boarded at the same house, and of course, had a speaking acquaintance, she alleges, scarcely more. On the 15th of March, Snowden told Mrs. Benner that he had occasion to go into the country about four miles to see a man and collect some money, and asked her if she would not ride with him. She assented, and in due time they started. After they had ridden some distance the woman noticed that Snowden had taken the glove from his right hand, and as the weather was chilly she spoke to him about it. He said it was all right, and not long afterwards he took a revolver from his pocket, and remarked that he had made up his mind to marry her, and she must say yes or no to the proposition before they reached the next four corners, then a little distance ahead. In case she answered no he announced it to be his intention to shoot her dead and then kill himself at the four corners. His method of "popping the question," and the persuasive accompaniments, were to much for open resistance, and she didn't say "no" out loud. He then told her he was going to Michigan to be married, and that if at any time before the completion of the marriage ceremony she should attempt to thwart his purpose by resisting or answering unfavorably any questions asked by the Justice before whom they would go, he would kill her and himself, no matter how many might be present. She says she believed him, and dare not do otherwise than as he directed. They proceeded to Mottville, took dinner at the hotel, were married by Esquire Rathfon, and returned to Goshen the same day, and she claims that she was kept so close a prisoner and in such fear, that she had no opportunity to make known the facts until the morning of the 17th of March, when she made complaint, and Snowden was arrested.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

TYNER'S SUCCESSOR.

It is reported to-day that ex-Senator B. K. Bruce, of Mississippi, will succeed First Assistant Postmaster General Tyner, and the latter will probably be provided with a place abroad.

KNIT AND SCOTCH CAPS.

Secretary Windom listened to a long argument, Saturday, on the change of the late treasury rulings as to knit goods, and Scotch caps in particular. The secretary gave an assurance that no injustice should be done in this American industry.

THE TREASURY SOLICITORSHIP.

The report that the appointment as solicitor of the treasury has been tendered Warren M. Bateman, of Cincinnati, is authoritatively denied. The only foundation for the report is the fact that ex-Secretary Sherman suggested his name to the President.

BREADSTUFFS.

The total value of exports of domestic breadstuffs in the nine months ended March, last, $204,682,850, against $211,173,170 for the same months ended March, 1880.

THE FRIGATE CONSTITUTION.

The United States Frigate Constitution left League Island, the United States naval station near Philadelphia, ten days ago. Some apprehensions for her safety are felt. It is said she was imperfectly manned, and doubts are expressed as to her seaworthiness.

SIX PER CENT. BONDS HELD BY BANKS.

The comptroller of the currency, upon examination of securities held by national banks, reports that 475 banks in thirty states and territories hold 6's of 1881 to secure circulating notes amounting in the aggregate to $46,275,850.

PAIRED AND LEAVING.

Mr. Slater is paired with Platt, of Connecticut, and is going to Oregon, not to return this season. Platt is going away also. Frye is called away for some time, and several other senators are desirous of leaving for their homes. It begins to look as if the senate will be left without a quorum.

MACVEAGH AND CHANDLER.

Friends of Atty. Gen. MacVeagh say that if Wm. E. Chandler is confirmed as solicitor general the former will decline to assign him any court business, as he has authority to do, and will confine Mr. Chandler to office work. It is evident that Mr. MacVeagh is determined to prevent Chandler from becoming solicitor general.

TRADE WITH MEXICO.

Secretary Blaine, in talking to a newspaper man, said that he intends to use every exertion to increase the trade between the United States and Mexico, and that he wants to see legislation enacted next winter by congress to increase the facilities for communication between this country and Mexico, and to build up the Mexican trade.

THE STAR ROUTES.

The official figures show that the annual pay on ninety-three star routes out of 9,925 was raised between the lettings of 1878 and Jan. 1, 1881, from $727,119 to $2,802,314. The regular appropriation for the star-route service for the year ending June 30, 1882, was $5,000,000. Of this amount $2,802,314 was absorbed by the ninety-three routes noted; leaving $3,097,686 for the remaining 9,132 routes.

THE BOYTON'S.

The State Department is just now somewhat embarrassed by the Boyton family. Michael is in prison in England for operations with the Land League, and Paul the swimmer, is in Cuba in durance for participation in the naval operations of the Chilians. Mr. Blaine will see that both the men have fair play, although it is said he thinks it is rather puzzling to have to a single family to make such a demand for diplomacy.

A UNION PACIFIC CLAIM.

A petition has been filed with the United States court of claims by the Union Pacific Railroad company for the compensation for transportation of mails. The amount claimed to be due is $4,193,930. The petitioner maintains that one half of the sum claimed is earned, namely $2,096,965, should be applied by the government to the payment of the bonds issued by the government in aid of the construction of the road, and that the other half should be paid over in money to the company.

THE DEADLOCK.

Notwithstanding the reports, there has not been as yet any effort for a republican senatorial caucus. Nor is it clear that there may be a call during the week. But if present indications are not in favor of such a call. The adjournment is working most powerfully against the pending nominations. It ought to be strength enough to succeed. Whether it will or not, is a matter of subject indifference to the country and to the republican. The deadlock is not to be settled through intrigue or manipulation. It will simply die a natural death some morning with or without any special reason.

THE PRESIDENT'S DESIRE.

President Garfield has declared to leading republican senators his earnest desire that the pending nominations be confirmed, especially the most important ones. He spoke of the embarrassment of the administration and some of its departments and divisions because of unfilled vacancies in important positions. The sentiment among republicans in favor of confirming important nominations has been growing of late, and the request of the president has determined the republicans to hold a caucus for the consideration of this matter, and to arrange for executive sessions. The caucus will be held, it is said, before the middle of next week, and some republican senators favor the holding of it to-morrow. The caucus may select a list of unobjected nominations for confirmation. There are pending one hundred and fifty-four nominations, most of which have not been referred to committees.

NO COALITION.

Statements made about a bargain, or coalition, between Conkling and the democratic senators for the rejection of Robertson are entirely unfounded. There has been neither bargain nor coalition, though quite a number of democratic senators express a determination to vote with Conkling. This grows out of a belief that the administration is unfriendly to the south, and not from any understanding with Conkling. Friends of Senator Conkling say he could not make such a coalition if he desired, and would not if he could, because he is too true a republican. Democratic senators who are willing to vote with Conkling put it entirely upon the ground that they believe it to be best for the democratic party.

SECRETARY BLAINE.

A well-known Washington politician is the authority for the statement that Secretary Blaine is suffering from Bright's disease of the kidneys, and that he will never be a well man again. He says that the worst symptom in Mr. Blaine's case now is the fact that his eyes have lost their color and are bleached as white as his face. This, he says, only comes when the disease is so far advanced as to render recovery almost hopeless. Secretary Blaine has the same nervousness and disinclination to be regarded as sick that marked the manner of Mr. Carpenter during the last year of his life, when the same dread disease was drawing him rapidly to the grave.

THE PENSION BUREAU SITE.

The Attorney General has delivered an opinion on the question involved in the pension office appropriation in the sundry civil appropriation act of March 3, 1881, which provides for the purchase of a suitable site in the city of Washington for the erection of a brick and metal fire-proof building to be used and occupied by the Pension Bureau. Upon consideration he is of the opinion that the provision referred to must be construed to apply solely to the purchase of a site, and that to authorize the money appropriated to be also used for the erection of a building further legislation is necessary.

The Detroit Post has this singular item: "It is secretly believed here that Homer Andrews is doing an injunded with Thomas Jerome' money, though his attorneys state the contrary. It is generally believed here that the place to look for Jerome's money is at Pontiac."

The wind blowing quite a breeze, the flames spread rapidly, consuming two barns with adjoining sheds, together with contents. Loss, $1,400; partly insured. BROOKLYN.

Emigration to Jackson still continues and is both free will and enforced. The latter is not conducive to good humor though most expensive, and who is profited thereby is the story not sufficiently authenticated to warrant repetition.

Rev. E. has not yet organized his constitutional society, and is quietly strangling that queer little prodigy by procrastination. Repeated adjournments are not as beneficial to a good cause as a bad one. He has indulged in great expectation concerning the popularity of right, and the Micawber style of waiting for the Lord to do most of the moral subsoiling is nearly as old as that first minister. Some man who elected himself judge, said, "The woman who hesitates is lost." Just so, but it only takes one to send us one way or the other. It takes more in this case. A sufficient number have been present to transact all necessary business, but not a flattering crowd.

Hattie Phelps has returned to us as Mrs. Hokum. The only cause for regret, now apparent, is that her home so long here will be elsewhere.

ADDISON.

A reorganization of the Sabbath school will take place at Friends' church next Sunday.

Railroad topics have revived in the minds of our citizens of late.

Warm weather has come at last and with it the usual accompaniment of house and yard cleaning.

Farmers in this section are busy preparing for planting. Comparatively few oats were sown on account of the prolonged cold.

Rumor says the Friends' church, situated one-half mile north of town is to be sold.

Three Addison girls will impart knowledge to the Woodstocklings in as many school districts of that township this summer. In fact Addison girls always were in demand.

Just as the spring time was dawning our people woke up to a sense of the fact that public entertainments might enhance their felicity, and a minstrel troupe accordingly held forth at the Exchange hall, while phrenological-magic-lantern man took up quarters at the church. The fair bumps of a certain Toledoite were exposed and the audience pleased by the effort.

Mr. E. Harrington may now be found at the Addison house where travelers and boarders will receive kindest hospitality at his hands.

FRANKLIN SHEEP SHEARING FESTIVAL.

Last Friday the sheep breeders of Franklin township held their annual festival at Franklin Center, and although the day was not the finest that ever was seen for shearing sheep, the breeders brought out their stock, and there was no lack of interest. 123 head of sheep were shown and quite a number shorn.

Since the festival in May, 1880, quite a difference might be seen in the stock, a number of breeders having imported some fine stock and the careful breeding for the last few years now begins to make a marked impression in the stock, which lack of time has made it an impossibility to show up. In looking over the stock we commenced at the right hand corner of the sheds and worked our way slowly but surely around midst farmers, sheep, and newspaper reporters, and will now attempt to give a brief sketch of the different pens of sheep as they come in order.

A. L. Morseman of Franklin showed 12 yearling ewes, three 2 yr. old ewes with lamb, 3 yearling rams, four 5 year olds, with lambs. Mr. Morseman has sheep that are worth a little more mention than simply stating the number and age, and for length, weight and quality of staple, probably cannot be surpassed. During the last year he has made some pretty good sales, among which may be recorded a yearling ram, to parties in Jackson Co., for $50, and the others to parties in our own vicinity for $50, and $40, and the day of the festival he sold 3 spring lambs to John Hanley for $65. His stock in the ram side is from Old Nugget, Greasy Jack and Old Major, raised and used by Walter Kennedy, of Jackson Co., and on ewe side is Nugget stock and from Vermont ewes and those of his own breeding. His flock sheared an average in 1880 of 11 lbs.

The next pen was owned by A. W. Simmons of Franklin, and contained 3 fine yearling bucks, of Old Nugget's best stock.

D. F. Learnard of Franklin was next in order with eight 2 yr. old ewes, and two 2 yr. old rams from registered ewes and Nugget stock.

L. H. Sheeler was the only man who brought sheep from the township of Cambridge and it is needless to say they were good ones. He showed 4 yearling ewes and 2 yearling rams. His stock is on ram side from Bompart stock of Bridgewater, and on ewe side from Walter Kruss stock of Bridgewater, and Old Nugget stock. We mentioned last year the stock of Frank Sheeler of Cambridge which was very fine, and L. H. Sheeler seems to have the same tact of sheep breeding held by his brother, and we can safely say carries and handles A No. 1, pure blooded sheep. Last year he sold and sent to Illinois 50 ewes, for which he received $600. He has taken special pains to improve and enhance the value of his flock in every way possible. His rams have never cost him less than $100 each, and he has purchased several in the last few years, and any one who wants to see a good lot of sheep should go and see Mr. L. H. Sheeler of Cambridge.

W. S. Osborn & Bro., of Franklin showed the old ram, Hector, 9 yearling ews, 3 two yr. old ews, 3 six yr. old ewes. It is hardly worth while for us to say much concerning the Osborn Brothers' sheep, as they are known all over this section of country and their reputation is firmly established, but we ought not fail to note a few facts about the particular stock shown at this shearing. First could be seen about them, marks of fine care and handling, without which no good sheep can show up their qualities, next with this careful watching; as to care and tending, the owners have been enabled to give their stock the advantages of that close breeding which is necessary to make any stock excel: The Osborn Bros.' sheep have always ranked among the first in this section, and will always do so as long as they raise them.

Leroy Mills of Franklin showed the ram, Greasy Jack, formerly owned by Brunt Knapp, and three 3 yr. old ewes with lambs, from this ram.

Joe. Keeny of Franklin, 3 yearling ewes 1 yearling ram, 2 yearling ewes, one 3 yr. old ram, 2 spring lambs, from Vermont stock, ram registered.

R. S. King & Son, Bridgewater, 1 yearling ram, registered, four 3 yr. old ewes, registered, three 2 yr. old ewes, registered, 3 yearling ewes, from C. M. Fellows' stock, Manchester.

Reynolds & Learnard, Franklin, 1 three yr. old ram, one 2 yr. old ram, Nugget stock.

J. Van Gieson, Brooklin, the 2 yr. old ram, Noonday, 2 yearling rams, 12 yearling ewes, Monarch stock.

Otis Whelan, Franklin, one 4 yr. old buck.

Below we give a table of the shearings taken from the Secretary's book, which will give an accurate showing as to the sheep which were shorn:

RIDGEWAY.

Mr. & Mrs. Jno. Pattison, a girl.

Mr. & Mrs. A. B. Clark, a boy.

Mr. & Mrs. Samuel Fletcher, a girl.

Wm. Larkin has moved into Sam. Snedecor's house in the village.

Jno. Larkin advertises his farm, 32 acres for sale.

A valuable glove was picked up in front of the Postoffice, a few days ago, which the owner can have by calling upon the P. M.

We are anxious to see the project for graveling the turnpike from this village to Britton's assume definite shape. We are informed that the gravel can be had close by.

The work of ballasting the Butler progresses finely. The track has been leveled up from Britton to Adrian, and gravel is now being dumped between Britton and Milan.

There are two cases of small pox in what is known as Dutchtown, six miles south of this place, one of them a child eleven months old, the other an adult. Both doing well with a probability of recovery. Where or how these parties caught it is not yet explained. We believe the family are named Speigle. Vaccination is now in order. Don't neglect it.

EARLY WHEAT HARVEST.

Here are a few timely suggestions:

Those who have taken care and pains to test it have proved that several advantages result from early harvesting wheat—say while in the dough state—while it can be easily pinched with the thumb and finger like a piece of dough. It is said that it gives more bushels and heavier wheat, per acre, than when allowed to stand till fully ripe and hard—say when cut 3 to 5 days sooner than the common custom.

It is also claimed, by those who have tried it, that early harvesting will prevent much of the injury by rust; that is, when wheat nearly ripe is struck with rust is at once cut down the further effects of the disease is at once stopped. Many instances are recorded in which fields attacked with rust being immediately harvested have still shown a good crop of sound grain, while other portions of the same fields cut 4 to 5 days later were almost worthless. It will not be much risk or cost much for farmers generally to make experiments in this matter, by cutting a few acres of their crops 3 to 5 days earlier than their usual custom; then thresh and weigh it separately, from the rest of the crop, and compare the quality and weight of the wheat with that from an equal number of acres harvested later; the experiment of a few acres can not be serious, though the expected beneficial results should not be found; while it is important to know the real facts on the subject. We recommend experiments, by intelligent farmers, the coming harvest.

NAUGHTY.

Somebody's lips were close to mine,
Those tempted, I couldn't resist,
Laughing and rosy, a sweet little mouth
Was suddenly, softly kissed.

Somebody's eyes looked up and frowned
With such a reproving glance
"If kisses were wicked!" I asked my pet
Then the eyes began to dance,

And smiling, the little maid drew close
As I knelt there at her feet,
"They must be a little bit naughty,
Or they never would be so sweet."

Summer Resorts and Watering Places.

Time was when the fashionable world in particular, and well-to-do people in general—like the songsters of spring time in their annual migrations—flocked to the various noted sea-side and other fashionable resorts in quest of health, comfort, and pleasure; but too often in vain, for partcularly in later years, the kid-gloved, yet iron-handed dictates of fashion have transfomed these choice places of Nature, and these seasons of rest and quiet, into hot-beds of fashionable dissipation, where "Shoddy" holds high carnival, and the seeds of envy, vice, and a false life are sown, and where real culture and refinement is elbowed and overshadowed by the false, and compelled to seek new resorts for old-time reunions of quiet and enjoyment.

Indeed it has become true that such places as Saratoga, Newport, Long Branch, Atlantic City and other similar noted resorts have been literally "seized and occupied," as a rule, by those or the descendants of those who became suddenly enriched by the war,—or speculations growing out of it—and others possessed of too easily acquired wealth; and the whirl and unhealthy excitements of so called "high life" have rendered these heretofore favorite summer resorts too costly and in almost every way unproductive of that health, enjoyment and rest which had made them famous.

But "there's never an ill without a remedy;" and of late years many of the habitues of Eastern pleasure resorts and their successors have joined hands with the pleasure-seekers of the West and South, and have found and are finding "Across the Plains" and in the grand old mountains of COLORADO a new and vigorous life, a more thorough and healthful enjoyment, a more complete and recuperative rest, and stronger hold on declining faculties of body and mind, than was afforded by those other world-renowned resorts in their palmiest days.

Never before in the history of this country has the attention of its citizens been so excited and attracted to the Great Western Empire, to the broad fields, the shadowy valleys, the deep canons, and the sky-piercing summits of those grand old hills—God's stepping-stones which reach from earth to Heaven—and in whose bosoms lie hidden more than the "wealth of the Inds." Never before, and nowhere else could the seekers after health, wealth and pleasure join hands in a march towards sun-set with such assurances of success.

And, among all the delightful resorts, the homes hid away in the mountain valleys, desirable and beautiful as any in the shadows of the storied ALPS, none are becoming so widely and favorably known, both in our own land and abroad, as beautiful, lovely MANITOU SPRINGS, happily and appropriately named "God's Springs"—or "Springs of the Gods!" Here, nestled under the cool shadows of the mountains—on the banks of the beautiful Fontaine Qui Bouille—in an emerald, grass-covered and flower-gemmed valley, with life and health-giving springs bubbling up in silver ripples from its green sod, is situated that ample, modern and most elegant hostelrie, the MANITOU HOUSE, with its generous table d'hote, its large and comfortable rooms, wide halls and shady piazzas, bath rooms, hot, cold and medicated waters, where the tired and worn out traveler, the invalid, and the counsed man of the world, can all spend weeks of the rough enjoyment, and drink in with every breath the invigorating yet balmy mountain air, and with it renewed health and spirits, and are thus enabled with a stronger grip to take a new hold on life!

Nowhere else in Colorado or the West that is so easy and cheap of access can be found as desirable a home in every sense of the word, where all the comforts and luxuries of the best eastern hotels are reinforced by beautiful walks and drives, convenient hunting and fishing, and amid the greatest of Nature's works.

Here the wearied, worn-out man of business will soon regain more than his old-time health and vigor, and while enjoying the luxuries and comforts so abundantly provided by the excellent host and hostess of the MANITOU, Major and Mrs. BARNES, he can enjoy that perfect rest of mind and body so long a stranger to him, and still be in hourly telegraphic and daily mail communication with his own counting room.

Here the ladies and young people can enjoy the most delightful drives and rides in the "Garden of the Gods," over the broad and elegant roads, through the grand and stately canons, or increase their physical energies in excursions to the summit of famous Pike's Peak, from where can be seen such magnificent views as are alone worth a trip from the sea-board, and while away the hours of rest and recreation in social pleasures in the ample parlors of their temporary home.

Here the sick and afflicted, with perfect rest and quiet, with every comfort about them, quaffing the life-giving waters and inhaling the healing airs from the pine-covered hills, will be refreshed as "with new wine," and starry-eyed hope soon take the place of discouragement and despair.

From this point, too, the seeker after "Fortune's bonanzas" can have quick and easy communication with the various celebrated mining camps and towns, and perchance gain not only established health, but the means of enjoying it to its fullest extent.

True it is that the favored mortals who have once made the MANITOU their home, ever after, in each recurring season, turn their faces westward towards the same "Mecca," accompanied by an increasing number of friends and acquaintances; and thus most appropriately may it be named the "Saratoga of the West."

If there is such a thing as pure and perfect joy upon earth, it is that which fills the heart of a parent when he hears of the wisdom, and virtue, and prosperity of a child. If there be sorrow that admits not of consolation, it is the sorrow of a father for the vice and folly of an ungracious, thankless son, and for the misery in which he has plunged himself. We hope our young readers will remember this, and so live as to add to the happiness of their parents.

Origin of the Mormon Bible.

The real author of the Book of Mormon was Rev. Solomon Spaulding, a graduate of Dartmouth College in 1785. He built a building he engaged in business and in 1809 was living at Conneaut, Ohio, where there are numerous Indian mounds. He then wrote a romance, setting forth the not new theory that the North American Indians were representatives of the lost tribes of Israel. Mr. Spaulding took advantage of his surroundings, and connected his story with the relics which were found in the mounds. In a fictitious introduction to his novel which he entitled "The Manuscript Found," he speaks of the book as one of the exhumed relics of a past age. He in a sketch of the Scripture style of expression. He tells of the departure from Palestine of a Jewish father, family, and his four sons, Laman, Samuel, Lemuel and Nephi, of the various journies and their voyage to this Western Continent. Dissension and devilry are frequent. The descendants of the brothers develop into hostile tribes. Then came quarrels and wars, and finally a decisive battle, and in short, the substance of all that is found in the "Golden Bible" of Joseph Smith. Indeed the Book of Mormon seems to be only a modified but motivated edition of Rev. Mr. Spaulding's "Manuscript Found." There is abundant internal evidence that the later is a reproduction of the earlier work.

Spaulding used to read the chapters of his story to his neighbors, who were deeply interested in its progress, and were greatly entertained by the ingenuity of the author. He worked upon it three years, or until 1812, when he moved to Pittsburg, Pa. There he put his manuscript into the hands of a printer by the name of Patterson. He expected to publish the book, and it was announced in the papers in 1813 as forthcoming. It never was published, however, probably because Spaulding had not the money to pay the bills. Spaulding died in 1816. The original copy was returned to his widow, who kept it until the Book of Mormon was published, and then she produced it in proof of her assertion that Joseph's pretended revolution was a fraud. In the Boston Journal, of May 18, 1839, she told the story of the Manuscript.

The evidence is complete that Smith discovered only what he and some associate had hidden in a box of their own making, in a hole of their own digging. Smith came into possession of a copy of the work of Spaulding, by Sydney Rigdon, a workingman in Patterson's printing office. Rigdon confessed the fact afterward when he was cut off from the Mormon Church by Brigham Young. The three witnesses also quarreled with Joseph and Rigdon, and confessed to having sworn falsely. Rigdon on leaving the work of printing, became a preacher of peculiar doctrines. Smith had quite a large following in certain views peculiarly his, and these two religious Ishmaelites coming together, set to work to give the world a new Bible. Smith, adding what was suited to his purpose, dictated Spaulding's story to Oliver Cowdrey from behind a screen, and the work was done, "and palmed off upon a company of poor deluded fanatics as divine."

The new prophet seems to have had but vague notions of what doctrines the new church should hold. Rigdon held to some doctrines which Smith did not. But they both agreed on the question of the Second Advent, then exciting their section of country. They made that doctrine prominent in their Bible. The idea was "the end is at hand; the Indians are to be speedily converted; America is the final gathering place of the saints, who were to assemble as near the center of the continent as possible." This was a doctrine, and this they preached, and this chiefly at first. It may be said in brief, that the religious teachings of the Book of Mormon relate to very modern questions. The discussions of 1830 and thereabouts, seem to furnish the new leaders with themes. Millinarianism is the main question. Infant Baptism, however, quite an ancient institution, is denounced; and wonderful to relate, polygamy, a much more ancient and far less this country a very modern institution, is emphatically and repeatedly condemned. Polygamy as a duty was proclaimed by a revelation nearly later in the prophet's life.—Sacramento Bee.

How to Get a Name.

A gentleman, who has travelled about in Europe, stopping at the principal hotels, in speaking of his experience, says: "Wherever I went, my letters were waited upon promptly and politely at the hotels, while he was there authority, amused and confused greatly by hearing a stream of complaints for want of the waiter to be right. At last I discovered the secret, to the charm of being the waiter literally and bring of him a more than ordinary, to determined to improve on the plan.

The next hotel he chose, he took his seat very pompously at the table and taking a worthless pocket-book, extracting therefrom a $10 bill, which he laid on the white cloth beside his plate, and placed his goblet upon it. In an instant almost he was surrounded by waiters, who seemed to vie with each other in attention. Every wish was anticipated, and all the delicacies of the kitchen and pantry were placed before him in tempting array.

Having fared as sumptuously as a prince, (to the envy of many of the guests), he took up the greenback, and beckoning to the nearest waiter, was immediately besieged by half a dozen of so. Holding the bill in one hand, he pointed to it with the other, and inquired of the crowd:

"Do you see that bill?"

"Oh, yes, sir," they all exclaimed in chorus.

"Then take a good look at it," he replied, "for you will never see it again." Saying which he departed leaving the waiters aghast.

A man who considers that the home duties of a woman are inferior to the political work of man, must either be a bachelor or blind. The very highest qualities of the heart and intellect may be exercised by a mother, sister, or an elder daughter, in watching over the physical and moral growth of children in her care. Heroic patience, a vigilance that never tires, an adaptation of means to the end, a careful study of individual traits, a keen psychological insight, may all find ample room for exercise within the four walls of even a humble home.

A Book Agent Vanquished.

Yesterday evening Prof. Stewart went into the the Delmonico Restaurant and asked Andy, the irrepressible head steward, to bring him some stuffed mutton and parsnips. No sooner had the professor fairly seated himself at one of the long tables, than a book agent came in and took the other side of the board. The two men were strangers, but, as a matter of course, this book peddler couldn't keep still, and presently made some conversational advance to Stewart.

"Are not these meteorological disturbances somewhat peculiar for these latitudes?"

The professor paused a moment as he was mashing a potato, and replied:

"Guess it's about the same thing every year."

"In seasons of atmospheric depression alternating with unexpected boreal excitements and rapid changes resultant on sudden accumulations of moisture, such dispositions of the storm belt are not, in my opinion, entirely uncalled for."

"Exactly," remarked the professor lifting a fly out of his coffee.

"But," continued the agent delighted at the style in which he was crowding the professor, "I doubt not but that certain energetic polarizations of the molecules in the mineral deposits have an attraction for the electrically-charged clouds."

At this point the professor, who had been knocked around the ring and crowded to the ropes, so to speak, became fairly roused to his position and slogged for the other's nose at once.

"Ah, exactly, my friend; in the ledge are vast deposits of minerals. Found in volcanic matrices and disintegrated by the upheaval of plutonic and semi-fused masses of silicious alumina, mingled with homogeneous debris of porphyry, the molecules of kaolined feldites with a sligh potash base, the decomposition of feldspar is most affected along the line of the horizontal cleavage and necessarily the liberated oxide of manganese, combined with the percolation of the alkalies which permeate the entire mass, causing a pronounced state of polarization, which cannot fail to account for the peculiar attraction in the vicinity. I might further explain the intricate chemical properties of the belt by illustrating the——"

By this time, however, the book agent, who during the round had been verbally pasted in the jaw, smashed in the nose and biffed in the eye, rose from his seat, paid full price for his half eaten meal, and shot out of the place. Andy said he examined the professor, found his pulse regular, no signs of perspiration, and his mind intact.—Nevada, Virginia, Chronicle.

Faintness and its Causes.

Cassell's Household Guide says:—Faintness consists in a temporary failure of the activity of the heart; the blood, in consequence, is not properly circulated. It does not reach the head, and the patient loses clearness of vision and color, and, if not prevented, falls on the floor, where, however, or even before reaching it, he recovers. There is no convulsion, and, though he can scarcely be said to be conscious, he is not profoundly unconscious so as not to be able to be aroused, as happens in epilipsy. There are all degrees of faintness, merely feeling faint and looking slightly pale, to the state we have described; and in some cases the state of fainting is hardly recovered from well before it recurs again and again, for hours and days together. We need hardly say that such cases as the latter are altogether beyond the reach of domestic medicine. What are the causes of faintness? It is not difficult to describe these. Some people are so very easily affected that they faint if they cut their finger, or even if they only see the cut finger of another person. All one can say of such persons is that their muscular fibre is not strong, and that their nerves are sensitive. The heart, which goes on for years circulating the blood, is essentially a muscle. It is weak in some people, stronger in others. As a rule, it is weaker in women and stronger in men. Hence, women faint more rapidly than men. Whatever weakens the heart and the muscles generally acts as the cause of faintness. Close, foul air is a common cause of faintness or of languidness. Anything which greatly affects the nervous system, such as bad news or the sight of something horrible or disagreeable, will sometimes cause fainting. But of all causes of faintness none is so serious as the loss of blood. The muscles, in order to act well, must be supplied with blood; and if the supply of the vital fluid—if it escapes, either from a vein opened purposely, or from a gun, or from the source from which menstruation proceeds—in excessive quantity, then faintness will happen. The degree of it will depend on the constitution, and on the amount of blood lost. A loss of blood that would scarcely be felt by one person will be a serious cause of faintness to another. Sometimes a feeling of faintness arises from becoming very fat, the muscular system of the heart being impaired by fatty deposit.

Help One Another.

This little sentence should be written on every heart—stamped on every memory. It should be the golden rule practiced, not only in every household, but throughout the world. By helping one another we not only remove the thorns from the pathway and anxiety from the mind, but feel a sense of pleasure in our hearts, knowing that we are doing a duty to a fellow creature. A helping hand or an encouraging word is no loss to us, yet an untold benefit to others. Who has not felt the power of a little sentence; Who has not needed the encouragement and aid of a kind friend? How soothing, when perplexed with something that is most difficult and burdensome, to feel a gentle hand on the shoulder, and to hear a kind voice whispering, "Do not be discouraged; I see your troubles, let me help you." What strength is inspired, hope created—what sweet gratitude is felt; and the great difficulty dissolves as dew before the sunshine. Yes, let us help one another, by endeavoring to strengthen and encourage the weak; and lifting the burden of care from the weary and oppressed, that life may glide smoothly on, and the fount of bitterness yield sweet waters; and He whose willing hand is ever ready to aid us, will reward our humble endeavors, and every good deed will be "bread upon the water, to return after many days," if not to us, at least to those we love.

Benefit your friends, that they may love you still more dearly; benefit your enemies, that they may become your friends.

Every purchaser of Lands should insist on being furnished an abstract of title, for our experience of more than 20 years shows that not more than one title in ten is perfect of record, and every week purchases agreed upon are abandoned owing to imperfections of title. As Clear as Mud.

Dr. Tyndall thus defends himself against the misunderstanding of his position as a scientist into which people in general have fallen. He denies that he is a materialist, in the accepted sense of that word, and defines his position: "Religious feeling is as much a verity as any other part of human consciousness; and against it, on its subjective side, the waves of science beat in vain. But when manipulated by the constructive imagination, mixed with imperfect or inaccurate historic data, and moulded by misapplied logic, this feeling traverses our knowledge of nature, science, as in duty bound, stands as a hostile power in its path. It is against the mythologic scenery, if I may use the term, rather than against the life and substance of religion, that science enters her protest." All of which, to common folk, is, as the old lady said, "Clear, lucid and ambiguous."

TO THE AFFLICTED.

Since the introduction of Kellogg's Columbian Oil it has made more permanent cures and given better satisfaction on Kidney complaints and Rheumatism than any known remedy. Its continued series of wonderful cures in all climates has made it known as a safe and reliable agent to employ against all aches and pains, which are the forerunners of more serious disorders. It acts speedily and surely, always relieving suffering and often saving life. The protection it affords by its timely use on Rheumatism, kidney affection, and all aches and pains, wounds, cramping pains, cholera morbus, diarrhoea, coughs, colds, catarrh, and disorders among children, makes it an invaluable remedy to be kept always on hand in every home. No person can afford to be without it, and those who have once used it never will. It is absolutely certain in its remedial effects and will always cure when cures are possible. Call at C. A. Wright & Co's. and get a memorandum book giving more full details of the curative properties of this wonderful medicine.

Beauty has been appointed by the Deity to be one of the elements by which the human soul is continually sustained; it is therefore to be found more or less in all natural objects, but in order that we may not satiate ourselves with it, weary of it, it is merely granted to us in its utmost degrees. When we see it in these utmost degrees, we are attracted to it strongly, and remember it long, as in the case of singularly beautiful scenery, or a beautiful countenance. On the other hand, absolute ugliness is admitted as rarely as perfect beauty; but degrees of it more or less distinct are associated with whatever has the nature of death and sin, just as beauty is associated with what has the nature of virtue and of life.

Greatest Remedy Known.

Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption is certainly the greatest medical remedy ever placed within the reach of suffering, humanity.—Thousands of once hopeless sufferers, now loudly proclaim their praise for this Discovery to which they owe their lives. Not only does it positively cure Consumption, but Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Hay Fever, Hoarseness and all affections of the Throat, Chest and Lungs yield at once to its wonderful curative powers as if by magic. We do not ask you to buy a large bottle until you know what you are getting. We therefore earnestly request you to call on your druggists, M. Wright & Son, and get a trial bottle free of cost which will convince the most skeptical of its wonderful merits, and show you what a regular one dollar size bottle will do. For sale by M. Wright & Son, Tecumseh.

Seasoned timber is but little liable to decay under the influence of a dry atmosphere, and will resist decomposition for an indefinite period when kept totally submerged in the water. The piles of old London bridge, driven 800 years before, were found to be in good condition when the new bridge was erected in 1829, and those which served as the foundation for Trojan's bridge over the Danube, A. Adversity is the trial of principle. Without it, a man hardly knows whether he is honest or not.

Bad habits are the thistles of the heart, and every indulgence of them is a seed from which will come forth a new crop of rank weeds.

Life is but a span. Marriage is a double team. Youth wedded to old age is a tandem. A cross old bachelor is a single and all sulky.

A woman returning from church recently, declared that "when she saw the shawls on those Smiths, and then thought of the things her own poor girls had to wear, if it wasn't for the consolation of religion, she didn't know what she should do."

Such is the formidable antagonism of the sexes that a chance to give a Roland for an Oliver is never lost. Don't you think that a good likeness of me?" said a pretty wife to her small fraction of her herself called her husband. "Very good," was the reply, "except that there is a little too much repose about the mouth."

"My darling," says Mr. Snadrake, who has been ostensibly duck-shooting at San Mateo all the day and night previous, "did the office boy bring you those ducks I shot? I told him." "No, sir, he did not," replied Mrs. S. in an icy and appalling manner, "but the butcher's boy has been here to say that, as he can not fill your order for wild ducks to-day, he sends you a half-dozen tame ones instead." Tableau!

You boys ought to be very kind to your little sisters. I once knew a little boy who struck his sister a blow over the eye. Although she didn't slowly pine away and die in the early summer-time, when the June roses were blowing, with words of sweet forgiveness on her pallid lips, she rose up and hit him over the head with the rolling pin, so that he couldn't go to Sunday school for more than a month on account of not being able to put his best hat on!

JAPANESE WHEAT.—English newspapers announce with considerable interest the discovery made by the Paris Acclimation society, that "Japanese wheat, planted in April or May, is ripe and ready for the harvest quite as early as European grown wheat sown some five or six months earlier, and the yield is equally large with that produced from any of the varieties of the European wheat." If the same result can be obtained in other places, says the Tokio Times, the use of Japanese wheat, it is presumed, will become universal, though no explanation of the phenomenon is yet supplied.

Boston prides herself on the excellence of her public school system. According to the Boston Advertiser, a lawyer at the Hub recently examined forty boys for the position of office boy, with the following result: All wrote poorly; all misspelt common words of two syllables; all failed in the use of capitals. None could tell what was the capital of the state of New York. The brightest were examined further, and could not teh the interest of $100 at 6 per cent. Hardly any could multiply 15 by 71, or subtract 11 from 17, or divide correctly; nor could any of them manage fractions. All were about fourteen years old and bright boys for their age.

Black glass, made in Venice, is famous for the intensity of its color, and many attempts have been made to discover to what special ingredient this is due. It is now said that a Nuremburg chemist, M. Kayser, has ascertained by analysis that manganese is the substance used. To confirm this result, M. Kayser melted in a small furnace a mixture of sand and sulphur, in which he introduced fifteen per cent. of peroxide of manganese. He thus obtained a glass of a deep black color; in very fine threads or thin splinters it was of a sombre violet. In one word, it exactly presented, in respect to color, the same properties as genuine black Venetian glass.

The inventor of steel pens was an American, and a well known resident of New York City, Peregrine Williamson. In the year 1800, Mr. Williamson, then a working jeweler at Baltimore, while attending an evening school, finding some difficulty in making a quill pen to suit him, made one of steel. It did not work well, however, for want of flexibility. After a time he made an additional slit on each side of the main one, and the pens were so much improved that he was called to make them in such numbers as to eventually occupy his whole time, and that of a journeyman. At first the business was very profitable. The English soon borrowed this invention.

Too often it has been said that there is no good in coal ashes, but chemical examination gives them the power of absorption almost equal to charcoal; and if, when taken from the grate or stove, they are mingled with the chamber-lye of the house and with the soap-wash from the kitchen, they are found valuable as absorbents of fertilizing ingredients. Applied after so absorbing the liquids from the above named, they are dug in around your trees or spread upon grass ground, [illegible] as manure for garden in the culture of early carrots, beets, radishes, etc., or as a top-dressing over the potato and onion, in the months of February or March, the advantages will be appreciated by the grower.

A historical heirloom, the silver mounted distaff of Queen Marie Antoinette, which was seen at the Paris exhibition, has been restored to the emperor of Austria. It is the same distaff with which the unfortunate queen beguiled the long hours of her captivity, and after her execution it was given as a memento to one of the ladies in attendance. It thence passed into the family of Brassy-Raincin. The spindle is of ivory, and the hemp still on it is that from which the unhappy queen spun during the last days of her life. By the decease of Mme. de Raincin, the relic passed into the hands of a Hungarian lady.

Impure blood, and all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Urinary Organs are speedily cured. A. Wright & Co. at fifty cents a bottle.

Gems by the Wayside.

Men who complain of the miseries of this life are, for the most part, such as are unwilling to practice self-denial or submit to those rules of their animal and moral economy upon which salutary and uniform happiness is founded.

He cannot be called an accomplished or a polite man in company who is continually betraying a fear to offend or a desire to please—though his behavior ought to be regulated internally by both these motives.

The sweetest flowers are those which shed their odors in quiet nooks and dingles; and the purest hearts are those whose deeds of love are done in solitude and secret.

The self-denial which vice exacts is greater by far than that involved in virtuous endeavor.

God is too merciful to let us have a full view of our character or a panoramic prospect of our vices.

The cultivation of the heart should be like that of a garden, where we prune and weed before we begin to plant.

He who dreads giving light to the people is like a man who builds a house without windows, for fear of the lightning.

The best thoughts are ever the swiftest winged; the duller lag behind.

To abstain from a small thing is more difficult than to undertake a great one.

The love of public opinion is often mistaken for the dictate of genuine bravery.

The man of knowledge lives eternally after his death, while his members are reduced to dust beneath the tomb. But the ignorant man is dead, even while he walks upon the earth; he is numbered among the living men, and yet he existeth not.

Every moral sentiment, every intelligent action, is to me a hint, a prophetic star of spiritual power to be expended forever, just as a faint ray from a distant sign is significant of unimaginable splendor.

Items of Interest.

A good leather belt, one inch wide, has sufficient strength to lift 1,000 pounds.

Japan manufactures [illegible] for sale in the United States, from leather brought from American ports.

The plates for saws are made of ingots of steel, carefully prepared to secure uniformity, and reduced to the proper thickness by rolling.

Silver is the most perfectly reflecting substance known, absorbing but 9 per cent. of the incident rays, while speculum metal absorbs 37 per cent.

According to the statistics of the advertising agencies, the entire average circulation of agricultural newspapers was about 500,000, in 1878.

Mr. Finney, a London dentist, claims to have found a filled tooth in the jaw of an Egyptian mummy. Dentistry was further advanced 4,000 years ago in Egypt than is supposed.

The Social Science Association of Boston publishes the startling, if true, statement that several mills in New England grind white stone into powder, to be used in adulterating sugar, soda and flour.

Switzerland puts up condemned milk in large quantities for the English market, where it finds a constant and ready sale. There are several Swiss factories engaged in the business.

Broom-corn was introduced into this country by Dr. Franklin. While examining an imported corn-whisk, he accidentally discovered a single seed, which he planted in his garden, and from which the corn was propagated.

One of the most notable churches in the U. S. is that of St. Michael at Marblehead, Mass., which was built in 1706, of material wholly brought from England. It has a reredos, an ancient chandelier, and a pulpit of a quaint pattern. The second rector married the widow Curtis to George Washington.

Medicinal Effects of Onions.

A mother writes to an English agricultural journal as follows: "Twice a week—it was generally when we had cold meat minced—I gave the children a dinner which was hailed with delight and looked forward to. This was a dish of boiled onions. The little things knew not they were taking the best medicine for expelling that most children suffer from—worms. Mine were kept free by this remedy alone. It was a medical man who taught me to eat boiled onions for a cold in the chest. He did not know at the time, till I told him, that they were good for any thing else." The editor of the journal adds: "A case is now under my own observation in which a rheumatic patient, an extreme sufferer, finds great relief from eating onions freely, either cooked or raw. He asserts that it is by no means a fancy, and he says so after persistently trying Turkish baths, galvanism, and nearly all the potions and plasters that are advertised as certain alleviations or cures."

Dr. G. W. Balfour, in the Edinburgh Medical Journal, records three cases in which much benefit was afforded patients by the eating of raw onions in large quantities. They acted as a diuretic in each instance. Case first was a woman who had suffered from a large white kidney and constriction of the mitral valve of the heart. Her abdomen and legs had been tapped several times, but after using onions as above, she had been free from dropsy for two years, although still suffering from albuminuria. Case second suffered from heart disease, cirrhotic liver and dropsy. Case third had dropsy depending on tumor of the liver. In both of them the remedy had been used with good results. Both had been previously tapped, purgatives and diuretics alike having failed to give relief. All other treatment having failed, recourse was had to the onions. Under their use the amount passed steadily rose from 10 or 15 ounces to 75 or 100.

Cathartic Pills

Combine the choicest cathartic properties in medicine, in proportions accurately adjusted to secure activity, regularity, and uniformity of effect. They are the result of years of careful study, and practical experiment, and are the most efficacious remedy yet discovered for diseases caused by derangement of the stomach, liver, and bowels, which require prompt and effectual treatment. AYER'S PILLS are specifically applicable to this class of diseases. They act directly on the digestive and assimilative processes, and restore regular healthy action. Their extensive use by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, is one of the many proofs of their value as a safe, sure, and perfectly reliable purgative medicine. Being compounded of the concentrated virtues of purely vegetable substances, they are positively free from calomel or any injurious properties, and can be administered to children with perfect safety.

AYER'S PILLS are an effectual cure for Constipation or Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Foul Stomach and Breath, Dizziness, Headache, Loss of Memory, Numbness, Biliousness, Jaundice, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Dropsy, Tumors, Worms, Neuralgia, Colic, Gripes, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Gout, Piles, Disorders of the Liver, and all other diseases resulting from a disordered state of the digestive apparatus.

As a Dinner Pill they have no equal.

While gentle in their action, these PILLS are the most thorough and searching cathartic that can be employed, and never give pain unless the bowels are inflamed, and then their influence is healing. They stimulate the appetite and digestive organs; they operate to purify and enrich the blood, and impart renewed health and vigor to the whole system.

CONGRESSIONAL.

APRIL 25.—Senator Edmunds asked leave for the Committee on Judiciary to sit during the recess of the Senate, if that should ever occur, to pursue some investigations upon the subject of bankruptcy. Without objection, leave was granted.

The Vice President laid before the Senate the unfinished business, being the resolution for the election of Senate officers. The motion to go into executive session was lost—yeas 24, nays 28.

Mr. Jones, of Florida, replied to portions of Mr. Frye's speech.

A motion for recess and kindred motions were voted down.

At the conclusion of the roll-call, on one of these votes, it was discovered the motion had prevailed. Thereupon Mr. Rollins started on a hunt for the delinquent Republican Senator, only to discover in the nick of time to defeat the motion by a tie vote he himself was the Senator who had not voted.

The vote upon the next question, to go into executive session, to the surprise of both sides, was announced yeas 21, nays 20.

This was explained by Mr. Lamar, who, paired with Mr. Sherman, had, unwittingly voted. He obtained leave to withdraw his vote, and the motion was then lost.

The Senate then adjourned.

APRIL 27.—Mr. Morgan asked leave to offer a concurrent resolution declaring that the interests of the people of the United States of America, and the welfare and security of the government are so involved in the subject of the construction of ship canals, or other ways for the transportation of sea-going vessels across the isthmus connecting North and South America, that the government of the United States, with a frankness which is due, all other people and governments, hereby asserts that it will insist that its consent is a necessary condition precedent to the execution of such project, and also as to rules and regulations under which other nations shall participate in the use of such canals or other ways, either in peace or in war.

Mr. Dawes objected to the resolution, not so much on account of the sentiment contained in it, as on account of the fact that it needed the concurrence of the house of representatives.

After debate Mr. Morgan modified his resolution, so as to make it a senate resolution. It was referred to the committee on foreign relations.

The vice president then laid before the senate the unfinished business, being the resolution for the election of officers of the senate.

After two or three ineffectual roll-calls, Mr. Harris moved that the senate go into executive session, stating that there were 300 nominations on the table awaiting action. Lost—23 to 23.

Several dilatory motions were voted down, and the senate adjourned.

APRIL 28.—Senator Butler spoke until 2:30, concluding with an argument against the idea that the country was an absolute government of the majorities.

Senator Burnside made a speech in which he denied that the Senator from South Carolina had "demonstrated by irrefragible proof that there was a foul bargain in the Senate," but stated that he would not hold the Senator to his promise to resign his seat.

Senator Butler said that if, on the other hand, he had proved a bargain he would not hold the Senator from Rhode Island to his promise to give up his committee.

Senator Hale did not undertake to take care of his colleague, who was abundantly able to take care of himself, but he desired to speak on the attack just made upon the civilization of the State of Maine. The Senator had brought up against the State of Maine nothing more than could be found against any State or people under the heavens. He had only been following out the Democratic plan of digging up private letters, etc., to show that other States had had suspicions of the same corruption that existed in the South. The speaker denied that there had ever been any individual political outrages in his State, and asserted the honorable, frugal, and patriotic character of her people. He entered into a detailed denial of some of the outrages alleged by the Senator from South Carolina, and laid all foundation for such charges against the people of Maine at the door of the Democrats and Fusionists.

Following this speech came an ineffectual motion that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Then a resolution offered by Senator Mahone was passed, calling upon the Attorney-General for a copy of the special report of Commissioner C. C. Lancaster to the United States Marshall of the Western District of Virginia.

At 3:35 p. m. the Senate adjourned until 12 o'clock on Monday.

Mr. John Burroughs, in his "Notes of a Walker," in a recent number of Scribner's Magazine, described the delight with which he heard a stray English sky-lark, which had evidently either escaped from a cage, or was a survivor of those which were liberated in Long Island several years ago. He suggested that there was "no reason why the lark should not thrive in this country as well as in Europe." Acting on this suggestion, Mr. Chas. R. Rowe, of Cornwall, England, an enthusiastic admirer of Mr. Burroughs's writings, has sent him a number of English sky-larks, which arrived in New York on Saturday last, and have been forwarded to Mr. Burroughs at Esopus-on-the-Hudson, where they will be set free.

Adrian Times: Some trouble is experienced in locating the new Butler depot, owing to the absence of landmarks pointing out the exact line of East Maumee street. The engineer of the road caused the matter to be brought to the notice of the city council last evening, and the city surveyor was officially instructed to make the necessary surveys to settle the difficulty.

THE program for the next regular meeting of the Lenawee County Grange, to be held at Adrian city, on Thursday, May 12, 1881, at 10 o'clock a. m. is as follows: Question for Discussion—"Shall the Patrons of Lenawee County mass their wool and forward the same to manufacturies?"—Let all patrons attend. The idea of holding a general Mass Meeting or Picnic some time late in the season will also be determined. To be followed by speaking, reading of essays, etc.

VENNOR prophesies of the weather for May, as follows: Toward the end of the first week in May, or about the 5th and 6th, snow-falls may be looked for in the lower provinces of Canada, and about May 8, frosts are probable in central and southern Illinois, with rain and snow prevailing in some localities. There will also, in all probability, be snow-falls through the gulf and St. Lawrence district about the 7th and 8th. After the 10th of May, however, hot weather may be expected, and after the 15th, bush fires will probably break out in certain districts, although thunder storms are also probable on the 13th and 15th. Between the 20th and 25th there will probably be cloudy weather with rains, and vegetation will have advanced considerably by the 24th of the month. Between the 20th and 25th the weather will probably be cool. The month will end hot and sultry.

CIRCUIT COURT.

The adjourned term of the circuit court opened yesterday morning, the session being held in the county clerk's office.

The first business of the court was the sentencing of a number of prisoners who had confessed their crime.

George H. Forbes, for larceny received a sentence of two years at Ionia.

The court suspended sentence in the matter of Ruth Sawdy, of Hudson, who was indicted for chalking on the sidewalks and other conspicuous places vile allusions to some of the most respectable people of Hudson.

Frank Chart, charged with larceny of a watch was sentenced to one year in Ionia.

Edward B. Menor, charged with obtaining, under false pretenses, $25, in money and a quantity of groceries from A. L. Mills, Tecumseh, received a sentence of 15 months at Jackson.

William Carroll, a green-looking chap of 20, with clothes all tattered and torn, pleaded guilty a graver offense. Carroll is the villian who, on the night of March 28th, entered the house of Dr. Elmer Hause, of Tecumseh, and, being discovered, plunged a knife into the doctor and fled. The prosecutor said the young man could neither read nor write, and his vicious life was in part owing to the manner in which he had been brought up.—He with another boy went to Tecumseh in search of work. During the day they got drunk, and at night applied to the hotels for lodging, but were refused. They sought shelter under a hay stack, and after frequent potations from a bottle Carroll left his companion, and attempted the burglary. The boy told the court that he lived in Deerfield, his mother being dead. He had no trade, and had been working around on farms. He confessed to having served a sentence of 90 days in Ionia for stealing money from his brother. In passing sentence Judge Pratt alluded to the gravity af the crime, and remarked that unless the young man reformed he would become a dangerous man. The court said he would have to send him to Ionia again, but would confine him for a length of time which would enable him to learn a trade, and would, he hoped, make him an honest man. Carroll was given five years at the institution. The detection of this criminal seemed hopeless at first. But Sheriff Bidwell and his deputies have worked at the matter quietly, patiently, and as the result proves, with consumate skill. And the expense to the county has been very light. Our sheriff does not hunt with a brass band, but this result proves that he is capable of very successful hunting.—Adrian Times.

RESOLUTIONS

Of condolence and respect to the memory of Rita Avery, passed by the Tecumseh high school on the 25th of April, 1881:

WHEREAS, It hath pleased Divine Providence to withdraw from among us our dear friend and schoolmate, Rita Avery; therefore be it

Resolved, That it is but a just tribute to her memory to express our sorrow, and as a school, mourn for her who was in every way worthy of our esteem.

Resolved, That her school years spent with us without stain or reproach, entitle her to our highest regard; that in her death we have lost an ornament as well as a kind friend.

Resolved, That we as members of the high school unite in expressing our regard by presenting a floral tribute, and in attending the funeral services in a body.

Resolved, That we sincerely sympathize with her afflicted parents and immediate friends, and commend them for consolation to Him who orders all things for the best.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be presented to the bereaved family, to the high school department for preservation, and to the Tecumseh HERALD for publication.

Its cover is an artistic lithograph in ten colors, by the Calvert Lithographing Company of Detroit, from a painting by a Detroit artist. The representation is suggestive of the sea, and consists of a fine moonlight sea view in a sea shell and surrounded by sea moss showing its natural colors. Price of the book (which will include an 8x10 inch photograph) is 30 cents. Send stamp for circular. Address W. H. Brearley, Detroit Evening News.

CALL at the HERALD office and see our new type-writing machine, the Caligraph. This is the latest and best style of type-writer, possessing many advantages over the old style. The price on this machine is to reasonable as to place it within the reach of every one.

OBITUARY.

One of the pioneer women of Michigan, Mrs. Lucinda Thorp, died at her home in Tecumseh yesterday morning, aged 82 years. She was the oldest of a family of ten children. Two of her brothers, Major Horace Gray, of Grosse Isle, and Mr. Joseph Gray, of Tecumseh, survive her. She had a large family of children, four of whom are still living—Mr. John Thorp, of Toledo, Mrs. S. Crane, and Mr. Lyman Thorp, of Tecumseh, and Mrs. M. S. Hutchins, of Detroit. She was a widow at an early age with a family of little children, in a new country with no one to help and many things to dishearten. She struggled nobly and successfully to bring up her family, and never was too tired or too busy to lend a helping hand to others who were in trouble.

The above notice is taken from the Detroit Evening News of the 23d of April. As a well known and respected resident of Tecumseh, the death of Mrs. Thorp would seem to require a more extended notice. Mrs. Thorp, whose maiden name was Lucinda Gray, was born in the State of Vermont, of a thorough Puritan stock; her mother was a Winslow, and a lineal descendant of the first Governor of Plymouth Colony, of that name, Edward Winslow.

Mrs. Thorp's father removed his family from Vermont to Jefferson Co., N. Y., when she was about nine years of age, where she grew up and was married to Mr. Ebenezer Thorp. In September 1830, they came to Tecumseh, where she lived until the time of her death—something more than fifty years.

The first year after their settlement in Tecumseh, she lost her husband by death, and was left with a family of six children to look after and provide for. How well and faithfully that work was done, all the community know. She was a woman of great energy and real kindness of heart. Her social and domestic duties were directed by christian principles. She was a faithful member of the Prot. Episcopal church, having been admitted to the communion by the rite of confirmation on the 18th day of June, A. D. 1838, at the same time with Mr. Thomas Wright, Mrs. Irene Wright, Mrs. Calvin Wood, Mrs. David Henderson and Mrs. S. E. Boughton, all of whom it is believed have now gone to their long home. Her funeral was held on the 23d of April from the same House of God in which she had worshipped from the time of its consecration, and the same solemn, hopeful service was said over her mortal remains so familiar to her for more than forty years when attending the funeral rites of her former friends and neighbors. Her work is accomplished. Henceforth "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

THE AGE OF SCIENCE.

No fiber is so valuable to an entire community as scientific.

Science knows no small dirt; its interests include all the objects and all the events, and the forces and direction of the winds. Be cool, ask what good? Lieutenant Maury said to a captain bound round Cape Horn to California: "keep for such a point in Africa, and at such times and places for such points." Though Africa was apparently out of his course he did as directed and saw San Francisco in 90 days. His former time was 120. Science saved that 30 days.

Science said from the motions of the great solar system there must be a small planet in such a locality. It had never been seen, but science afterwards found it.

It is the alchemist of old. It changes the noisome refuse into the most brilliant dyes; the gray dead stones of Arizona into shining gold.

Science shuts out sensibility when pain would torture. But, perhaps, science works hardest to prolong life. The figures tell us people live longer than they did 50 years ago. Surely not naturally, but the gathered knowledge of scientific research has added to the physician's remedies. Five years since Arthur's Elixir of Sulphur was unknown; to-day thousands speak of it as the saviour of their life. Its marvellous power in purifying the system, its wonderful effect on tubercular consumption and all throat and lung diseases place it at the head of scientific discovery in medicine.

An Enraged Female.

"Household Departments" are very good adjuncts to a newspaper in their way, when edited by a woman, but the male journalist who dabbles with the heaven-inspired mysteries of cooking runs a frightful risk. The editor of the Weekly Petaluma Pearlac, started a column of that kind recently, and a few days afterwards a fierce-looking female came into the office, carefully concealing some object behind her apron.

"Are you the man that published that new and improved way to make currant cake?"

He said he was.

"You said to mix washing soda with the flour, and stir in a little corn meal and sweet oil to give it consistency?"

"I—I—believe so."

"And to add fifteen eggs and some molasses, and two ounces of gum arabic, and set in a cool place to bake?"

"I think that was it."

"Well, take that, then!" and the incognant housewife knocked him down with a weapon that felt like a sand club, but which he felt in his heart must have been a half-baked hunk of cake constructed on the Parsor pattern.—San Francisco News Letter.

The value of medicines compounded by a thoroughly educated physician and scientific chemist must be apparent to all. As such we take pleasure in commending Dr. J. C. Ayer's Cathartic Pills. Public confidence in them has stood the test until now they may be said to be universal. Great and permanent popularity does not come without great merit. Our experience convinces us that Ayer's Pills are superior to any others in all the uses for which a cathartic medicine is employed. They are pleasant to take, and are perfectly safe, sure and effectual. Ayer's Pills satisfy all the requirements of a reliable family physic and their timely use undoubtedly prolongs many lives and promotes the health and comfort of thousands.—Northern Ohio Democrat.

If garters are worn, it is important to know how to apply them with the least risk of harm. At the bend of the knee the superficial veins of the leg unite and go deeply into the under part of the thigh, beneath the ham-string tendons. Thus a ligature below the knee obstructs all the superficial veins; but if the contrivance is above, the ham-string tendons keep the pressure off the veins which return the blood from the legs. Unfortunately, most people, in ignorance of the above fact, apply the garter below the knee.

Druggists Heard From.

"We know the value of malt, hops, calisaya and iron composing 'Malt Bitters.'

"Our lady customers highly praise them."

"Physicians prescribe them in this town."

"The largest bottle and best medicine."

"Best blood purifier on our shelves."

"Our best people take Malt Bitters."

"Sure cure for chills and liver diseases."

Do not quiet your cough with preparations of opium and think you are cured. Arthur's Elixir of Sulphur contains no opium nor other narcotic, and may be safely taken by old and young. It strikes at the root of all diseases of the lungs and air passages effecting a permanent cure. Sold by C. A. Wright & Co.

Downs' Elixir will cure all lung diseases. The best medicine known for whooping cough.

You get an entire meal, as good as is served in any first-class hotel, for seventy-five cents.

Appreciating the fact that a majority of the people prefer separate apartments for different purposes (and the immense passenger business of this line warranting it), we are pleased to announce that this Company runs Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars for sleeping purposes, and Palace Dining Cars for eating purposes only. One other great feature of our Palace Cars is a SMOKING SALOON where you can enjoy your "Havana" at all hours of the day.

Magnificent Iron Bridges span the Mississippi and Missouri rivers at all points crossed by this line, and transfers are avoided at Council Bluffs, Kansas City, Leavenworth and Atchison, connections being made in Union Depots.

A Great Chicago Enterprise.

The Laboratory for the manufacture of Electric Bitters is one of Chicago's greatest enterprises, giving employment to a large number of hands. A French Practical Joke.

Those who have plenty of time, and are not afraid of the police, may perhaps find fun in trying the following, which we are assured by the Graphic is "quite a favorite with Parisian students:"

Fixing upon some thoroughfare where a bridge crosses the Seine, two of them take stations, the first on one side of the river, the second on the other. Looking carefully around, they proceed to take measurements with cords and surveyors' instruments, until on each side quite a crowd has gathered. Next, one of the students selects some verdant youth who happens to be passing, and politely asks: "Would you kindly hold this cord, sir? There is going to be a government survey. Please retain the cord until the official comes; on no account dropping it for an instant, as the measurement would thus be lost." He then gives the other end to a second innocent young man, and the way is thus effectually blocked. Meantime his comrade across the bridge has repeated the same performance. Caleches, carriages, drays, all sorts of vehicles, with throngs of foot passengers, have collected, who are gravely told that they must wait as a government survey is in progress. By this time the students, of course, have decamped, leaving the unlucky countrymen to manage the impatient crowd as best they can. The affair usually ends in the summoning of a detachment of policemen to drive away these victimized disturbers of the peace. This hoax, though often practiced, is said to be always successful.

Read This, Boys.

A gentleman advertised for a boy to assist him in his office, and nearly fifty applicants presented themselves to him. Out of the whole number he in a short time selected one and dismissed the rest.

"I should like to know," said a friend, "on what ground you selected that boy, who had not a single recommendation?"

"You are mistaken," said the gentleman; "he had a great many. He wiped his feet when he came in, and closed the door after him, showing that he was careful. He gave up his seat instantly to that lame old man, showing that he was kind and thoughtful. He took off his cap when he came in, and answered my questions promptly, showing that he was polite and gentlemanly. He picked up the book which I had purposely laid upon the floor, and replaced it upon the table, while all the rest stepped over it or shoved it aside, and he waited quietly for his turn, instead of pushing and crowding, showing that he was honorable and orderly. When I talked with him, I noticed his clothes were carefully brushed, his hair in nice order, and when he wrote his name, I noticed his finger nails were clean, instead of being tipped with jet, like that handsome little fellow in that blue jacket. Don't you call those things letters of recommendation? I do, and I would give more for what I can tell about a boy by using my eyes ten minutes than all the letters he can bring me."

WASHINGTON NOTES.

THE CHILIAN MISSION.

Gen. Kilpatrick says he is to have the Chilian mission, but friends of Osborn, the present minister, deny this. Osborn's friends are making a fight against Kilpatrick, and say that he now will not be well received by Chili, because of his unpopularity there.

The treasury department having information that there is a lack of uniformity at various ports in regard to assessment of duty on books imported through the mails, has issued a circular, in which the following is embodied: "Hereafter all books of whatever value, imported under the act of March 3, 1879, will be treated as dutiable at 25 per cent. advalorem. The provision for books will be held to include such as are bound in stiff covers, and also such as are usually so bound. Provisions for printed matter embraces magazines, periodicals, etc., in pamphlet form, newspapers and other similar matter, photographs and music. The expression 'printed matter' is to be defined by the statute as including reproduction on paper by any process, except that of handwriting, of any words, letters, characters, figures, or images, or of any combination thereof not having the character of actual and personal correspondence."

THE CHINESE TREATIES.

The prospect of the Chinese treaties being considered soon by the Senate in executive session gives rise to considerable comment thereon. It is understood that Boston merchants will bring heavy influence to bear on New England Senators in opposition to the clause of the treaty prohibiting the opium trade by vessels under the American flag. People of broader views recognize no advantage to be gained by the consummation of the treaty as proposed. The loss to a few American opium merchants will be comparatively insignificant beside the prestage to be gained by the accruing affiliation with China. That empire will never forget the opium difficulty with England, and the country that first consummates a satisfactory treaty on this question will reap untold benefits in other branches of commerce.

REGISTERED LETTERS TO SWINDLING FIRMS.

At the request of Postmaster General James, Atty. Gen. McVeagh has given an opinion on the question of the right of the postmaster general to prohibit the delivery of registered letters and payment of money orders addressed and payable to M. A. Dauphin, secretary of the Louisiana Lottery company. The attorney general says it is not in terms "an prohibited lotteries," etc., that they are excluded from the use of the registry and money-order systems; it is those found to be fraudulent by the postmaster general that are denied these privileges. He is the sole arbiter of the law and the fact upon this subject. The attorney general therefore concludes that if the postmaster general finds, upon evidence satisfactory to him, whatever its probative force with other minds, that Dauphin is engaged in conducting a fraudulent lottery, he may and should forbid the delivery of money orders to him, and instruct post masters to return to the senders all registered letters addressed to Dauphin.

ADVANCEMENT IN THE NAVY.

At the request of President Garfield, Atty. Gen. McVeagh has given an opinion upon the application of Paymaster Thos. T. Caswell for such correction of the navy register as will place him above paymaster John H. Stevenson. The attorney general says so far as the application rested on the proposition that the name of Edward Bellows should have entered into computation when Paymaster Stevenson was advanced fifteen numbers, it can not now be successfully urged. L. A. Frailey was, prior to 1870, appointed successor to Bellows by and with the advice and consent of the senate. As Bellows has not since been appointed paymaster, the recent decision of the supreme court in the case of Blake vs. The United States is decisive that he is not in the service. The attorney general says as to the promotion of Stevenson: "His advancement being an accomplished fact, and within the terms of section 1506, in my opinion, it is not in your (President Garfield's) power to inquire what was the act of heroism or where and when it was committed which induced your predecessor and the senate in 1870 to advance Paymaster Stevenson fifteen numbers. I am of the opinion that their action in that matter is conclusive upon the executive department, and that, therefore it is not subject to your examination or revision. Upon this decision Paymaster Stevenson will be entitled to the disputed advancement to the grade of pay inspector.

THE STAR ROUTES.

Postmaster General James has compiled from the records of the congressional investigation a table showing the increase in the star service and has published it to the associated press. This table shows the manipulation of ninety-three routes of 9,225 miles whereby their annual cost was raised, between June 1, 1878, and Jan. 1, 1881, from $27,119, to $2,803,214. The regular appropriation for the star route service for the year ended June 30, 1880, was $7,000,000, of this amount, $2,801,214 was absorbed by these three routes embraced in the table, leaving $4,197,786 for the remaining 2,125 routes. The frauds seem to have been mainly in connection with routes in Louisiana, Texas, Indian territory, Kansas, Nebraska, Dakota, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Idaho, Oregon, Nevada and California. The rates of increase obtained by contractors in many of these cases are enormous. One route in the Indian Territory was raised from $6,000 to $150,000, one in Dakota from $2,400 to $70,000, one in Wyoming, from $11,000 to $101,000, one in Colorado from $780 to $8,144, etc. In considering the aggregate increased pay shown by the table it should be borne in mind that the increase extends over the remainder of the contract term, the full term being four years. Assuming that three years is the average period for which the increased pay would run on the ninety-three routes described, the aggregate of the subsidy awards on these routes would be $8,415,858. The names of the contractors printed in the tables are well known in Washington circles as old contractors. The brother of ex-Senator Dorsey is the most prominent name in every instance. It will be to and that Dorsey is to have plenty of company, so far as any blame is concerned. Every state and territory where an increase has been made has been represented first the indorsement and even the personal solicitation of the congressional delegation. Those congressional gentlemen are always willing in favor of more money for government contractors, and it is understood that these men make in return liberal payments to campaign funds. Cornelius Cosgrove, the contractor for the Las Vegas route, in New Mexico,—a route increased from $75,000 to $94,000—is backed by S. B. Elkins, formerly delegate from that territory and at present solicitor of Senator Davis, of West Virginia; L. H. Rood, president of the Merchants bank, Little Rock, and R. C. Kerens, of the Iron Mountain railroad, J. W. Dorsey, a contractor named in the table, is a brother of ex-Senator Dorsey, and is a more flagrant case for the talented railroad-wrecker. The real Dorsey is supposed to be interested in the contracts of J. M. Peck and J. S. Miner. J. T. Chidester, who has the Fort Worth route, is supported by Logan H. Roots, R. C. Kerns, J. D. Adams, of Memphis, and S. B. Elkins upon his bonds, and in Congress by Senator Maxey, Morey, of Mississippi, and Blackburn, of Kentucky. The firm of J. L. Sanderson & Co., contractors, are backed by Richard S. McCormick, of Arizona, Thurman's son-in-law, ex-Senator Chaffee, Congressman Page, and others. This firm includes A. McDevitt, C. W. Foster, G. W. Messerole, and S. S. Humbley, contractor. B. A. Peterson, the head of the Louisiana contractors, is supported by Congressman Ellis, ex-Congressman Sypher, a professional lobbyist, and Judge William Lilly, of this city. J. B. Price, of Jefferson City, has the support of the entire Missouri delegation. A. H. Brown is associated with A. S. Patrick, of Omaha, and is backed by ex-Gov. Thayer, of Wyoming. Chas. Andrews is a friend of Brady. A. J. Salisbury, F. W. Gilmer, Luke Voorhees, and Hugh White make up one firm backed by ex-Congressman McKibben, of California. The above includes all the favored contractors and their friends. Whatever investigation is made, it is doubtful whether any material for prosecution can be obtained. The law was loose, and left everything to Brady's sweet will. He had the technical right to spend thousands in place of hundreds, and he did it for the benefit of his friends. It is not the first or the last time such things have taken place in Washington, where there is a general conspiracy among all classes of officials to take every possible advantage of the government.

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS.

The excess of exports over imports of merchandise the twelve months ending March 31 is $243,445,889 excess of imports of gold and silver coin and bullion the same time, $75,943,799.

BOYTON'S RELEASE.

Mr. Blaine will soon open a correspondence with the British government with a view of obtaining from an English prison in Ireland Michael Boyton's release if possible. It is said that the evidence is conclusive in favor of Boyton, and that there is no doubt but that Mr. Blaine will be able to secure his release.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

The senate committee on foreign relations took up the resolution of Senator Morgan, which proposes to assert that consent of the United States government is a condition precedent to the construction of any interoceanic ship canal across the isthmus connecting North and South America. The committee referred the resolution of Senator Hunton and a subcommittee with instructions to examine and report upon the same to the full committee at an early day.

THE WORKINGMEN.

There is a quiet effort being made to organize a national representation of the workingmen's organization throughout the country, in order that all may be put in communication, and act in concert in endeavoring to obtain an increase of wages this summer. It is claimed by those purporting to represent the workingmen's organization that corporations and employers are making more money than heretofore, but will not increase wages; that working men intend to demand an increase, and that a general strike may occur this year.

BANKRUPTCY LEGISLATION.

The sub-Judiciary Committee on Bankruptcy—Ingalls, McMillan and Garland—will soon address letters to gentlemen familiar with the subject, with a view to ascertaining whether it is the opinion of the business interests of the country another national bankruptcy law should be enacted; secondly, to invite practical suggestions as to the best methods of remedying the acknowledged defects in former laws, relative to delay in the distribution of estates, and the consumption of assets in extravagant fees and costs. The sub-committee are expected to report some measure to the full committee early in December.

THE UTE TROUBLES.

The statements telegraphed hence to the effect that war with the Ute Indians is imminent, and that troops had been concentrated at certain points in order to be available at short notice, is pronounced at army headquarters to be without any foundation in fact. The last advices from the Ute country show that the Indians are peaceful, and show no indication of a disposition to make trouble. The changes recently made in a few detachments of troops is nothing more than is usual in early spring of each year for sanitary purposes. Information received at the Indian Office is to the same effect.

DORSEY'S LETTER TO JAMES.

WASHINGTON, April 31.—To Hon. THOMAS JAMES, Postmaster General—Sir: You do not need to be informed that for many days past the newspaper press of the country has teemed with telegraphic dispatches from Washington charging frauds in the postoffice department, and in them I have been made a conspicuous mark for the shafts of assailants. The authors of this sensation profess to speak in all this of matters discovered in the department since your entry there. If any charge made against me were true, those who made it would be able to produce some evidence to sustain it. It is upon this point I address you this letter. I make no complaint that you have not, up to this time, deemed it proper to deny the published statements which make the charges alluded to appear as if they were the result of an investigation by you, but I claim as a right that with me, and whomever I may bring to you, you make such investigation as to every contract with which my name has been connected as will enable you to give me in writing the true status of each case. I have to ask that this request be granted at once, in order that I may not rest under injurious and unjust imputations, which are unnecessarily disturbed from other quarters, and which are injurious to my business and my business interests. Very respectfully, etc. W. DORSEY.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Dynamite has entered from an Austrian factory thirty-five thousand rifles and ten thousand cartridges.

Dillon warns the government that wholesale arrests cannot be effected in Ireland without armed resistance.

A man named Russell and five other foreigners have been expelled from Roumania on suspicion of being nihilists.

The nihilists have advised the czar that the bells that announced the execution of the assassins only were silent, that their ranks were already thinned.

By the bursting of a shell on board the German training ship Mars, at Wilhelmshaven, two officers and four sailors were killed and a lieutenant and other persons injured.

A sentence of imprisonment for life has been imposed upon the Russian Grand Duke Nicholas, his complicity in nihilistic plots having been clearly established.

Germany, while evincing no partiality for a mixed standard, is investigating as to the practicability of fixing the price of silver for a term of years, to enable her to sell her superfluous coin.

General Brill, at one time an aide-de-camp to Don Carlos, has been arrested at Madrid in consequence of legal proceedings being commenced in Cuba.

Lord Beaconsfield's funeral took place at Hughenden on Tuesday in the presence of large numbers of people of all classes of society. The Queen and Princess of Wales, among others, sent wreaths to be placed upon the coffin. At the hour appointed for the funeral the church bells were tolled in all the principal cities and towns in England.

Definite arrangements for the cession of territory to Greece have been made at Constantinople, and approved by the foreign ambassadors. Ordinary war material will be removed in three months, but six months will be allowed to carry away heavy guns. Thessaly will be first surrendered. An international military commission will superintend the evacuation.

In the house of commons, Tuesday evening, when Bradlaugh advanced to the speaker's table to be sworn, Northcote entered an objection, and moved that he be not allowed to take the oath. This was carried, after a spirited debate, by 208 to 175. John Bright defended Bradlaugh's right, as the latter had declared that the oath would be binding on his conscience. Bright afterward advised Bradlaugh to retire, which he refused to do and he was removed to the bar by the sergeant-at-arms.

A correspondent at St. Petersburg dwells with emphasis upon the gravity of the situation in Russia, and the need of a steady hand at the helm. He says it required nothing less than the recent tragedy to open men's eyes to the fact that the reforms demanded by the people must not long be delayed. If the women of Russia, who are superior to the men in intelligence, should venture to formulate their desires, they would repeat the commands contained in the last proclamation of the famous executive committee. He adds that the distinction between Russian intelligence and the revolutionary party lies not in the end, but in the means to bring about that end. The people are awakening to a sense of their rights and wrongs and something must be done quickly. Meanwhile the Emperor lives in retirement, seeing nobody but Prince Varontoff Donahkoff, and the country is virtually without a government.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

BROOKLYN.

Every year develops some new wants, and the chief need here is an extension of Webster's unabridged.—A supplement containing new swears would be thankfully received and perhaps paid for if there is money enough left after paying the bills of the first of May party.

I told you before that some of our delicately organized citizens had become martyrs to nerves, and it is but fair to tell the reason why. For the past two years our village has borne an unenviable reputation for rowdyism. If anything especially disgraceful happened, within a radius of ten miles, it was charged to the B. account and for fear of clinching guess work with certainty few cared to investigate.

As we had four church members who talk beautifully for temperance in the village Council, and the President is known to be in favor of order, the first of May was deemed a propitious time to ask a change from bad to better. A petition, bearing the signatures of fifty-eight of the best men in the place and the names of ninty-eight ladies, who thought they had some interest also, was duly presented and met with, some think, a cool; others say, a warm reception.

The request was to have the sale of liquor limited, in conformity to the existing state law, that the bonds be increased to five thousand dollars and bondsmen be residents of this village. President Sherman, Doctor Jones and Mr. G. Strenahan voted for it, but the other two, well, they didn't, that's all. The bonds were finally changed from two to three thousand.

By the fuss made one can't help thinking that victory is sometimes more disgraceful than defeat. Phials of wrath are poured on the heads of the ladies without stint.

As yet only Teachout and Miller have procured bondsmen. Sheridan is considering the case. Nearly all the men of the place whose opinion he respects have condemned the business he is engaged in, and besides he has never pretended there was any respectability stamped on the traffic, except what law could confer. The fourth is only puzzling his head about where to find his nurses. Of the four engaged, one is the son of a Hillsdale clergyman, one an ex-senator, another a farmer, and the last a miller, who report says could not balance the cash scales if weighed.

The lack of opportunity to commit sin is sometimes an aid of goodness, and the offending ladies think if these men had declined to lend their influence to the wrong side as firmly as they did the right, that one lady they know of might have had wood enough to make one fire within the past six weeks.

Mr. Griffith tested the sharpness of the mill saw on his hand yesterday.—The blade was in good order, but his fingers require a great deal of fixing.

The rite of baptism was administered by Rev. Lyon at Clark's lake today. There must have been a large attendance, for many passed here, but I did not hear the number baptized.

PEARLIE.

ADDISON.

The reorganization of the Sabbath school at the Friends' church is postponed one week.

The spring stock of warm weather just received places straw hats and fans in demand.

Mr. Josiah Doty, of Litchfield, was in town visiting friends Sunday. Mr. D. was formerly with Smith Bros., of this place, and hosts of friends greeted his call with demonstrations of pleasure.

Mrs. W. Bissell, of Jackson, was in town a few days since. Her stay seemed to renew the memory of her late lamented husband, W. W. Bissell, so much esteemed by all who knew him here.

The old friends of Mr. Frank Millis may be pleased to learn that he will retain the principalship of the public schools at Dryden, this state, another year, also that he has taken up the study of law with a view of following the profession.

We take pleasure in announcing to the stock breeders of the county that Mr. Arthur Underwood, of this place, has just added two fine thoroughbred Holstein cows to his already complete herd of imported stock. The specimens referred to are a part of a car load with which Mr. U. has just returned from New York state; weigh about 1600 lbs. each, and fitly address the breed to the attention of parties desiring to improve their stock.

RIDGEWAY.

The funeral of the late Robert Stuart took place at the M. E. church on Monday. The remains were interred in the cemetery at Tecumseh.

Jay J. Lowe died on Sunday. The funeral took place on Tuesday at ten o'clock A. M. This is the third death in the Lowe family within a short period, the other two being sisters of the deceased.

In our hurry last week we forgot to mention the burning of John Boyd's barn in Macon, 1½ miles north of this village on the Ridge road. The barn was completely destroyed, together with a quantity of wheat, a reaper and other farming tools. Insured in the "Farmers."

The first annual shearing festival of the "Ridgeway Sheep Breeders and Wool Growers," was held at John Britton's on Thursday, May 5, and despite the drizzling rain, was well attended. There were 46 head of sheep on exhibition, including some of the finest in the county, 21 of which were clipped. The following will show the result:

The four yearling ewes exhibited by Mr. Morsman were purchased by J. Britton & Son.

At a subsequent meeting held at the Red school house on the evening of the 7th, the following officers were elected: President, I. N. Pilbeam; Secretary, William Britton; Treasurer, Wm. Underwood. W. Britton, C. R. DuBois and S. J. Smith were named as committee on rules and regulations.

A. E. Palmer and wife are in the village.

Dan Allen drew five hundred in the Advertiser distribution.

John VanVleet is rebuilding and enlarging his barn.

Two more cases of small pox in "Dutch Town."

ROME.

Although it is warm and getting very dry vegetation looks well.

A new firm under the name of Bates & Bates is about to be started.—Porter's cousin Phil. has bought in. Success to them.

The school of this place "opened up in good shape" on Monday last, with Miss Petis as teacher. Thirty-five pupils present.

The school house just east of here is being thoroughly renovated and repaired; new seats, new floor, new ceiling, new painting.

Geo. M. Alexander, of Napoleon, visits this place every Wednesday and gives lessons on the piano and organ.

Our landlord had quite a narrow escape while in Adrian last week. His span of colts became frightened and broke loose, running up Main street, throwing out everything in the wagon and doing but little damage. Some thought it due to his new ten-pound boy, but he says "No", it being some fault of the hitch strap.

THE TWO LIGHTS.

"When I'm a man," is the poetry of youth.
"When I was young," is the poetry of old age.

"When I'm a man," the stripling cries,
And strives the coming year to scan.
"Ah, then, I shall be strong and wise,
When I'm a man!"

"When I was young," the old man sighs.
"Bravely the lark and the linnet sang
Their cheerful under-sunny skies,
When I was young!"

"When I'm a man, I shall be free
To guard the right, the truth upheld."
"When I was young I bent no knee
To power or gold."

"Then I shall I satisfy my soul
With yonder prize, when I'm a man."
"Too late I found how vain the goal
To which I ran."

"When I'm a man, these idle toys
Aside forever shall be flung."
"These were the poison-honey joys
When I was young."

The boy's bright dream is all before
The man's romance lies far behind!
Had we the present and no more,
Fate were unkind.

But, brother, toiling in the night,
Still count yourself not all unblest
If in the east there gleams a light,
Or in the west.

Farming that Don't Pay.

It don't pay to be caught in the spring without a wood pile large enough to last twelve months; or to open the gates and let your stock into the fields as soon as a few bare spots appear; or to keep it on short rations, so that when it does go to grass it will take half the summer to get thrifty and strong.

It don't pay to leave the work of mending your tools and selecting and securing your seed until the day you want to use them, thereby causing costly delay.

It don't pay to sow or plant poor seed because you happen to have it on hand.

It don't pay to plant more ground than you can manure and take good care of.

It don't pay to leave weak places in the fence, in the hope that the cattle won't find them; and if you keep sheep, it don't pay to let them run loose in the spring until they become [illegible] and cannot be kept at home by an ordinary fence.

It don't pay to [illegible] cows, ewes or sows at the time they are dropping their young.

It don't pay to let the spring rains wash the value out of the manure that has accumulated in the barn-yard during the past winter.

It don't pay to let the hens lay under the barn and be eaten up by the skunks.

It don't pay to put off any kind of spring work until the last moment, nor does it pay to work land when it is too wet.

It don't pay to leave turnips, cabbages, beets or even apples in the cellar to rot and breed disease; for if you have more than you can eat or sell, the stock will be profited by them.

It don't pay to summer a poor cow simply because no one will buy her.

It don't pay to sell a heifer calf from your best cow to the butcher, simply because it will cost more to raise it than you can buy a scrub for next fall.

It don't pay to keep the banking around the house until it rots the sills.

It don't pay to be stingy in sowing grass seed, or to try to live without a garden.

Finally, it don't pay to provoke the women by leaving them to cut the stove wood or to carry it from the door-yard or to remind you every morning in haying or mowing that you must saw enough before you go to work to last the day through.

Bible Study.

Nothing is more common than to hear the Bible extolled, and yet there is reason to fear that it is greatly neglected. The number of copies which have been printed during this century is enormous, and the books printed in elucidation of it are innumerable. Nevertheless, Christians generally read the Bible far too little, and if they felt it of the importance they profess, they would undoubtedly be far better acquainted with it.

Old members of churches show oftentimes a remarkable ignorance of important passages in it, and probably many a minister who can give a satisfactory compend of its doctrines, would be greatly humiliated if called upon to give any careful analysis of the special burden of some one epistle.

The Bible is really the school-book of the church. The Christian is a disciple, a learner, and the book is given him that he may acquire knowledge to the school of Christ. It is a grand description which is given of a saint of apostolic times, that he was an "old disciple." There is ever something new to learn, and the Christian who is most advanced in years, if willing to learn, can constantly discover truths which he has heretofore overlooked, or failed to properly appreciate.

Many church members, it is to be feared, scarcely ever read the Bible, and except as their knowledge of Christian truth is enlarged by church services, they have made no progress in years. Yet truth is presented to us as the appointed means for our guidance in this life, and for our attaining preparedness for the life to come. We are to be sanctified by the truth, and by the truth we are to grow up into Christ in all things. A Christian character of real power can never exist apart from careful meditation on God's Word. There is need of a stronger, more robust Christian life, and the only means by which it can be secured is by Christians drawing supplies from the Word. "I have written unto you, young men," said the Apostle John, "because you are strong, and the Word of God abideth in you."

Let, then, every Christian reader consider whether he ought not and cannot give more time to the study of the Word of God. A well-formed plan, which, if resolutely adhered to, for the daily study of God's Word, would give us speedily a vast accession to the moral power of the churches.

A Patent Milk Pail.

The home of Mr. Gosman, in Orange county, lies in the track of the summer peddler, and is constantly visited by them. Mr. Gosman is a respectable milk dealer, who, with the help of thirty-seven cows, sends a very large quantity of milk to the market. Though, during the six months from the 1st of May to the 1st of November, an average number of five peddlers and two-thirds called on him with articles for sale, he rarely buys anything. Still, being a kind-hearted and just man, he never drives the peddler from his door with violence, and it is only when he is unusually busy that he sets the dogs on an intrusive peddler, or reminds Mrs. Gosman to throw boiling water on him. There was, nevertheless, one peddler whom Mr. Gosman rather liked. He was a pleasant-faced and cheerful fellow, who never descended to anything as low as lightning-rods or as exasperating as subscription books, but who occasionally offered for sale articles that were not wholly useless, and who always dealt liberally and fairly with his customers. For example, he once sold to a neighbor of Mr. Gosman a small monkey wrench, and when the purchaser objected that he never had any monkeys to wrench with it, the peddler offered to procure for him a gross of monkeys of the proper size, at the wholsale price. It is true that the offer was not accepted, but that it was made is a proof of the peddler's anxiety to please his patrons.

One day last October this comparatively tolerable peddler made his last visit for the season to Mr. Gosman's house and was permitted to engage in conversation with the owner thereof. It so happened that Mr. Gosman, who always milked his own cows, was at that precise time in an unusually gloomy condition. He had that very morning witnessed the loss of seven pailfuls of milk, which had been kicked over by depraved cows, and he felt the loss severely. The peddler, seeing his opportunity, produced from his wagon a patent milk-pail, which he said he had invented himself, with an especial eye to Mr. Gosman's cows. It was certainly a most ingenious contrivance. The bottom was a seat, thus doing away with the old-fashioned milking-stool. The peddler lectured on this invention at some length, showing that it would be impossible for any cow to kick over a pail on which Mr. Gosman—who weighed 212 pounds—was seated. The result was that he sold his pail, and Mr. Gosman was so pleased with it that he ordered six more, to be delivered at the earliest opportunity.

The next morning the pail was put in use. Mr. Gosman expected it, sat on it, and milked seven susceptive cows with perfect satisfaction to himself. The eighth cow was an animal of much promise, who had kicked over a score of pails in her day, besides several milkers. Mr. Gosman approached her, smiling as he thought how completely the new pail would thwart her wicked designs. He sat down on the pail and filled it nearly half full of milk without an accident. At last, however the cow kicked she saw her opportunity, and so, after demonstrating Mr. Gosman by switching her tail in his eyes, she dealt the pail a tremendous kick. Unhappily, her hoof hit the very spring that kept the pail expanded. Without a moment's warning the cover of the pail sank under Mr. Gosman's weight, while the sides clasped him with an inexorable grasp. Being thus firmly held, he was danced upon to some extent by the infurious cow, and when her enthusiasm cooled and he gathered himself up, he was ready to go home and relect, in the seclusion of his room, on the merits of the milk-pail. That diabolical machine could not be induced to release him and as he walked slowly homeward he exercised a good deal of speculation, it being the opinion of most people who saw him, that he was on his way to advise the editor of the local newspaper how to conduct his journal and that wisely.

Also 125 acre farm 11 miles west of river road from Deerfield. Also 160 acre farm and 90 acre farm, and 20 acre farm in Riga, any of which are decided bargains, and good reasons given for naming low prices.

Every purchaser of Lands should insist on being furnished an abstract of title, for our experience of more than 20 years shows that not more than one title in ten is perfect of record, and every week purchases agreed upon are abandoned owing to imperfections of title. Paper Collars.

As near as can be ascertained from the most reliable estimates attainable, not far from 150,000,000 of paper collars, or rather cloth-faced paper collars—for no other kind than this latter is now made or called for—are annually manufactured in the United States.

The quantity of paper now used annually in the manufacture of paper collars amounts to about 2,000 tons. In 1877 10,000,000 yards of cotton cloth were required in this industry; in 1877, 7,000,000 yards; in 1878, 6,500,000 yards; in 1879, 6,500,000 yards for the first ten months of the year.

The valuable patents on paper collars proper have all expired by limitation and have not been renewed, the patents of any value in connection with the business now being on the machines now used in the manufacture of the collars almost every manufacturer having peculiar machinery of its own.—Paper World

Saturday Night.

Saturday night makes people more human, and sets their hearts to beating softly, as they used to before the world turned them into war drums and jarred them to pieces with tattoos. The ledger closes with a crash, the iron-doored vault comes to with a bang, up go the shutters with a will, click goes the key in the lock. It is Saturday night, and business breathes free again. Homeward ho! The door that has been ajar all the week gently closes behind him; the world is all shut out. Shut out? Shut in rather. Here are his treasures after all, and not in the vault and not in the book—save the record of the old family Bible—and not in the bank. Maybe you are a bachelor, frosty and forty. Then, poor fellow, Saturday night is nothing to you, just as you are nothing to anybody. Get a wife, blue-eyed or black-eyed, but above all true-eyed. Get a little house, no matter how little; a sofa, to hold two or two and a half, then get two or two and a half in it of a Saturday night, read this paragraph by the light of your wife's eyes, thank God and take courage.

Avoid boisterous talk or rowdy conduct on the street.

When desperate its demand a speedy cure, distrust is cowardice and prudence folly.

It requires as much reflection and wisdom to know what is not to be put into a sermon as what is.

He who feels contempt for any living thing hath faculties that he hath never used, and thought with him is in its infancy.

Beauty attracts men, but if like an armed magnet, it is pointed with gold or silver besides, it attracts with tenfold power.

To love in order to be loved in return, is man; but to love, for the pure sake of loving is almost the characteristic of an angel.

The integrity of the heart when it is strengthened by reason is the principal source of justice and wit; an honest man thinks nearly always justly.

Kindness is the music of good will to men, and on the harp the smallest fingers may play heaven's sweetest tunes on earth

Beautiful lives have grown up from the darkest places, as pure white lilies full of fragrance have blossomed on stagnant, slimy waters.

Why is a dog's tail a great novelty? Because no one ever saw it before.

Why are bald-headed men in danger of dying? Because death loves a shining mark.

We are sowing seeds of truth or error every day we live and everywhere we go, that will take root in somebody's life.

Our striving against nature is like holding a weathercock with one's hand; as soon as the force is taken off it veers again with the wind.

Men say they can leave off this habit or that any time they bring to bear the pressure of their will against it; but would it not be better to apply that force against the formation of bad habits?

Man too easily cheats himself with taking repentance for reformation, resolutions for actions, blossoms for fruit, as on the naked twig of the fig-tree fruits sprout forth which are only the fleshy rinds of the blossom.

A gentleman learned in the origin of social customs was asked the origin of throwing an old shoe after a newly-married couple as they started on their trip. Said he, "To indicate that the chances of happiness in matrimony are very slippery."

In general, pride is at the bottom of all great mistakes. All the other passions do occasional good, but wherever pride puts in its word, everything goes wrong, and what might be desirable to do quietly and innocently, it is moralily dangerous to do proudly.

To Boys And Girls.

Always come to the table with cleaned face and hands and combed hair. Boys of poor parents as well as rich can observe this rule.

When at the table don't commence eating till all the table are waited upon.

When at the table don't talk with food in your mouth, nor engage in controversy with any one. Food will do you more good if you are good natured while eating.

Take time to masticate your food. To swallow food whole, or nearly so, or wash it down the throat, is impolite and injurious to health.

If obliged to leave the table before the family have finished their meal, always ask permission to do so.

Before leaving the table after a meal, put your cup in the saucer and tea-spoon into the cup. Put the knife and fork into the plate and fold the napkin neatly.

Retire early at night, and, if possible, get eight hours' sleep. Very small boys need that amount of sleep to promote physical growth and health.

When you call at a neighbor's house always take off your hat on entering it, and do the same at your own house. It is impolite to sit down in the house with your hat on.

Show proper respect to people older than yourselves, for by so doing you will gain the respect of people who are polite and sensible.

When two people are engaged in conversation, never listen to hear what they say, nor break in on their conversation. It is very impolite to do that.

Children of One Father.

A touching incident occurred the other day in one of the great hospitals in New York. A young man was brought into it seriously injured by a fall from a horse. He lingered two or three days, during which time the matron read from the Bible to him, talked to him—in short tried as best she could to fill the place of his dead mother to the lad.

One day, feeling that he was fast sinking, he asked for a clergyman. One was brought quickly, a young man, the pastor of a neighboring Baptist church. As he took the boy's hands in his, and spoke to him earnestly of Christ's love, several pale faces were raised from the rows of beds that lined the ward on either side, listening attentively, many of them with eyes wet with tears.

"Lord, I believe!" whispered the dying man. Then the clergyman knelt, praying that God might receive the soul of his departing brother. At the bed side also knelt the Episcopalian matron, two Roman Catholic Sisters of Mercy, and from the beds of the patients came hearty Methodist amens!

When the little company rose from their knees and looked down upon the calm dead face, they did not remember that they belonged to different sects. They were all children of one Father, and he was very near.

When seven men imprisoned in a Pennsylvania coal mine were rescued after five days' imprisonment, they were asked if they hoped to escape?

"We prayed for it" was the reverent reply. "We prayed together. Some were Protestants, and some Catholics, but when death is as close as that, you only think of God."

Man's Noblest Work.

This is an age of great works and wonderful inventions. Steam, electricity, water, air, all are made to serve man, but unquestionably the greatest inventions are those which preserve man's health and prolong his life, and among the greatest of these is Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Its effects are truly wonderful and hundreds are happy to day, who looked forward to an early grave. For Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, loss of voice, Hay Fever, Hoarseness, Croup, or any affection whatever of the Throat, Chest or Lungs, Dr. King's New Discovery will positively cure. We can cheerfully recommend it to all, and can unhesitatingly say it is the only sure cure for Throat and Lung affections. Trial bottles ten cents; regular size $1. For sale by C. A. Wright & Co., Tecumseh.

How to Prevent Sneezing.—How to prevent sneezing was the subject of several communications in the New York Sun recently. One correspondent says that if a person desires to avoid sneezing, let him press upward—from underneath—the nasal cartilage. To do this elegantly use the mouchoir, and press with considerable force. This is the method adopted by duck hunters when lying in the marshes, if their proximity to the water gives them an inclination to sneeze, since the least noise would frighten away the ducks. Another writer, who is an old soldier, says that the easiest way to stop an inclination to sneeze without attracting any attention is to press the tongue as far back against the roof of the mouth as possible for a few seconds. It is a never-failing remedy.

"We know the value of malt, hops, calisaya and iron composing 'Malt Bitters.'"

"Our best people take Malt Bitters."

"Sure cure for chills and liver diseases."

An old turkey raiser gives the following experiment: four turkeys were fed on meal, boiled potatoes and oats. Four others of the same brood also, at the same time, were confined in another pen and fed daily on the same article, but with one pint of very finely pulverized charcoal mixed daily with their food—mixed meal and boiled potatoes. They had also a plentiful supply of charcoal in their pen. The eight were killed on the same day, and there was a difference of one and one half pounds each in favor of the fowls which had been supplied with charcoal, they being much the fattest, and the meat being greatly superior in point of tenderness and flavor.

"Oh, he'd lose anything," old Mr. Meredith, of West hill, growled, when the boy came back from an errand and said he lost the package intrusted to him: "he'd lose anything. One day last week I sent him to take a pickle barrel to a customer, and before he got the barrel to the house, I hope to die if he didn't lose the bung-hole clear out of it, and I had to send for a cooper to put in a new one." —Burdette.

Constipation invariably follows Liver Complaint; but is easily overcome by the timely use of Baxter's Mandrake Bitters. Dyspepsia also readily yields to this potent remedy.

After all, a gentle purgative is the best means of curing headache, liver complaint, biliousness, &c. Use "Seller's Liver Pills."

THE SYMPTOMS

of Liver Complaint are a bitter or a bad taste in the mouth; Pain in the Back, Sides or Joints, often mistaken for Rheumatism, Sour Stomach, Loss of Appetite, Bowels alternately costive and loose, Headache, Loss of memory, with a painful sensation of having failed to do something which ought to have been done, Debility, Low Spirits, a thick yellow appearance of the Skin and Eyes, a dry Cough often mistaken for Consumption.

Sometimes many of these symptoms attend the disease, at others very few; but the Liver, the largest organ in the body, is generally the seat of disease, and if not Regulated in time, great suffering, wretchedness and death will ensue.
